HERE IS CHANCE TO PLAY SANTA TO AILING YANK

Clip Coupon, Get a Name, Mail Gift

BY HARRY McCLAIN

Once more readers of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE have an opportunity to express their appreciation to the wounded and sick fighting men who helped to win a war for them and the nation.

Today THE TRIBUNE opens its 1945 campaign for Christmas Gifts for Service Men in Hospitals.

Conducted as part of the four year old service to military personnel and their dependents by The Tribune's Friend of the Yanks, the Christmas gift program is undertaken for the third time.

Need Greater This Year

The need for the Christmas gift program this year is even greater than in previous years. There are many more patients in the hospitals than last year when readers in 27 states sent 24,000 gifts and had requested 44,000 names.

A survey of the hospitals just completed by the Friend of the Yanks indicates that since the fighting stopped in Europe and the Pacific many groups and organizations formerly active in hospital welfare no longer exist.

The fighting has not stopped for the hospital patients. They must continue to show their courage daily in their fight to regain health. For some it will take many weeks; for others, many long months.

Today there are 44,780 patients on the rolls of 21 military hospitals in 10 middlewestern states. This is an increase of 20,000 over 1944.

Method to Get Name

Effort will be made this year, with the coöperation of Tribune readers, to see that every patient in the 21 hospitals receives an individual gift.

Here is how you can obtain the name of a sick of wounded service man to whom you may send a personal gift and a word of cheer: Clip the coupon on page 2 of today's TRIBUNE, fill in the number of men to whom you desire to send a Christmas gift, and mail with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Friend of the Yanks, Chicago Tribune, 435 N. Michigan av., Chicago 11, Ill.

During the first week in December THE TRIBUNE will mail to all readers who make request slips containing individual names of hospital patients, with the name of the hospital and address printed thereon. The lower portion of the slip, which is detachable, contains a list of gift items on which the patient will have indicated a preference, or if no preference is indicated may have offered suggestions to the sender.

Lift Correspondence Bars

The upper portion of the slip, in Christmas colors, is designed for pasting on the Christmas package as a shipping label.

In previous years military security required that readers participating in THE TRIBUNE'S Christmas gift program and recipients of the gifts refrain from correspondence, except that the patients were per-

Citizen Cops of Maywood Rule for Day

W. O. Freeman

Ray F. Davies doesn't have a brogue. But he was as proud as any Irish cop with the name O'Hara, Flynn, or O'Malley last night as he and his reserve Maywood police force of dentists, railroad executives and other business men became policemen for a day.

At 4 p. m. the reserve force, trained as regular policemen and given supplementary instruction by the FBI, took over the jobs of the regular Maywood police staff. In the briefing room of the Maywood village hall, reserve Lt. Al Boerman, also plant manager of the National Biscuit company, checked the guns and night sticks of the first shift. Traffic tickets given by the group were to be marked for court appearance at 7 p. m. tomorrow so the business men policemen could appear.

Six Months Practice

The reserve group of 75, which originated as an office of civilian defense organization in 1941 and was recognized by the village last December, had been practicing for their one night stand at the village police station for the last six months. One night each week they attended training classes given by the federal bureau of investigation and another night weekly, they supplemented the regular police staff.

Their training showed the first time the desk man's call buzzer rang.

The anonymous telephoner reported a man "dead or drunk" in an alley. With swift precision, the desk sergeant radioded one of three squad cars in the 500 block area. Six minutes later came the report that the man, a World War I. veteran, had suffered a heart attack and was en route to Hines hospital.

Their Work Efficient

Fire calls and reports of prowlers were handled in the same efficient manner under the guidance of Davies and acting Police Commissioner David W. Owen, general frate and passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Both Davies and Acting Police Commissioner Owen put in a 24 hour shift supervising the work of the three individual eight hour groups.

Biggest worry of all the reserve policemen was that they would be taken for "cop and robber" actors in their 24-hour jobs. Davies emphasized that the training of the men was "sometimes better and most always more intense" then that of even big town policeman.

"W. O. Freeman, Maywood's regular chief of police, made only a telephone call to the station to supplement a note of 24 hour resignation left on his deck for Chief Davies. He was going to the dentist, he told Davies over the telephone.

Chief Davies said members of the reserve receive the same pay as the regular force under the village act recognizing the reserve group. Uniforms for the reserves were purchased by Maywood business men.

BRITISH EXHIBIT MARKED DISLIKE FOR U. S. THINGS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 3—Now that the war is over the British are exhibiting a marked distaste for things American.

The latest manifestation of British nationalism came in a protest to Prime Minister Attlee against American songs being sung on British Broadcasting corporation programs. It was made by W. E. Veness, secretary of the Association of Advancement for British Songs, who said it wasn't right—they ought to use more British songs. Veness asked Attlee to set up an impartial committee to select radio songs.

The World's Press News, a newspaper trade journal, has been carrying on a campaign against the publication of American fiction in British magazines.

The most bitter war against America is carried on by the movie critics who would not like any Hollywood production even if it were good. They let out such a scream of rage over the film "Objective Burma," that Warner Bros. withdrew it after a week despite long queues outside theaters clamoring to get in. The critics said this Hollywood version of one phase of the Burma campaign made it look as tho the Americans won the war.

French Yield 'Living Dead' to Yank Care

BY MEL MOST

CROUTOY, France, Nov. 3 (AP)—The first German prisoners of war returned to United States army control by the French have been classified as unfit to work by American medical authorities. From personal examination I can report that many of them look almost like corpses resurrected from the horror camps of their own fatherland.

The former German soldiers, who had been turned over to the French as laborers, are being taken back by the Americans under a project identified by the army code name "Operation Skinny." They were called back after International Red Cross charges that they were being treated below standards set by international convention.

The charges resulted in Gen. Eisenhower halting more transfers to the French and then agreeing to take back those unfit for labor. The French have insisted that most of them were returned in the same condition in which they had been received.

Beggar Army in Tatters

One group of 1,151 prisoners arrived yesterday. It was a beggar army of pale, thin men clad in vermin infested tatters. American sources say the men had been adequately fed, clothed, shod, and equipped with blankets when they were turned over to the French four months ago.

Associated Press Photographer Henry Griffin, who took pictures of the piled corpses in every German concentration camp from Buchenwald to Dachau, said:

"The only difference I can see between these men and those corpses is that here they're still breathing."

All said they had not eaten in two days. Four were brought in on stretchers. A few were hospitalized immediately and fed intravenously. The rest, after a light meal, filled out a questionnaire on their treatment by the French. Then they were deloused, given blankets, and assigned to winterized tents to await medical screening.

All Unfit to Work

This group followed two earlier batches totaling 1,323, bringing to 2,474 the number of Germans returned here for rehabilitation so they can be sent home. All the previous arrivals were unfit to work—three-quarters of them because of malnutrition. Medical officers said 19 per cent were severe cases requiring infirmary treatment.

Gen. De Gaulle has told Gen. Eisenhower that many French held prisoners were received in a "deplorable state." Many of the new arrivals have confirmed that they had been classed unfit to work from the start but previous groups said they had been worked in stone quarries, coal mines, farms, and cleanup details. Men in both categories said their condition worsened in French custody.

ARMY OPENS PX IN TOKYO WITH 500 SALESGIRLS

TOKYO, Nov. 3 (AP)—An army post exchange opened on the Ginza today, equipped to handle 10,000 customers daily. It will sell at GI prices souvenirs ranging from inexpensive ash trays to costly silks and art objects.

Five hundred kimono clad Japanese salesgirls were employed, schooled in how to speak English—including "no dates."

The Japanese mercantile system did a rush job of assembling the stock within a week. Col. Walter A. Metcalf, of the army exchange central purchasing office, expects a monthly business of several million dollars.

16 New B-29s Smashed, Put on Junk Heap

Wichita, Kas., Nov. 3 [Special]—The Wichita plant of the Boeing Aircraft company, where hundreds of B-29 Super Fortresses were manufactured during the war, today was the scene of the destruction of 16 of the huge planes, all nearly completed and valued at $8,000,000.

The destruction, which is said to have begun Wednesday on orders from Washington, was being carried on in the open, within view of the road skirting the plant.

Electric arc blow torches were used by workmen in cutting thru the sheet aluminum fuselages, and steel cables were attached to tractors to tear the planes into segments, observers said. Bulldozers were then used to crush the metal into compact form.

Protests Are Made

Boeing officials said they could make no statement on the destruction and that any information would have to come from the army. Maj. E. T. Cuttyback, executive officer for the army at the plant, said "surplus items and material of little value always are destroyed in aircraft plants when government contracts are terminated."

Reports were current here that local Boeing officials and army officers resisted a destruction order for 10 days before they began carrying it out. It was said army officials take the stand the B-29s are obsolete and that new types of bombers are now needed.

Verbal protests against the destruction came from hundreds of former Boeing employes as information concerning the junking of the planes spread thru the city. Four of the B-29s, it was said, were within one day of completion when work was halted on them, and all could have been completed within a week.

Called Wanton Waste

Max M. and Louise Levand, publishers of the Wichita Beacon, sent wires to President Truman and War Secretary Patterson protesting "wanton waste of the taxpayers' money."

"It's the most disheartening sight I've ever seen," said a Boeing guard. "It makes you wonder what it's all about."

The scrapping program at the Wichita plant follows the scrapping of $28,000,000 worth of Super Fortress materials and parts at the Boeing plant at Seattle, Wash.

Three U.S. Planes Missing in Europe; Fear 30 Dead

MUNICH, Germany, Nov. 3 (AP)—Three American C-47 transport planes from air bases near Munich have been missing for the past three days and are believed to have crashed with the loss of more than 30 lives. Two wrecked planes are reported to have been found in the mountains of northern Italy and a third near Stuttgart.

BRITISH EXPECT ALL OUT BATTLE WITH JAVANESE

Kept in Barracks at Soerabaja

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY

BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 3—Soerabaja, the big Dutch naval base port, is strictly enemy territory for allied troops. There is no shooting, but that is merely because the Indonesians have no one to shoot at. British troops remain within their perimeters. Any European or American walking thru the streets would have as much chance as if he jumped from the top of Tribune tower.

Altho some hope still is held that the present armed truce may grow into peace, the probability is far greater that Soerabaja is going to be the scene of an all out battle.

British troops caught in the Indonesian attacks at Soerabaja this week are all in favor of a fight, revenging the death of their brigadier killed by a mob and their own humiliation at being evacuated to the docks as defeated prisoners.

Have 100,000 Men

British intelligence officers reported a major general had appeared at Jogjakarta to lead and reorganize Indonesian youths estimated to number 100,000, who possess captured Japanese arms and equipment, including machine guns, tanks, mortars, and armored cars. The Nationalists have 62 Jap planes.

Despite the truce, barricades are increasing along the streets instead of being removed, and the streets are full of men, almost all armed with rifle, tommygun, or spear.

More British Landed

The British commanders at Soerabaja still are attempting to learn the casualties from the fighting early this week. Forty British and Indian officers and men are known dead and 110 injured. But about 200 more are missing, as well as 17 truckloads of women and children ambushed by a mob when the shooting started Sunday.

The British 5th division began landing at Soerabaja today, but, as with the tanks which arrived Thursday, the troops are being held in the dock area. A big effort now is being directed at evacuating the rest of the Dutch civilians south of the city and recovering British troops captured while on errands about the city.

Mob Spirit Prevails

Altho Dr. Soekarno, Indonesian president, and other national leaders are apparently sincere in trying to prevent further fighting in Soerabaja, they are finding it most difficult to quell the mob spirit. Statements from London and The Hague are not easing the situation.

British troops have orders to fight only to defend themselves or internees, yet Prime Minister Attlee issued a statement saying that the British have a moral obligation to the Dutch, which confuses the Indonesians and stirs their suspicions that the British are here to pave the way for the Dutch.

The latest inflammatory statement is one from The Hague rebuking Hubertus van Mook, lieutenant governor of the Indies, for reports that he had met with Soekarno. The blast from The Hague so upset the delicate discussions that Van Mook is reported to be considering resigning.

Magalang Is Quiet

Magalang, former resort city in mid-Java, is quiet after three days of Indonesian attacks on the hospitals where 2,000 former internees, mostly Dutch women and children, are recuperating from three years of imprisonment by the Japs.

Dr. Soekarno and the allied commander, British Brigadier Bethell, drove there from Semarang yesterday to attempt to carry out the terms of a truce reached at Semarang. There was intermittent shooting thruout the day and when Soekarno and Bethell arrived, the Indonesians still had the hospitals surrounded with machine guns and riflemen.

Under the terms of the truce the British will withdraw one company of Jap soldiers rushed to Magalang after being re-armed and replace them with British troops. The Indonesians agreed to clear the streets of all armed men except police.

British officers here learned that the attacks which began on the hos-

Hunt 12 More on Life Rafts in the Pacific

HONOLULU, Nov. 3 (AP)—At least seven persons were killed in the forced landing at sea of an army transport plane carrying 27 passengers and crewmen 450 miles east of Hawaii today, the army transport command announced tonight. Eight persons, including one of the two women passengers aboard the four engine land plane, have been rescued by surface vessels.

The remaining 12 were unaccounted for, but seven ships, including aircraft carriers, continued the search.

Bodies of the seven were recovered.

The eight reported rescued probably were on one of three life rafts observed near the scene by a search plane. The rafts became separated, but the transport came down only 50 miles from the regular route of patrol ships.

Two Women Aboard

A search plane, one of 10 dispatched to attempt rescue, reported it had spotted the rafts shortly after 1 p. m. with persons aboard them.

The ATC said the rafts could accommodate the 21 passengers, including a civilian woman and a WAC, and six crewmen of the Liberator type transport plane.

The transport was bound for the United States west coast when it was forced down at 7:40 a. m., more than four hours after it left Honolulu. The first rescue plane, which reached the scene an hour and a half later, radioed that the transport was still afloat and persons could be seen clinging to the wreckage.

Names Are Withheld

The ATC did not disclose names of the transport's passengers and crewmen, but it was believed all were military personnel, except the civilian woman. There was no announcement as to the cause of the forced landing.

Enough seaplanes have been dispatched to the area to accommodate 27 survivors, but rescue from the air will depend upon conditions of the sea, the ATC said.

JAP SUPER-SUBS BUILT TO BOMB PANAMA CANAL

YOKOSUKA, Japan, Nov. 4 [Sunday]—(AP)—Japan's two mammoth submarines, each equipped with three planes, were intended as carriers for the bombing of the Panama canal, the newspaper Mainichi said today. The only trouble with these "Jules Verne" war weapons was that they were impracticable, American and Japanese officers agreed.

Both submarines, now temporarily part of the United States navy, are of 5,700 tons, 400 feet long, with a claimed cruising range of 50,000 miles. When the undersea giants were captured they were carrying rice between Japan and Truk, Nippon's isolated Pacific naval base.

When the submarines were first introduced to United States occupation fleet units off Tokyo bay, the Japanese officers were asked what they had been doing. "We never sank anything, never bombed anything; we just cruised around," they replied.

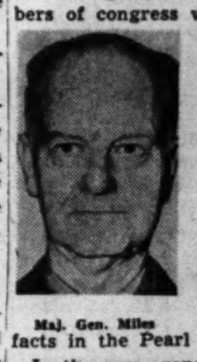
PEARL HARBOR 'COVER UP' BY ARMY CHARGED

2 Senators Accuse Marshall, Stimson

BY WALTER TROHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]



Maj. Gen. Miles

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3—Members of congress were up in arms today over sensational charges by Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] and Sen. Brewster [R., Me.] that Gen. Marshall, army chief of staff, and former War Secretary Stimson sought to suppress and distort facts in the Pearl Harbor disaster.

In the army report of its investigation into responsibility for Pearl Harbor, Gen. Marshall was blamed for failure to alert the Hawaiian command against the Jap attack. Stimson took sharp issue with the board, declaring the Marshall criticism was unjustified.

Sen. Ferguson said he had on his desk an affidavit from Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, chief of intelligence at the time of Pearl Harbor, stating that he had been ordered by Marshall not to give the army investigating board of three generals facts essential to their investigation.

Silence Ordered

The affidavit reads, with two words relating to secrets stricken by the senator, as follows:

"Concerning testimony I gave before the army Pearl Harbor board 8 August 1944, as corrected by my letter 18 August 1944, I wish to add that I avoided any statement concerning details of information and intelligence which I had derived from top secret sources then called . . . or any intimation that such sources existed.

"The reason I so limited my testimony was because prior to my appearance before the board, Brig. Gen. Russell A. Osmun and then Col. Carter W. Clarke of G-2 [now brigadier general in G-2, military intelligence] transmitted to me instructions from the chief of staff that I was not to disclose to the army Pearl Harbor board any facts concerning the . . . intelligence mentioned, or the existence of that form of information or intelligence in the period preceding the 7 December 1941. Accordingly, I have obeyed that instruction."

Stories Ordered Changed

The charge that facts were distorted by Stimson was made by Sen. Brewster. He had on his desk a memorandum which he said instructed an army officer to have Pearl Harbor witnesses change their stories in order to put the administration in a more favorable light.

Brewster named Maj. Henry C. Clausen, a reserve officer on duty in the judge advocate general's office, as the officer who had been sent around the world by Stimson to persuade key military personnel to repudiate the stories they had given the inquiry board.

Coöperation Asked

The memorandum, signed by Stimson, which is in Brewster's possession reads:

"Memorandum for the assistant chief of staff G-2.

"Subject: Pearl Harbor investigation.

"In connection with the recent report of the army Pearl Harbor board, a number of explored leads have suggested themselves which require investigation.

"You are directed to give Maj. Clausen access to all records, documents, and information in your division, whether secret or top secret nature, and to advise all officers of your division to afford Maj. Clausen the fullest possible coöperation.

"Inquiries made by Maj. Clausen should be answered fully and the persons interrogated should volunteer any information of which they may have knowledge concerning the subject of Maj. Clausen's inquiries.

"In addition, copies of any papers required by Maj. Clausen, whether secret or top secret, should be furnished him, any present directives to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Henry L. Stimson,
"Secretary of war."

Testimony Repudiated

Brewster emphasized that the directive gave Clausen greater access to records and witnesses than mem-

EXPECT TRUMAN TO APPROVE TAX REDUCTION BILL

Measure Calls for Cut of 5.9 Billions

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 [Special]—President Truman is expected to put his signature next week on the 5 billion 920 million dollar tax reduction bill, which has been on his desk since congress took final action on it Thursday.

The bill cuts the 1946 tax burden on business by 3 billion 136 million dollars and shaves individual income taxes by 2 billion 644 million dollars. It eliminates 12 million low salaried persons from the income tax rolls. Another 140 million dollars is saved to taxpayers by repeal of the use tax on cars and boats.

Altho the bill provides for a tax cut nearly a billion dollars more than the 5 billion dollar reduction recommended by the treasury department, indications are that the President will give it his approval. If he refrains from signing it, but does not veto it, the bill will become a law without his signature Nov. 13.

Repeal Excess Profits Tax

The outstanding feature of the bill from the standpoint of business is the outright repeal, effective Jan. 1, of the excess profits tax on corporations. This will account for a drop in revenue in 1946 of an estimated 2 billion 555 million dollars.

Congressional leaders say the removal of the excess profits tax will assist industry in reconversion and in keeping employment at a high level. The senate held out successfully for excess profits repeal against the original house measure that would have cut the rate from 85.5 per cent to 60 per cent.

Corporations with incomes under $50,000 a year will benefit from the new tax bill by a reduction of 4 percentage points in their combined normal and surtax rates. A reduction of 2 percentage points is granted to corporations with annual incomes of $50,000 or more. These changes are expected to reduce the corporate income tax bill by 347 million dollars.

Two More Savings

Another headache for business which will disappear is the capital stock tax and its complement, the declared value excess profits tax. The cash saving to business thru the repeal of these taxes is 234 million dollars.

Since the adoption of the capital stock tax and declared value excess profits tax in 1933, corporations have been required to guess and declare capital stock tax values, paying an excess tax if the declared value for a subsequent period proved to be less than 10 times the earnings.

Changes in the law regarding individual income taxes include placing the 3 per cent normal tax on the same exemption basis as the graduated surtax, a reduction of 3 percentage points in the surtax rate, and a further reduction in the combined normal and surtax of 5 per cent of the total.

The bill does not alter the war time excise taxes on jewelry, furs, liquor, long distance phone calls, train tickets, and theater admissions. These levies, under existing law, will expire six months after the formal proclamation of the end of hostilities.

7 FAULTS IN GIs' ARTIFICIAL LEGS, ARMS CHARGED

There are seven major faults in the artificial limbs now being supplied to the nation's veterans, according to Dr. Paul E. Klopsteg, director of research at the Technological Institute of Northwestern university and chairman of the Committee on Prosthetic Devices of the National Research council.

Dr. Klopsteg pointed out that artificial limbs now are of excessive weight, have a susceptibility to breakage, especially at the knee and ankle joints, and to moisture and water, which cause parts of the limbs to corrode and glued surfaces to come apart.

He said squeaky or noisy working parts often embarrass the wearers and clumsy arms and hands do not even approximate the appearance or action of the normal hand or arm. They have joint weaknesses, Dr. Klopsteg said, and the limb surfaces are hard and not "natural" to the touch.

The committee, organized last April at the request of the army surgeon general, has been engaged the last six months in the first fundamental over-all study of artificial limbs.

TABLE SHOWS HOW NEW TAX BILL CUTS SALARY DEDUCTIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—The table below shows the amounts of federal income tax that will be withheld from pay envelopes in 1946 under the 5 billion 920 million dollar tax reduction bill and compares them with tax money withheld this year. The bill is awaiting signature by President Truman. The table is based on one week pay roll periods. A single man ordinarily would claim one withholding exemption. A married couple two, and a man with wife and one child three exemptions, etc.

Higher Bracket Rules

The following rules govern when the wages or salary amount to more than $200 a week:

One withholding exemption claimed: New law—19 per cent of excess over $200, plus $34.90. Old law—22.5 per cent of excess over $200, plus $41.80.

Two withholding exemptions claimed: New law—19 per cent of excess over $200, plus $32.90. Old law—22.5 per cent of excess over $200, plus $39.70.

Three withholding exemptions claimed: New law—19 per cent of excess over $200, plus $30.90. Old law—22.5 per cent of excess over $200, plus $37.60.

The new tax law provides an income exemption of $500 for the taxpayer and each dependent, the same as the old law. A man with a wife and two children would be allowed an exemption of $2,000.

KENT TO SEEK FREEDOM WHILE AWAITING SHIP

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—The attorney for Tyler Kent, former American embassy code clerk, said tonight he would ask for a writ of habeas corpus next week to free Kent from detention as an undesirable alien. Kent was detained Oct. 4 to await deportation to the United States after he had completed a reduced seven year prison sentence for violation of the British official secrets act. His departure has been delayed by the British dock strike, the attorney said.

The lawyer, who asked that his name be withheld, said Kent wished to be free while awaiting passage and that while the British government's detention order was not illegal, "even so king's bench might review it."

Kent was convicted in November, 1940, on a charge of larceny of an embassy document and of communicating documents and materials which might be of value to the enemy. His seven year sentence was reduced for good behavior.

mitted to sign and mail a printed acknowledgment of his gift.

This year all security regulations, insofar as correspondence is concerned, have been lifted. Gift senders and patients may correspond freely.

For the convenience of Tribune readers and the hospital patients who receive their gifts, THE TRIBUNE this year will supply cards for inclosure in the Christmas package. On this card the sender need only write his name and address.

List of Hospitals

Upon receipt of the Christmas package the patient then may add his name and address and the indorsement "free" and mail the card without postage on the service man's free mailing privilege.

Army hospitals to which gifts will be sent this year include Gardiner and Vaughan in Chicago, Fort Sheridan, Mayo in Galesburg, and Percy Jones' three installations in Battle Creek and Fort Custer, Mich. These are in the 6th service command.

Hospitals in the 5th service command include Crile, near Cleveland; Fletcher, Cambridge, O.; Nichols, Louisville, Ky.; Fort Knox, Ky., and Wakeman in Camp Atterbury, Ind.

Those in the 7th service command include O'Reilly, Springfield, Mo.; Schick, Clinton, Ia.; Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.; Camp Crowder, Mo.; Fort Riley, Kas.; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Smoky Hill, Salina, Kas., and Lincoln, Neb.

General Praises Program

Hearty approval of THE TRIBUNE'S Christmas gift program for army hospitals has been given by Brig. Gen. Luther L. Hill, Washington, who recently was promoted and appointed director of public relations for the army.

Approval for inclusion of the navy's Great Lakes hospital for sailors and marines in the Christmas program has been given by Capt. H. W. Chambers, recently appointed commanding officer.

Evidence of the interest of Tribune readers in the Christmas Gifts for Service Men program and the pleasure they derive from making some one happy is indicated by letters already received.

Three weeks ago Robert Carley, Dodgeville, Wis., wrote to the Friend of the Yanks, saying: "If it is possible, please send me the names of 24 service men who are in hospitals within the United States. I wish to mail Christmas presents to them.

Gets Two Dozen Names

"I know you did work of this nature last year and hope you can help me. I inclose addressed, stamped envelope for reply."

Reader Carley's letter was followed a few days later by one from Stella I. Stitt, Beloit, Wis., who wrote: "If you have a Friend of the Yanks Christmas package program this year, will you kindly send me a name? I know this is a bit early, but I want to be included in it again this year."

Carley will get the first two dozen names to reach the Friend of the Yanks from any hospital this year. The next name will go to Miss Stitt as all requests will be filled in the order received.

Sheriff Mulcahy Gains After Attack of Sickness

Sheriff Mulcahy who has been confined to his bed since Tuesday with an attack of intestinal flu said yesterday he had improved considerably and hoped to be at his desk tomorrow morning. The sheriff became ill while inspecting the County jail. His physician, Dr. Thomas F. Doyle, said the rapid recovery was due to administering penicillin tablets.

SURVEY REVEALS NAVY SPLIT ON SERVICE MERGER

Half of Officers Are Favorable

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—A secret survey of army-navy opinion on the proposed service merger showed "almost exactly half" of the navy officers interviewed favoring the single department, it was disclosed today.

In the 10 months since completion of the study directed by the joint chiefs of staff, navy opposition to the proposal has solidified.

The report was supplied by President Truman to the senate military affairs committee, which is conducting hearings on the proposal to unify all military forces under a single department with army, navy, and air branches.

Opposed by Forrestal

Navy Secretary Forrestal, who is spearheading opposition to the merger, issued a statement tonight noting that the report was not adopted by the joint chiefs of staff.

Forrestal made public formal comments by Fleet Adm. King, who termed the report "disappointing." Forrestal said King's comment, with those of other members of the joint chiefs of staff, were attached to the report.

Adm. King said in his comment that "analysis of the report and of the transcripts of testimony of the various officers interviewed reveals what I consider lack of objectivity."

Minitz Changed View

Testimony of army and navy leaders upon which the report was based included an indorsement of the one department plan by Adm. Nimitz, made at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 8, 1941. On Thursday the navy made public a statement by Nimitz asserting "I find that now, as a combat commander, I cannot favor it." Adm. Halsey similarly reversed his stand on the proposal.

Forty army officers, 37 navy leaders, and three marine generals were interviewed by the staff group, made up of Lt. Gen. Harold L. George and Maj. Gen. W. F. Tompkins, army members; Rear Adm. M. F. Schoeffel and Adm. J. O. Richardson, retired, navy members, and Brig. Gen. F. Trubee Davison, army alternate.

Favored by Most Army Men

"The great majority of the army officers and almost exactly half of the navy officers whose views were heard favored the single department," said the majority report signed by all but Adm. Richardson. "Some difference of opinion was expressed as to the form it should take."

REPORT CONDON MAY GET ATOM ADVISORY POST

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—Edward U. Condon, 43, new director of the national bureau of standards, may be offered the post of chief scientific adviser to the senate atomic energy committee. He was confirmed by the senate only yesterday as director of the bureau of standards.

Sen. Milliken [R., Colo.] told a reporter today that Condon might join the committee's staff. Another authoritative source declared the list of prospective advisers had been winnowed down to Condon and that he will be tendered the appointment at a committee session Monday.

Condon is leaving the Westinghouse research laboratory at East Pittsburgh, Pa., to take the standards post. He succeeds Lyman J. Briggs, who retired.

The atomic committee will handle all legislation dealing with atomic power and its development and control. Its entire program awaits the naming of the technical aid. Members admit they know virtually nothing of nuclear physics or the workings of the atom. So they are looking for the strongest possible technical advice.

COL. M'CORMICK URGES A. P. FIGHT GO TO CONGRESS

Guarantee of Free Press Is Dead, He Says

Illinois members of the Associated Press, in Chicago yesterday for their annual meeting, cheered Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, when he said that he hoped the forthcoming national meeting of the A. P. membership would be a "peaceful assembly" under terms of the Constitution and would petition congress "to free us from the slavery the Supreme court has imposed on us."

The court's ruling last June 18 that the A. P. violated anti-trust laws thru its by-laws governing admission of new members "knocked out the Constitutional amendment guaranteeing freedom of the press," said Col. McCormick, "but it has not yet knocked out freedom of assembly for the redress of grievances."

He said he had two proposals to solve the problem created by the court's injunction against the A. P. directors—election of new members by the full A. P. membership or, if "it appears too cumbersome for the members, appoint a membership committee which will have no duties except to pass on applicants."

Suit Proposed by U. S. Lawyer

"While the board of directors is under compulsion it might happen that Sen. Guffey [D., Pa.] would want an Associated Press franchise for a paper in Pennsylvania, or Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] might want one for a paper in Wyoming. I would not want to serve as a director with the responsibility of admitting or excluding applicants under this injunction."

Col. McCormick sketched the history of the government's prosecution, which began, he said, when a department of justice lawyer called on his cousin, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington [D. C.] Times-Herald, and asked her to start suit against the A. P. for a franchise. She refused and the government was without a complainant until Marshall Field III. started the Chicago Sun, the speaker said.

Thurman Arnold, then head of the anti-trust division of the department of justice, told the directors of the A. P. that "if they didn't elect Field to membership he would indict them all for conspiracy to violate the anti-trust laws," said Col. McCormick. "They didn't scare. There was no indictment because it would have gone to a jury, and there is no telling what a jury will do.

Opinion Shows Lack of Knowledge

"The case went to a special court—an expediting court. There was no expediting. There were no witnesses. The court gave insufficient time. You can tell by reading the opinion that the court didn't know what it was writing about. It had no appreciation of the newspaper occupation."

Before discussing the Associated Press' standing with the Supreme court, which the membership will deal with at the special meeting to be held in New York Nov. 28, Col. McCormick told the Illinois editors of a trip he made thru the countryside last week. He and Mrs. McCormick started out to hunt birds, he said, but they soon decided that motoring was more pleasant than shooting. They visited the restored village of New Salem, where Abraham Lincoln kept store when he was a young man.

Benefited by Pilgrimage

"We looked thru the windows into the room where Lincoln studied law and we saw the ladder he climbed to go to bed," the speaker said. "That part of the pilgrimage did me a lot of good. I am going to New York in two weeks to talk on foreign policies, and I am going to tell them something."

The sight of well stocked farms "gave me a great feeling of security in a stormy world," he said. "We have educated ourselves to think of wealth as the kind Henry Ford has, but I suppose Henry Ford is a piker compared with the wealth we saw in three days' riding in Illinois."

Col. McCormick spoke at a luncheon in the Hotel Sherman given by him and THE TRIBUNE for the downstate editors. At a business session, also held in the Sherman, Robert H. Schaub of the Decatur Review was elected chairman of the Illinois A. P. editors.

HUNGARY VOTES TODAY; 'FIRST FREE ELECTION'

BUDAPEST, Nov. 3 (AP)—Hungarians will vote for parliamentary candidates tomorrow in what is expected to be the first free, secret national election in central Europe since the war's end. Approximately 3,000,000 of the country's 5,000,000 registered voters are expected to participate.

Hungary has a diplomatic stake in conducting a fair and orderly election. Political leaders believe it would hasten the resumption of full, normal diplomatic relations with the United States and Britain, matching Russia's recognition.

[The United States already has approved the appointment of Kladar de Szegedy-Maszak as Hungarian minister to Washington. However, this is still short of full normal United States recognition since Hungary is a former enemy state with which no peace treaty yet has been concluded.]

See Democratic Election

The quietness of the Hungarian campaign and the fact that Budapest held a free municipal election Oct. 7 gave promise that tomorrow's voting would be democratic.

Each of the country's major parties entered tickets. Regard for American and British public opinion caused political leaders to abandon an earlier proposal under which all parties would have agreed on a single slate of parliamentary candidates.

The Communist party is not united. Some party members who stayed in the country and fought in the underground refer scoffingly to leaders returning from 25 years of exile as "men from Moscow."

The smaller Peasant party just to the right of the Communists insists it is not communistic but has pledged Lefist support in Farmer-Labor questions.

The laborite Social Democrats have a left wing which overlaps the moderates among the Communists. The People's Democratic party, a small liberal group, also has a slate.

Small Holders Party

In the center is the Small Holders party, the surprise winner of the Budapest city election. This party is a mixture of small shopkeepers, small land owners, professional men and their wives, supported by many large land owners, bankers and members of the nobility, of conservative views.

Many members of the party of the extreme right, the Christian Democrats, are expected to vote for the Small Holders candidates.

At one time the Small Holders party predicted an 80 per cent sweep of the vote, but now anticipate 60 to 65 per cent.

Some observers estimate the Social Democrats might poll as high as 20 per cent and the Communists as low as 10 per cent. The Social Democrats ran a joint ticket with the Communists in the Budapest election and perhaps lost some votes because of that arrangement.

Under a pre-election deal Hungary is expected to continue to have a coalition government with all parties sharing in the responsibility. It is believed this arrangement will be followed even if the Small Holders gain a working majority in parliament.

If the Small Holders win an overwhelming victory, however, right wing elements may demand that the party form a government by itself.

'BEG NO MERCY,' SAYS HUNGARIAN PREMIER AT DEATH SENTENCE

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 3 (AP)—A Hungarian people's court today sentenced Laszlo Bardossy to be hanged for serving German interests when he was premier and foreign minister. Bardossy, first to be tried in Hungary's war crimes trials, accepted the sentence and demanded immediate execution, asserting: "I beg no mercy."

Laszlo Bardossy

The former premier was charged with allowing Hitler's army to march thru Hungary to Yugoslavia; of sending Hungarian troops into action against Yugoslavia; of arranging a Hungarian declaration of war against Russia without consent of parliament, and of involving Hungary in war with the United States. He was acquitted of a charge that he failed to prevent a massacre at Ujvidek.

Bela Imredy, former finance minister, and Ferenc Szalasi, who headed the government at the close of the war, are expected to follow Bardossy to trial. Several lesser Hungarian figures also will be tried.

INDONESE RALLY 100,000 TROOPS WITH JAP ARMS

British Send Another Division to Java

pitals Wednesday were planned by local Indonesian leaders two days earlier. The plan was to attack and wipe out all the British troops in Magalang, striking quickly before more British troops were brought in. The British brought mortars and 60 more men from Semarang.

All the while Indonesian leaders continued to promise coöperation with the British. At dawn, British guarding the hospitals watched the Indonesians surround them, bringing rifles and machine guns. At 8:45 the shooting began.

Two hundred women and children, Dutch and Eurasian, were seized and concentrated in a native suburb.

The first day's attacks consisted mostly of sniping from trees, buildings, and the hills. The Indonesians brought 400 armed men in on a train from cities to the south. Bethell added mortars and asked for an air strike. Six Thunderbolts strafed the streets and roads to the south. Indonesian mortar shells fell in the hospital yards.

Japs Rushed to Scene

Wednesday a company of Japs interned near Semarang was re-armed and started for Magalang by truck under a British officer. They fought their way thru three road blocks and arrived Thursday. The Japs gave the British sufficient strength to begin an effort to clear away the snipers. They fought into the native suburb where the women and children had been held since the previous morning without food, and freed them.

Thursday, Soekarno returned to Semarang and agreed with Bethell on the truce. Soekarno and Bethell told the local leaders that the world was being notified of the attacks and that such "incidents" only destroyed the world's sympathy.

SOUVENIR-MAD THRONGS HACK UP A BATTLESHIP

New York, Nov. 3 [Special]—The battleship Missouri, whose decks have been crowded by hundreds of thousands of civilians since it came here Oct. 22 to take part in Navy day activities, has suffered considerable damage at the hands of souvenir hunters, officials said today.

The visitors came armed with pliers, wrenches, and pen knives and they swept the vessel of almost everything that was loose, the officers said.

One of the worst days was last Monday, when 60,000 school children were turned loose on the ship. Officers credited them with: sounding a general alarm which sent sailors to battle stations; trying to pull every lever in sight; creating such a furor that 150 of their teachers fainted; pilfering fire hose nozzles, and even trying to hack out the main deck plate commemorating the Japanese surrender ceremony.

The guest total of the ship now is approaching a million persons.

Hammond War Veterans to Hold Memorial Rites

The second annual memorial service and military dinner sponsored by Catholic War Veterans, Inc., St. Joseph post and auxiliary 215 of Hammond, Ind., will be held at St. Joseph church in the suburb today. At 9:30 a. m. an assembly of colors and participants will be held at the Hammond courthouse, Rimback and Hohman sts. The colors will be paraded to the church where a memorial service will be said by the Rev. John F. Bartkowski and a solemn military mass held. A military dinner will be served at noon in the parish hall. Mayor G. Bertram Smith will speak and post officers will be installed.

$8,501,302 NOW SUBSCRIBED FOR WAR AID FUND

The Community and War Fund Victory campaign enters November with $8,501,302 of the $13,040,700 quota raised, according to Walter P. Paepcke, general chairman. The total is expected to reach nearly 10 million dollars at the third report luncheon next Monday in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman, Paepcke said.

Paepcke saw a promise of success in an analysis of contributions. Altho employe contributions are running on a comparable level with the 1944 campaign, only 30 per cent of the larger business firms have reported to date. With 70 per cent of these firms still to be heard from, the campaign is well on the road to success, Paepcke said.

Paepcke pointed out that, after eight years of war China's educational system is not adequate to serve the millions of Chinese. He called attention to the Yu Tsai school where pupils are tutoring more than 1,500 farmers, miners, and housewives. He said this spirit of sharing characterizes the Chinese, who are helped by United China Relief, an agency financed by the Community and War fund.

33D DIVISION JAP FINDS HIROSHIMA RELATIVES ALIVE

The odds were 100 to 1, but Lt. Harry Fukuhara of 1428 N. Clark st., a Japanese with the 33d division, took the chance and succeeded. He recently returned to the division headquarters in Kobe, Japan, after finding his mother and a brother still alive in Hiroshima where they were when the first atomic bomb struck.

Fukuhara told his story to Sgt. Melvin Bell of 6927 Greenview av., attached to the division's press relations office, who sent it to Chicago. Fukuhara expected to remain in Japan for some time, but Bell may be among the division's men who sailed yesterday for home.

A 18 hour jeep ride took Fukuhara to Hiroshima where he located his mother and brother, Victor, in the outskirts. His mother was in the open four miles from the atomic blast. Victor was the only survivor among 100 war plant workers. The end of the war prevented the possibility of Harry meeting two other brothers, Frank and Pierce, in battle. They were soldiers on Kyushu, scheduled for invasion by the 33d this month.

CLOTHING STOLEN FROM AUTO

Arnold Wiener, 1534 W. 5th av., Gary, told police yesterday that his automobile, parked at Jackson blvd. and Dearborn st., was looted of two topcoats, two hats, and two pairs of gloves, valued at $150.

JAPS SEND YANK WAR PRISONERS TO COAL MINES

Quartered in Barracks, 4 or 6 to a Room

American prisoners of war see Japan and learn they are to work in a coal mine in this instalment of "Men Who Wouldn't Die," by a Chicago army officer who kept a diary during 40 months as a prisoner of war.

BY MAJ. A. C. TISDELLE
as told to Carl Wiegman

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Our first good look at Japan was on Aug. 1, 1943, when our ship landed at Moji, on the north coast of Kyushu, the southernmost of the principal Japanese islands. We were marched onto the dock and stood there in a long line, separated by a fence from a crowd of Japanese civilians, who stared at us with expressionless faces.

We stared back at them, keenly interested. All the women we saw wore gay colored kimonos with huge sashes tied in butterfly bows behind, and wooden clogs on their feet. Some of them had babies strapped on their backs. Some of the men wore kimonos, others had western type clothes, and some had a combination costume of eastern and western garb. Many of the men wore leggings, which looked odd on civilians.

Herded with Bayonets

At the dock our guard was changed. The new guards, all war veterans with campaign ribbons, were much kinder than the over-enthusiastic recruits who had guarded us in the Philippines. The new guards still herded us around with bayonets, but nobody was hurt.

A long passenger train, with coaches about the size of elevated lines cars in Chicago, backed into a siding at the dock and we thought, as we watched it, how wonderful it would be to ride in such a train again some day, instead of in the customary box cars. Then, to our amazement, we were ordered to board the train. We climbed in like a bunch of kids getting on a merry-go-round for the first time and sat down gleefully on the wooden seats.

Enjoy Rural Scenery

When the train pulled out at 9:30 a. m., the window shades were kept down, but when we reached the open country the guards permitted us to raise them, and we looked out on a beautiful countryside. It reminded some of us of the Blue Ridge mountain region of our country, except that the trees were stunted and deformed. We saw many farm cottages with thatched roofs and temples in sylvan settings that looked like picture post card scenes.

During the day each of us received two quarter pound sugar cookies and two soggy steamed buns.

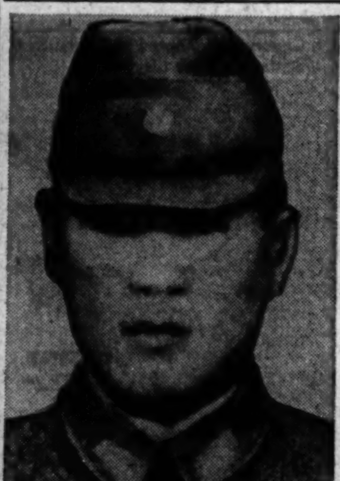
At 7:30 p. m. the train pulled into the station at Omuta, an industrial city of 150,000 population. Most of the city is owned by the Mitsui banking family, one of the five great families which are said to control two-thirds of the wealth of Japan.

Civilians Jam Square

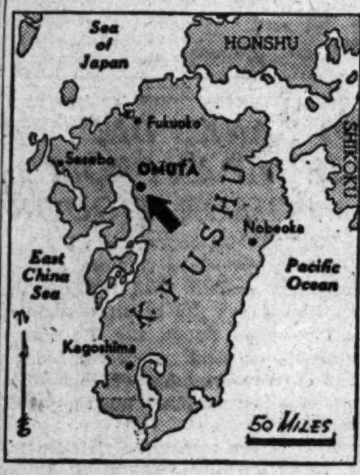
We marched into the square in front of the railway station, which was lined with business buildings much like those in the older sections of Chicago. There we were formed into columns of fours, 50 men in each column. Thousands of Japanese civilians jammed all sides of the square and they were ominously silent.

To them, we must have seemed poor specimens of the great American nation. We were a motley collection of army, navy, and marine corps men, all skinny and bedraggled. Dr. Hewlett and I were the only ones who had complete uniforms. Each of the prisoners wore a paper tag with his number on it.

Prison Camp Chief



Lt. Uri Kei, commander of prison camp No. 17 at Omuta, Japan, where, Maj. A. C. Tisdelle reveals, 500 American prisoners of war were made to slave in coal mine.



Arrow locates Omuta, scene of the prison camp.

Nervously we peered thru the twilight at the hostile faces of the crowd and suddenly we saw something that startled us. Lined up on the square were 50 men with miners' lamps on their caps. The full realization came to us slowly—we were going to work in a coal mine. The men crowned with lamps were our foremen and they had come to see their new workers.

Weaker Ones in Trucks

The tension broke when an interpreter addressed us in a shrill, nasal voice: "Any one who can't walk two miles come out here!"

Eighteen men fell out, and Dr. Hewlett explained we had two other men who had to be carried in litters. The 20 men unable to walk were placed in trucks and the remainder of us were marched, in a column of fours, along the dark and dingy streets of the city.

Throngs of people lined the streets to watch our pathetic parade. The adults stared at us silently and sullenly, but the children screamed epithets and flung rocks at us. Our interpreter explained that the children were shouting, "Kill the Americans!" but he added cheerfully, "Do not be afraid. We will protect you."

We were not so sure about that, and were relieved when our column entered the gate of a stockade enclosing barracks which were to be our new home. The stockade was a wooden fence 10 feet high, topped by three electrified wires. The entire compound was about 150 yards square.

Assigned to Barracks

We were assigned to barracks, 50 men to each. Compared with some of our previous prison residences, the new quarters were luxurious. The buildings, 20 by 120 feet, each contained 10 rooms ranged along a corridor, and six or four men were assigned to each room, depending on its size. We were instructed to remove our shoes and leave them in the corridor before entering the rooms.

Between the rooms there were real closets, where we could hang our clothes. And, greatest luxury of all, there was an electric light in each room. We found out later that the lights had to be kept burning all night long so the Jap guards could look in and count us.

At the end of each building was a latrine, equipped with stools that had seats, built especially for us, we were told, because the Japs do not use this type of latrine. There were no beds, of course, but the floors of our rooms were covered with rice straw mats and each man was supplied with a cotton and tissue paper filled sleeping pad and four cotton blankets, all brand new.

Get Welcome Baths

After we had stowed our gear, we were permitted to go to the bathhouse, which contained a 6 by 20 foot tank full of water. We dipped water out of the tank with wooden pails, poured it over us, and washed off the dirt of many a day. After that, we went to bed, clean and comfortable.

Next morning we were marched to a mess hall large enough to seat all of the 500 men in camp. We cried out in astonishment when we saw the food—vegetable soup made of radishes and mizo paste, green tea, two large wheat buns for each man, and a pat of butter for each. The meal was served in chinaware dishes, the first we had seen since the war began.

Unfortunately, that was the only decent meal we were to receive in the next two years, excepting the meals served on Christmas and New Year's day.

Assigned to Coal Mine

The next two days were devoted to physical examinations and to organizing the camp, and on the third day all the men were assembled on the parade ground, where a long row of mining tools was on display.

After inspection of our ranks by Lt. Uri Kei, the Jap commander, another Jap, who served as interpreter for the mining company, made a speech.

"Now you guys are gonna work in a coal mine," he said.

He went on, speaking English without a trace of accent, and using many American slang expressions. Later we learned he had lived for years in California. At the time we were dumbfounded to hear a Jap talking like this, but nobody laughed; it was too serious a time to laugh.

The interpreter explained how the tools were used and told their Japanese names, telling the men they would have to use the Jap names because they would work under Jap foremen. The more he talked the more difficulties we could foresee.

Our forebodings of trouble soon were to come true.

Leadership . . . The unfailing popularity of Bizet's "Carmen" exemplifies leadership in the realm of the opera. Wurlitzer leadership in the world of music has been forcibly demonstrated by outstanding ability to supply America's musical needs even during a war. Wurlitzer leadership continues! CHINESE REDS WIN MONGOLIAN CITIES, REPORT

Provincial Capital and Rail Town Fall

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 3 (AP)—A north China provincial capital and a railway city fell today to attacking Chinese Communists, unofficial reports said, as reds in Chungking received with skepticism a new four point Nationalist proposal to end the civil war.

Unconfirmed reports said Kweisui, capital of the inner Mongolian province of Suiyuan, fell to the Communists who opened the attack only yesterday. These reports said the vital railway city of Tatung to the southwest also was overrun by the Communists.

If true, the twin victories would greatly strengthen the Communist position in inner Mongolia and would hamper attempts by slender Nationalist forces there to join up with fresh Nationalist troops now pouring in by air to the Peiping-Tientsin zone.

Expect an Offensive

Despite these reported successes, Communist sources here expressed fears that the government was about to strike with a heavy offensive to crush the Reds and said 800,000 Nationalist troops had been massed in northern and east-central China.

The Chinese ministry of information said the government never had contemplated an offensive against the Communists and that government troops were purely on the defensive. The ministry labeled as unfounded communist accusations that the government was using Japanese troops and poison gas against Reds in Shansi province.

A Communist spokesman said fighting had spread to Manchuria, now being evacuated by Russian occupation forces. He said it centered at the south Manchurian port of Hulutao, where Chinese Nationalist troops were landed earlier this week from United States transports.

Report Continued Offensive by Chinese 6th Army

The spokesman countered the Chungking peace proposal with this statement:

"When all Kuomintang [Nationalist] troops thruout the country are asked to stop fighting, the Communists will do likewise."

Demand Free Railroads

K. C. Wu, Chungking minister of information, announced the new peace plan earlier in the day and said a reply was being awaited from the Communist stronghold in Yenan. He listed these four points:

1. Both sides should order their troops to "stay put" and halt all attacks.

2. The Communists should withdraw 10 kilometers [6.2 miles] from the railroads. The government then would agree not to send troops to points abandoned or exposed to Communist raids and would use railway police to guard the lines.

3. The government would consult Communists before moving any troops along the railroads. This conformed with a Communist request but skipped the question of moving government troops by sea and air.

"Both Sides Stalling"

4. The peoples' political council should appoint a supervisory commission to investigate conditions along the railroads and report any violation by either side.

The Nationalist peace proposals, the Communist spokesman said, would restrict the government's cease fire order "to a few hot spots," whereas it should apply all over the country.

Sentiment is overwhelmingly against civil war but pessimists assert both sides are stalling. They insist no concrete peace plan will come from present debates between Chungking and Yenan.

Communists Surrounded

Communist sources said government troops massing for an offensive already had surrounded Communist forces in western Honan and eastern Hopei provinces.

Communists' latest accusations include:

That a plane bearing Chinese air force markings killed four and wounded eight villagers in Shantung province.

That several northern provincial governors and Nationalist generals were "pro-Japanese."

The government has published 1,000,000 handbooks marked: "Bandit suppression campaign: Confidential."

20 YANKS DIE IN JAPAN FROM POISON LIQUOR

YOKOHAMA, Japan, Nov. 3 (AP)—Nineteen American soldiers and a merchant seaman died last month on Honshu as the result of drinking poisoned liquor, the 8th army provost marshal reported today. Ten others were poisoned, including one who became blind, but they will recover.

Five of the men were stricken in a cabaret while celebrating their final night in Japan before sailing home for discharge.

The provost marshal said the liquor was obtained from bootleggers or from dealers who diluted it with methanol or tetraethyl lead.

Last Batch of Jap Troops Leaves Korea for Home

FUSAN, Korea, Nov. 3 (AP)—The last large contingent of Japanese soldiers in American occupied Korea, about 3,500, arrived in box cars at this port today for ferrying back to Japan. More than 88,000 Nipponese were evacuated last month, and since occupation forces landed in September, more than 195,000 Japanese soldiers and civilians have streamed homeward thru Fusan.

REDS WILL SEEK KEY POSITIONS IN FRENCH CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 3—The candidacy of French communist leaders for key ministries in the new government to be set up next week, was announced today. Maurice Thorez, Communist chief, told a meeting of the party central committee that the "Communist party is ready to shoulder all the responsibilities by occupying governmental posts corresponding in quality and quantity to its influence in the country and the authority it has just been given by universal suffrage."

In view of the fact that the communists are the strongest of the big three parties and that the present governmental set-up comprised 21 ministries, it is probable the Reds will seek from five to eight portfolios.

They are believed to be particularly eyeing the ministries of justice and information and may also insist upon ministry of the interior. Possession of these posts would enable them to control news, seize alleged illegal fortunes, and direct the country's internal affairs. It is likely they will also try to retain the ministries of air and public health, take over one or two emergency ministries such as food and prisoners, and possibly put in a bid for labor, industrial production, or national economy.

YANK ADMIRAL STUDIES LANDING IN MANCHURIA

Barbey Must Decide on U. S. Involvement

BY JOSEPH HEARST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Vice Adm. Barbey

ABOARD ADM. BARBEY'S FLAGSHIP CATOCTIN, OFF YINGKOW, Manchuria, Nov. 4 [Sunday]—Lt. Gen. Tu Li-ming, supreme commander of northeastern China, will go to Yingkow today to determine whether soviet promises of a safe landing there for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist troops would be fulfilled. It is urgently necessary to decide on an occupation port in Manchuria as the Chinese troops destined to garrison the area already are at sea in American ships.

Tu is confident the soviets will make good their pledge of a safe landing, but American investigators say this is not borne out by conditions in the city.

The investigation made this week by aides of Vice Adm. Daniel E. Barbey, commander of the 7th amphibious force, shows an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 Chinese Communist troops in Yinkow.

Barbey Not So Confident

Barbey, therefore, is not so confident that the Russians have the same understanding of the landing agreement as have the Chinese, so today he will take Tu up the river to Yinkow in a destroyer and ask the Russian garrison commander, Col. Leonoff, to confer with Tu.

It is believed that Barbey will oppose the use of American seamen to land Chinese here unless assured the area is cleared of communist forces and the danger of American ships being fired on is eliminated.

The Russian garrison at Jungkow numbers about 500 and apparently has made no effort to curb the activities of Communist troops, who reportedly are armed with rifles, some machine guns and a few pieces of field artillery. Yesterday Communist troops forced a thousand Chinese laborers to dig trenches and embankments on the riber bank where the landing craft would have to pass.

Mayor of City Kidnaped

It was learned that Mayor Wang Tien-chung, described as an anti-Communist, was taken from his home Friday evening by the Communists after Americans visited the city, and has not been seen since.

Gen. Tu, in a discussion of the problem facing the Chinese central government in trying to occupy Manchuria when the Russians move out, told correspondents that on Oct. 29, at Hsinking, Soviet Marshal Marinofsky, supreme commander of the soviet occupation force in Manchuria agreed to:

1. Guarantee the safe landing at Yingkow of Chinese troops with aid in arranging billeting and mess facilities.

2. Begin the withdrawal from Manchuria, except from Dairen, on Nov. 10, moving north gradually, with all Russian troops out of Manchuria by Dec. 2.

3. Have soviet troops guard the area in which the Nationalists expect to be landed from American ships.

Tells of Red Parley

Tu said that all arrangements for the Nationalists to occupy Manchuria [where Chinese Communists also are seeking to establish themselves] were made at the conference between Marinofsky and Gen. Hsiuing Shih-hui, director of Chiang's field headquarters. He said the Russians also were asked to guarantee safe landings at Hulutao, where the American flag was fired upon last week and at Taku, but that Marinofsky said he could give a guarantee only at Yingkow because only there had he a sufficient garrison.

Tu disclosed that the 13th army, now encamped before communist held Shanhaikwan after being landed at Chinwangtao, originally was to have been landed at Dairen but that the Russians refused to permit a landing there. The 13th had left Kowloon in American transports and was at sea when the Chinese learned that Dairen was closed to them. The Chinese then suggested the alternative port of Hulutao, and it was while Barbey was investigating conditions there that the American flag was fired on by the Communists who were discovered to be in full control.

Presents Pennsylvania with Navy Unit Award

Bremerton, Wash., Nov. 3 (AP)—Rear Adm. Ralph W. Christie, Puget Sound navy yard commandant, presented the battleship Pennsylvania with the navy unit commendation ribbon today.

M'ARTHUR ACTS TO AVERT COAL FAMINE IN JAPAN

TOKYO, Nov. 3 (AP)—Gen. MacArthur moved today to avert a winter fuel famine in Japan by asking American commanders in China, Korea, and the Pacific islands to give priority to coal miners in the repatriation of Japanese military forces.

The general's action was prompted by a 50 per cent decrease in coal production on Hokkaido, the northern island from which Japan will have to get most of its supply. The imperial government has estimated that 68,000 miners were sent overseas during the war.

Yanks Will Be Warm

Stars and Stripes in Yokohama published the assurance of army authorities that American troops in Japan will not suffer for want of warm clothing this winter. The paper said ships were unloading enough supplies to assure every soldier one sleeping bag and three blankets, and a stove for every five men.

Meanwhile, the Kyodo news agency said that a lot of so-called Democratic political activity in Japan today is merely "overnight window-dressing" instigated by war time Nationalists.

Kyodo asserted that at least eight of the new political parties which have appeared since the occupation were sponsored by rightists who had no pronounced strength and in some cases were merely one-man attempts to wield political influence.

Identifies Two Leaders

The agency identified two of the leaders as Yoshio Kodama, head of the Japan National party, and Yoichi Sasagawa, a member of the house of representatives who leads the "national federation of toilers" which recently proclaimed a fight to the finish againt Communists.

It described Kodama as a war time youth leader who was a purchasing agent for militarists stripping raw materials from conquered areas.

RUBBLE YIELDS FULL STORY OF AUSTRIA'S FALL

Threats, Duplicity Told in Phone Records

[Germany's seizure of Austria in 1938 was arranged by high nazi officials in telephone conversations. These conversations were recorded by the German air ministry and the recordings subsequently were recovered from the rubble in Berlin.]

BY DANIEL DE LUCE

[Copyright: 1945: By the Associated Press]

BERLIN, Nov. 3—At 8:48 p. m. on March 11, 1938, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering dictated the telegram the puppet Arthur Seyss-Inquart was to prepare inviting German armed forces into Austria.

Goering said the puppet would not even have to send the telegram—he would merely have to acknowledge agreement with its contents.

Thus was arranged the pretext for the march of German troops into Austria, the act that led to the extinction of Austria as an independent state and its annexation on March 13, 1938.

Story of Anschluss

Out of the mouths of the Nazis themselves, living and dead, comes this inside story of the Anschluss.

The whole swaggering minute by minute account was shouted over the long distance telephone—Berlin to Vienna, to Rome, to London, to Linz—as the Nazis threatened, bluffed, cajoled, lied, and dictated according to the necessities of the occasion.

At Goering's air ministry a listening post copied down the torrent of angry words, fulsome boasts and wheedling flattery, and when Austria was delivered bag and baggage, air ministry officials bound the entire record of 100 neatly typed pages and 30,000 words inside a plain black cardboard folder labeled "Secret Archives. Conversations—Austrian case, March, 1938."

The historic folder went unnoticed among the tons of documents strewn about the wrecked palace of the Luftwaffe when the Red army occupied Berlin this spring.

For two cigarets, two Germans who were cleaning up and burning the tattered papers in the courtyard loaded my jeep with these Nazi records. The folder on the Austrian case was included in the salvage.

Hitler on the Wire

The folder gives the detailed and chronological history of the biggest blackmail of its time. It is mostly told in the stammering, repetitious slang of Goering's conversations with Seyss-Inquart, the Nazi trojan horse and other Nazis in Vienna, with Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop in London who was to become foreign minister, with Prince Philip of Hesse, the son-in-law of the king of Italy whose royal wife died in Buchenwald concentration camp, and with Maj. Gen. Karl Bodenschatz, cabinet chief in Goering's air ministry office who was on the scene at Linz. Hitler himself came in on the wire once.

At the height of his blustering, Goering gave Austria an ultimatum to form a new Nazi government in less than two hours or 240,000 German troops would march into the country.

The record opens with Goering's personal transcript of an international telephone conversation at 2:45 p. m. on Friday, March 11, the day before the German march into Austria, with Seyss-Inquart, the National Socialist minister of interior and public security whom Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg had taken into the cabinet in an effort to appease Hitler. Seyss-Inquart, later rewarded with the German commissionership over the Netherlands, is one of the defendants at the forthcoming Nuernberg trials.

Elections Called Off

GOERING—"How goes it with you now? Did you resign, is there anything new to tell?"

SEYSS-INQUART—"The chancellor has called off the elections."

This was the national plebiscite which Schuschnigg in a surprise move two days before had called for the following Sunday on the Austrian government's policy of independence toward Germany. In a rage, the Nazis accused him of breaking his word with Hitler in their famous Berchtesgaden conference of a month before.

Seyss-Inquart explained that he and others were now placed in a difficult position.

GOERING—"Chancellor Schuschnigg's action is not sufficient. Calling off the elections can be only a postponement, but no change in the present situation, which was created by Schuschnigg's behavior in breaking the Berchtesgaden agreement. It must be expected that the National Socialist ministers, you and the others, will hand in their resignations to the chancellor, and he will resign too. Send the telegram we have spoken of to the fuehrer. Only thru Schuschnigg's resignation can you receive an immediate order from the federal president [President Wilhelm Miklas of Austria to form a new cabinet."

Goering, speaking with one Dombrowski of the German legation in Vienna at 5 p. m., March 11—"By 7:30 a cabinet must be formed and several measures taken, too. The demand to allow the Party must be made at once. With all formations—the SA [storm troopers], SS [elite guard]!" This was a demand that the ban on Nazi party organizations be removed.

DOMBROWSKI—"It is. There is no discussion necessary."

Relations on New Basis

GOERING — "Some one special will go down there and say what kind of election it should be."

DOMBROWSKI — "Alll right, there is time for it."

GOERING — "Seyss-Inquart intends to put relations between Germany and Austria on a new basis?"

DOMBROWSKI — "Yes, he intends that the independence of Austria continue, nicht wahr? [Is it not so?] and there should only be National Socialist control."

Goering—"He must also talk at 7:30 with the fuehrer. About the cabinet Keppler will give the names. Justice is simple—you know whom? [Keppler was the German state secretary temporarily stationed at the German legation in Vienna]. "Be careful, all the people of the press must leave at once. The press people must be disposed of immediately."

Goering, to Dr. Franz Hueber, his brother-in-law, who was in Vienna, at 5:20 p. m., March 11—"Listen, Franz, you take the justice [the justice ministry in the new cabinet], and on the fuehrer's wish, also the foreign ministry which later on some one else will get. An important point—the speediest disarming, regardless of consequences, of the Reds who were armed yesterday."

Goering talked with Seyss-Inquart at 5:26 p. m.

Seyss-Inquart—"The federal president accepted the resignation [of Schuschnigg] but he wants to give the chancellorship to a man like Ender. [Dr. Otto Ender, chancellor in 1930-'31, and later an inmate of Dachau concentration camp.] I proposed to the federal president that he give me the chancellorship. As for the party we have not yet had the possibility of instaling it, but we ordered the SA. and SS. formations to take over police duty."

GOERING — "That's not good enough. The affair is rolling. Please! The federal president must be told at once that he has to give you power as federal chancellor immediately as he has been ordered."

At this moment a Dr. Muehlmann took Seyss-Inquart's place on the telephone and reported: "The federal president still stubbornly refuses to agree and demands a diplomatic action, something official by the reich."

Goering Ultimatum

Goering delivered his ultimatum as Seyss-Inquart resumed his place at the telephone. "Go immediately with Lt. Gen. Muff [German military attache in Vienna] to the federal president and tell him if the demands as you know them are not accepted immediately then tonight troops will enter who are already marching and deploying along the whole line of the frontier."

Goering continued: "Report to us immediately how Miklas stands. Tell him it's no joke now. Thru a false performance he has held on a few moments but the fact is that tonight the march in begins for all Austria. The march in will only be held up and the troops stay on the border if we have a report by 7:30 that Miklas has given you the federal chancellorship. If Miklas couldn't understand it in four hours he must understand it now in four minutes!"

Seyss-Inquart: "Well, good."

At 6:29 Goering talked with Keppler and Muff. He was told that the president still refused to quit and that Schuschnigg was attempting to show the world that the Nazis had no majority and could only be put in thru the armed power of Germany.

There was a three minute interruption by the Vienna operator, then Seyss-Inquart came to the phone.

Ordered to Take Power

SEYSS-INQUART — "The federal president still sticks to his old viewpoint."

GOERING—"Listen, I will wait a couple of minutes until he comes out. If this cannot be then you have to take over the power, nicht wahr?"

Seyss-Inquart—"Yes, if he threatens then we are already marching in."

Goering—"Call me on a blitz [urgent] call!"

At 7:57 p. m. Seyss-Inquart put thru the call.

Seyss-Inquart — "Herr Dr. Schuschnigg will give the news on

REVEAL MONTGOMERY AND CHURCHILL HAD PRIVATE RADIO PHONE

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—War time use of a radio telephone over which Field Marshal Montgomery in Europe conducted secret conversations with former Prime Minister Winston Churchill in Downing street was disclosed tonight by the British war office.

Without elaborating, the announcement said the device was so constructed that it provided the secrecy of a private telephone line. The equipment in Europe was built in a trailer and moved with Montgomery's headquarters. The field marshal called it his "No. 10 thing," since it provided communication with No. 10 Downing street.

The announcement said an American mission was sent to Britain in November, 1942, to study the device and returned to work out an American version.

RUBBLE YIELDS FULL STORY OF AUSTRIA'S FALL

the radio that the reich government gave an ultimatum."

Goering—"I heard about it."

Seyss-Inquart—"And the government has removed itself from office.

Goering—"So, good! I will give the order for the march in and then you see that you take possession of the power. Notify the leading people about the following: Everyone who offers opposition or organizes opposition will be immediately judged by our summary court, the summary court of our marching troops. Is that clear?"

Seyss-Inquart—"Yes."

Goering was on the phone with Keppler at 8:48.

Keppler—"Federal President Miklas has refused to do anything, regardless. The government has refused to function. Schuschnigg told me they had quit functioning. The old government ordered the army not to offer opposition, so shooting is not allowed."

Shooting Not Allowed

Goering—"Well that is indeed wurscht." ["Wurscht" is Berlin slang for "sausage."]

Keppler—"Now may I ask if a prominent personality of Berlin would like to say a few words to the Austrians."

[Hitler made his triumphant personal entry into Austria the next day and at Linz, near his birthplace, made his first address to the Austrians.]

Goering—"I don't know right now. Now listen: The following telegram should be sent here by Seyss-Inquart. Write it down. 'The provisional Austrian government which after the resignation of the Schuschnigg government sees as its task the restoration of peace and order in Austria, addressed to the German government the urgent request to support it in its task and to help it to prevent bloodshed. For this purpose it asks the German government to send in German troops as soon as possible.'"

The troops were moving over the border at dawn.

EX-SOLDIER, 16, KNIFED FATALLY BY FORMER PAL

Robert Peterson, 16, of 2045 N. Mozart st., recently discharged from the army because he was under age, was fatally stabbed last night by Leonard D. Swartz Jr., 17, of 1944 N. Francisco av., in the rear of 2849 McLean av. At St. Elizabeth's hospital, it was found Peterson had been stabbed 13 times in the neck.

At the Shakespeare av. police station, Swartz refused to tell Capt. John O'Malley what he and Peterson quarreled about. They had gone to the McLean av. address with Larry Speck, 14, who lives there, because Speck wanted to get a jacket.

While Speck was inside, Swartz stabbed Peterson with a knife. Swartz ran home and told his father what had happened, and the elder Swartz accompanied his son to the Speck home. Peterson's body lay on a basement stairway.

The elder Swartz and Speck's father called police. In the Swartz home, police found a Nazi flag, a storm trooper's cap, and a black leather military belt, with two wooden pistols. The elder Swartz recently was discharged from Gardiner General hospital after serving 22 months in the army.

NAVY SPEEDING FAMILY TO VET NOW GOING BLIND

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 3 [Special] —The navy today cut thru red tape and cabled officials in New Zealand to hurry an American sailor's family to the United States before he goes blind.

The sailor, William Bingham, 24, who is in the naval hospital here, lost one eye at Okinawa and is fast losing sight in the other. When he expressed desire recently to see the girl he married in New Zealand and their two children several congressmen began a struggle to sidestep regulations and get the family here. They had been refused a visa because the father is disabled.

Today word came from Washington, D. C., that legal obstacles had been overcome and that Bingham will see his wife and children before he is totally blind.

SCIENCE TO FETE ACE OF DISEASE SLEUTHS: X-RAY

A week's observance by hospitals, medical schools, and physicians of the discovery of X-ray will begin tomorrow and continue thru Saturday under the sponsorship of the American College of Radiology, 20 N. Wacker dr.

During the golden jubilee celebration the medical profession will emphasize to the public the use and application of X-ray in the treatment and diagnosis of disease. The week's activities also will seek to tell the public about the services of the radiologist, a physician who specializes in the medical applications of the X-ray, in treatment and interpretation of films for diagnosis.

Discovered by German

The X-ray, so named because science didn't know the exact nature of its find, was discovered by the German physicist, Wilhelm C. Roentgen, Nov. 8, 1895, at the University of Wurzburg in Bavaria.

Roentgen, with true scientific spirit, relayed the secret to the world without any attempt to commercialize on his discovery, according to the radiologists' group. Today, Roentgen has taken his place as one of the great benefactors of mankind and his discovery is one of the most potent weapons in the war against disease and injury.

WITNESS SWEARS YAMASHITA GAVE MURDER ORDERS

"Wipe Out All Filipinos," He Quotes Tiger

BY ROBERT CROMIE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 3 — The limelight swung suddenly this afternoon to Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, previously an overshadowed figure in his own trial, when, over the heated objections of defense attorneys, a witness testified that last October Yamashita issued an order to wipe out the entire population of the Philippines.

Altho the defense repeatedly pointed out that the witness' testimony was based entirely on hearsay, the trial commission overruled the objections and permitted the witness to testify further that Yamashita also had ordered, as part of the general plan, that the property of Filipinos be destroyed and had threatened, if the Americans entered Manila, to "bomb Manila and not leave a single Filipino living."

Brought from Prison

The witness, Narciso Lapus, 59, was brought to the courtroom under guard from the new Bilibid prison, where is awaiting trial as a collaborator. He testified at length as to his association with Gen. Artemio Ricarte, once a famous Filipino revolutionary leader whose implacable resistance to the Americans 45 years ago earned him the nickname "La Vibora" [The Viper].

When the Japanese came to the Philippines Ricarte, who since 1921 had been living in Japan, was sent by Premier Tojo as special envoy to the Philippines with powers far exceeding those of the puppet president, Jose Laurel, his mission being to pacify the Philippines.

With the defense objecting literally at nearly every sentence, Lapus was permitted to describe what Ricarte had told him of three alleged meetings with Yamashita last October. Ricarte, to add further to the annoyance of the defense, is now dead.

"Famous for Cruelty"

The commission did order stricken from the record Lapus' version of what Ricarte supposedly said when he heard that Yamashita was in the Philippines. It was: "Lapus, I do not like this that Yamashita is here. You know Gen. Yamashita is famous for his sanguinity and cruelty, and is responsible for the deaths of more than 100 —" Here the witness was interrupted by Maj. Gen. R. B. Reynolds, commission president, who ordered the foregoing stricken.

Lapus then told of what Ricarte told him of three visits to Yamashita.

On the first Ricarte, according to Lapus, returned and said: "Lapus, this is terrible. There is a general order issued by Yamashita which said that in the first stages of the war the Japanese did not consider the Filipinos as enemies. But now they are revealed as 100 per cent enemies because they are all guerrillas or helping the guerrillas. In war on the enemies we do not have to give quarter."

Fails to Move Him

Lapus added that Ricarte told him Yamashita said he was leaving only enough troops in Manila to serve as a lure for the Americans, and that his instructions were to destroy Manila, especially the most heavily populated sections.

Ricarte, Lapus said, was in tears.

Capt. Adolf Reel, Boston, Mass., angrily objected to Lapus' testimony as "hearsay four times removed," but like 20 other objections it was not sustained.

Lapus then said that after the second visit Ricarte said he was not able to move Yamashita, who said, "I am sorry, but the order already has been given. War is war. The enemy should not be given quarter."

The third visit was described by Lapus as follows: "I asked Gen. Ricarte if he had talked over the order which involved the life of my country. He said, 'I appealed to the heart of Yamashita but he has no heart. He would not listen.'"

Yamashita Aide Laughs

None of the Japanese generals seemed upset by the testimony of Lapus. In fact, Gen. Muto, Yamashita's chief of staff, who was at the hearing for the first time in two days, laughed as if genuinely amused.

The cross-examination of Lapus was put over to Monday, when the defense stated that this might take "quite some time"

Lapus won some fame by challenging Theodore Roosevelt Jr. to a duel when angered by a book which Roosevelt had written on the Philippines. A Socialist and self-professed left winger, he was arrested by the Japanese in 1941 and sentenced to death for anti-Jap articles, but was given a reprieve when he agreed to act as private secretary to Ricarte.

Lapus said that he had "at the risk of his life" warned his friends of the purported order of Yamashita and advised them to leave Manila.

Commended Jap Police

Yamashita also was involved in testimony earlier when a Filipino traitor who was employed as an interpreter for the dread Kempei Tai, or military police, testified that the police were given a commendation by Yamashita for their excellent work in hunting down and suppressing guerrillas and their sympathizers.

There was previous testimony to prolonged torture of men, women, and children civilians arrested on suspecion by the Kempei Tai and "questioned" by means of beatings, cigarets pressed against their bare flesh, the so-called "water cure," or by being stamped upon.

Among witnesses to these atrocities was Benigno del Rio, a Spaniard, who said the police told him he had been reported as a Communist and guerrilla sympathizer by Premier Franco's consul, Jose del Jacinto, who is now back in Spain. Del Rio said he also was accused of being an American intelligence officer. The Kempei Tai poured water down his throat while five or six men sat on him and then, when he was bloated with liquid, jumped up and down on his stomach, meanwhile burning his naked back with cigaret butts.

YANKS IN JAPAN HEAR VOICE OF HOME: TRIBUNE

Overseas Edition Greeted Like Old Pal

BY DONALD STARR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TOKYO, Nov. 3—American troops who have read the Chicago Overseas Tribune in all parts of the world have greeted with pleasure the same home town news and features in the Tokyo edition, but they still are surprised at finding the newspaper keeping step with them as they advance to the far places of the globe.

Altho unusually stormy weather has delayed communications in the Pacific, the Oct. 20 issue was distributed today in the Tokyo area. Thousands of copies were placed on trains which will hurry them to centers for distribution to soldiers from southern Kyushu to Hokkaido and Korea in a matter of hours.

Special efforts are made in Tokyo All efforts are bent, however, on providing men with a bright newspaper, and they are eager to express their appreciation. This is what a few of them had to say:

Sgt. Max A. Weisbrot, 5010 N. Central Park av., Chicago: "I knew about the effort to publish the Tribune Overseas in Australia. Then I saw an overseas edition on Luzon. It is good to see it again up here. I do think a short stock exchange summary would be a good addition. The comics are away ahead of those in the Stars and Stripes."

Boy, Those Funnies!

Pfc. Jim McDowell, 2238 Orchard st., Chicago: "I read the Trib every time I come into the Red Cross club here. The best part is its familiarity—it's the same old paper, and it makes you say, 'Hey man, there's the Tribune.'"

Pvt. 1st Class L. Cieplucha, formerly of 1936 Hood av., Chicago: "I saw the Overseas Tribune first on Luzon and it sure looked good to me. The attractive feature, of course, is the old Tribune funnies, the best and funniest there are."

Tech. 4th Grade Snyder, 7520 Colfax av., Chicago: "I think it's terrific. I've been following the Overseas Trib since it first came out in Manila. The thing I look for is Arch Ward. It sure was a pleasant surprise to us when we came over and found The Trib here. Don't make any changes in it—it is almost the same as it was at home."

Tech. 5th Grade William Pause, 10332 Sawyer av., Chicago: "The thing I like best is sports, and the Overseas Tribune is doing a swell job of sports coverage. There's a good variety of news, too."

Lt. Joseph Lahey, Oak Park Y. M. C. A., Oak Park, Ill.: "It sure looks like the same old paper. Just wish the sports could be a little more up to date, but I know that's impossible."

Wants More Pages

Tech. 5th Grade Ray O'Connor, 6435 N. Washtenaw av., Chicago: "I just got to Tokyo a few days ago and the first day I was here I stopped at the club and found a copy of the Overseas Tribune. Man, was I surprised to see the old Trib clear out here, complete with Arch Ward. It looked good, only I wish there were more pages. I guess it would have made me homesick except that I got over that a long time ago."

Tech. 5th Grade W. B. Watson, Joliet, Ill.: "I think the Oeverseas Tribune is a great idea. This was the first time I saw it. We all wish there were more copies."

Pvt. 1st Class Roland Nordquist, 1406 Warner av., Chicago: "This is a great thing, having the Trib out here. I only wish I were home to read it. I saw it first in Europe in May, so I was looking for it out here."

Sgt. Edward Saltis, 9859 Bell av., Chicago: "The Overseas Trib is good. It's swell. I guess it's because I know the paper and the paper knows me. News from home itself is what we want. Those old Chicago addresses are good to read. Now all they've got to do is get Mayor Kelly on the ball and get us home."

Tech. 5th Grade Robert Stanker, 703 E. 75th st., Chicago: "It's nice getting the home news earlier. It's a paper from home—a Chicago paper—that's the main thing. I saw it first in Europe."

Feared Kidnaped

[Associated Press Wirephoto]

Dickie tum Suden, 3, who disappeared Thursday from his parents' home near Downieville, Cal., in Sierra Nevada mountains.

Downieville, Cal., Nov. 3 (AP)—Searchers today found footprints that might be those om Dickie Tum Suden, 3, who disappeared three days ago in the wild mining country of the Sierra Nevadas.

The prints were relatively fresh, the searchers said, and led to a ravine about half a mile from the summer home that Dickie's socially prominent parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tum Suden, occupy. Suden operates a gold mine.

The prints were near the spot where one of Dickie's mittens was found by one of the 200 persons tramping the woods and hills in search of him.

Altho some relatives voiced fear the lad may have been kidnaped, Sierra county officials and the boy's mother did not hold to that theory.

LIFEBOAT YIELDS COMPLETE LIST OF JAP OFFICERS

TOKYO, Nov. 3 (AP)—A tiny Japanese lifeboat bobbed for two days off southeastern New Guinea under the watch of hidden Australian patrols in March, 1943, before currents beached it to give Gen. MacArthur's military intelligence its biggest break of the war.

As the boat grounded on little Goodenough Island outside Milne bay, the Aussies stepped out and captured, without a struggle, the boat's occupant, a Japanese officer with a suitcase full of documents.

The Aussies weren't expecting the documents and didn't know what they were, but they turned them over to American army translators. Among the papers was a complete roster of all Japanese army officers and their units, as of the previous September.

List 90,000 Officers

With the roster as a backbone, plus scraps of information from other sources, the battle plans section of Maj. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby's G-2 built a card catalogue file of 90,000 Japanese officers and 25,000 to 30,000 Japanese army units, some as small as platoons.

Cross-checking of these files enabled the Americans to pinpoint Japanese unit positions in the march northward toward Japan. The story was disclosed today by MacArthur's headquarters.

Follow Jap Units

The roster became the chief guide of the battle plans section. It was developed under one of the Americans the Japanese forced from Singapore at the war's beginning—Lt. Col. George Magruder, Rumson, N. J.

With it, Magruder and his staff kept track of officers' movements thruout Asia and pegged down their units on information supplied thru abandoned battle plans and promotion lists, Japanese APO numbers and neglected letters.

The Japanese who inadvertently supplied the Americans with so much intelligence was a lieutenant colonel of artillery, en route with reinforcements for Lae when his ship was sunk in the battle of the Bismarck sea. He had carried the records six days while drifting toward Goodenough Island.

U. S. SUBS SAVED 504 AIRMEN AT SEA DURING WAR

Navy Discloses Daring Exploits of Craft

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—The navy revealed today that 504 United States and allied aviators were rescued by United States submarines from enemy waters and beaches in some of the most daring and dangerous operations of the war.

Frequently operating under fire, within gun range of Japanese home islands or in mined waters, the "submarine lifeguard league" became an integral part of practically all air strikes against the enemy.

Just before the end of the war, when submarines' normal ship-sinking job was about done, a third of all the navy's operational submarines were engaged in some phase of lifeguard duty.

Open New Strategy Era

Use of submarines, the navy said, opened a new era in aerial offensive strategy and provided a tremendous boost to the morale of flyers.

"Instances of extraordinary heroism during the searches of vast expanses of enemy waters in quest of perhaps a single pilot or air crewman are commonplace in the official records of these operations," the navy said.

It was not until the task force attack on Wake Island in October, 1943, that a submarine was specifically assigned to rescue downed airmen. The Skate, on her first war patrol, rescued six naval aviators in waters surrounding Wake.

During the last few months of the war, the majority of army personnel who survived "ditchings" were recovered by submarines.

Submarine Sets Record

Efficiency at the war's end had reached the point where a surviving airman could expect rescue within three hours. Lt. B. V. Burtch, St. Louis, Mo., from the carrier Independence, was picked up by the Silversides four minutes after he abandoned his fighter off Shikoku.

The first rescue of B-29 crewmen occurred off Iwo Island Dec. 19, 1944, when the Spearfish recovered seven. In May, 1945, the Tigrone established a record by picking up 30 army and navy personnel off Honshu in a single patrol.

Berwyn Flyer Among Rescued

One of the last men to be rescued before Japan surrendered, Capt. Y. H. Mikes, army pilot from Berwyn, Ill., parachuted into Tokyo bay itself. Twice the rescue submarine Aspro was driven beneath the surface by enemy air attack as it sought to reach him.

Climbing into a wooden power boat dropped to him from a circling rescue plane, Mikes had started toward the surfaced Aspro just as four Jap Zeros attacked him and the sub. Navy searchplanes shot down two of the attackers while Mikes watched despairings as the Aspro dived to escape. But Comdr. J. H. Ashley, Clinton, Ind., brought the Aspro back a third time, and Mikes was saved.

Mayor Hails Hero

Mayor Frank G. Wallin welcoming Sgt. Leonard J. Gordon back to Waukegan yesterday.

Waukegan remembers Leonard J. Gordon as a quiet lad who played a horn in the Waukegan Township High school band. Yesterday Leonard, a discharged army sergeant, came home, still quiet, but wearing the distinguished service cross and Purple Heart, and acclaimed as Lake county's greatest war hero because of his exploit in single handedly killing 22 Japs.

Waukegan's Mayor Frank G. Wallin was doing chores around home when he heard Leonard was back in the home of his father, Harry, a tailor, at 219 Lake st. Wallin hurried over to welcome him.

Leonard, now 21, was 19 and a private when he killed the 22 Japs during several days of fighting on Bougainville. He used a machine gun, then grenades, and finally a rifle to round out the score. A bullet in the chest put him in a hospital for two months, but he got out to fight in the Leyte campaign. He landed in Japan one day after V-J day.

Gen. Grachin, Slav Tank Army Commander, Dies

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—The death of Lt. Gen. Peter Grachin, commander of the 1st Yugoslav tank army, was announced by Belgrade radio today. Marshal Tito ordered salvoes fired in Split, Ljubljana, and other towns which Grachin's troops liberated. A state funeral will be held in Belgrade.

LABOR SWEEPS TOWN ELECTIONS THRUOUT BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Final returns from London's 28 boroughs and from 154 of the biggest boroughs in the provinces gave the Labor party 2,977 city and town council seats in Thursday's local elections—a gain of 1,245 over the 1938 elections. The Conservatives lost 760 seats, retaining only 835. The Liberals were left with only 111 seats after losing 134. The various independents—most of them with conservative leanings—lost 357 seats and held only 501. The Communists won 22 seats, a gain of 15.

We had a dream—when we opened our first small shop... today our Second floor Salon is a part of that dream come true

We borrowed a little of the atmosphere of the Parisian houses with which we have long been familiar, and, with an American eye for comfort, added spacious fitting rooms and year-round air conditioning

These serenely beautiful surroundings form an appropriate background for our famous Blum originals, designed and executed with such skill in our own workroom...for the latest creations of the world's foremost designers... for the luxuriant furs so deftly fashioned in our workroom

We're quite proud of our Salon...it seems a long way from that first, small shop, but, not forgetting the change was made possible by your recognition, we sincerely feel it our obligation and our privilege to go on maintaining the high standards you've helped us establish

SEES 90 MILLION IN EUROPE CLOSE TO STARVATION

Production Is Far Below Needs, UNRRA Aid Says

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—Ninety million European allies in urban areas may be "near starvation" this winter, Dr. H. C. M. Case, an agricultural economics expert of the United Nations Relief and Habilitation administration [UNRRA], said tonight.

Dr. Case studied food production in Czechoslovakia, Greece, Italy, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Yugoslavia, and Norway.

Domestic food production will provide an average of only 1,200 calories daily this winter for about 90,000,000 persons, he said. Nutritionists generally consider 2,600 calories as "an acceptable minimum average."

2,400 Cows Shipped

"If the amount consumed by people off farms is to be raised to even 2,000 calories daily, the nations we have studied must import approximately 9,000,000 tons of food before the 1946 harvest."

Dr. Case said UNRRA already has shipped more than 1,000,000 tons of food into eastern and southern Europe, along with 2,400 milk cows to increase live stock production. UNRRA is scheduled to ship 5,000 head of cows, horses, and mules per month during the rest of the fall and winter.

Drouth last summer intensified war-caused food shortages, he said, normal crops often were not sowed at the proper season, and "seed had to be used at a time as food." Fertilizers also have become scarce.

Live Stock Feed Needed

One of Europe's most vital needs is feed for live stock to produce essential animal fats and proteins, he continued, explaining that "dairy cows have been decreased by 25 per cent, hogs by 40 per cent, and poultry by much more. Meanwhile, the demand for grain for human consumption has reduced live stock feed.

"As long as these feeds remain scarce, the yield of milk per cow will decline, and pigs and other meat animals will be slaughtered at light weights. This would be deplorable because prolonged undernourishment has left millions of Europeans in poor condition to face another winter on a diet short of proteins and fats."

ONLY CRIPPLED PRISONERS SENT BACK BY RUSSIA

Reds Hold All Nazis Able to Work

BY LARRY RUE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 3—The casualties of war in Germany did not end with unconditional surrender, and this is adding to the suffering of the people, who admittedly are undernourished and overcrowded in unheated rooms and shelters.

Almost every family in Germany suffered the loss of at least one of its sons. Since the Germans surrendered unconditionally some news may trickle thru from the British and American zones regarding the fate of those taken prisoner. But there is no news of those captured in Russia or those our armies refused to accept and turned back into Russian hands. There is little news also from those in French hands.

The only German prisoners repatriated so far indicate that the Russians are repatriating only those unfit for work. British questioners in Berlin of worn out German prisoners discharged by the Russians were told that of 100,000 Germans captured at Stalingrad barely 60,000 are alive today.

Physical Wrecks Return

Capt. J. G. Johnson, British commandent of the Invalidenstrasse transit camp, where most prisoners discharged from the east are received, said, "One can well believe the death rate when one sees the miserable wrecks coming thru here. All those received here are sick and incapable of further work."

Doctors who had treated three PW's who had arrived at Bremerhaven, told the same story. These PW's were incapable of work. They said the Russians are not letting any one fit to work go.

At Stein, three miles from Nuernberg, and site of the Faber pencil works, there normally were 6,300 inhabitants. The town is intact as far as bombing was concerned, but the pencil factories are closed owing to the lack of raw materials. Graphite for the pencils used to come from the Urals, and this supply has been cut off.

7,000 Dead from One Town

The burgomeister said that of the 6,300 inhabitants 800 were called up for the armed forces. Of these, 160 are known to be dead, while 240 still are missing. Half already have returned, he said.

Pforzheim, between Stuttgart and Baden-Baden, has a population of 80,000 normally. In a daylight bombing raid on Feb. 23, 17,000 persons were killed. The town supplied 11,000 soldiers to the Germany army and navy. The burgomeister estimated that of these, 7,000 are dead, wounded, or missing. He estimated that of the 11,000 who went to war 4,000 will come back, but that many are not back yet.

Death Rate Increases

Pforzheim once was a great jewelry manufacturing center. Three-fourths of the town was flattened.

The death rate among children and elderly persons has increased at an alarming rate since the war's end, the burgomeister said. In 1944 there were 1,700 births and 1,800 natural deaths in Pforzheim. From Jan. 30 to Oct. 20 this year there were 240 births and 5,200 deaths.

The deaths, he said, were due largely to undernourishment and lack of medicaments. "Mourning over their dead has made countless Germans still alive lose the will to live," the hotel proprietor with whom I visited remarked.

CZECHS INSIST POLES RETURN TESCHEN AREA

WARSAW, Poland, Nov. 3 (AP)—Joseph Hejret, Czechoslovakian minister to Poland, said today he believed all territorial disputes between Poland and Czechoslovakia would be settled peacefully, but added that the Czechs would insist upon regaining possession of the Teschen industrial area, coal mining center. Also to be settled is a dispute over the German area of Kladsko [Glatz] south of Breslau.

The Czech minister said in an interview that his country "can see no reason why" the frontiers fixed after World War I., giving Czechoslovakia the Teschen area, should not be restored.

[Teschen, disputed for generations, was taken over by Poland from Czechoslovakia in 1938, shortly after Munich. Later the Germans took control. Polish forces again occupied the area last June.]

CLUB SWINGING POLICE QUELL NEW CAIRO RIOT

Mobs Attack Theater; Smash Windows

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 3 (AP)—Club swinging police quickly suppressed a new outburst of anti-Zionist rioting today when rampaging mobs for the second day stoned business establishments and smashed shop windows in downtown Cairo.

The riots, which killed nine persons and injured 520 in Cairo and Alexandria, were strongly denounced by Premier Nokrashi Pasha as inspired by "evil hands." He promised "justice will take its full course with the criminals." Most of Cairo had returned to near normal this afternoon.

The renewed demonstrations lasted less than an hour. Crowds surged thru Soliman Pasha st., one of Cairo's most fashionable shopping centers, smashing windows and stoning the Metro movie theater, operated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Rioting Spreads

From Soliman Pasha st., the rioting spread to other main streets in the business district. Shopkeepers immediately closed their establishments, lowering metal or wooden shutters over the windows.

In Cairo's Malika Farida square, the center of yesterday's heaviest rioting, all Jewish shops remained closed. In Alexandria's shopping center not one pane of glass remained intact. Communications were at a complete standstill. Cafes and theaters remained closed. Many shops in the bazar section of Cairo were badly shattered but workmen already had begun repairs.

College students continued demonstrations within college grounds, shouting "down with Zionism," but no disturbances were reported. Students at Fuad university sent a note to the British and American embassies protesting against the policies of the two countries on Palestine.

Police Patrol Cities

Reports from Alexandria said three more persons had died after yesterday's rioting, bringing the total deaths there to nine. No deaths were reported in Cairo or Port Said, Zagazig and Mansura, which were said to be quite today.

Maj. Gen. T. W. Fitzpatrick, acting commandant of the Cairo police, took personal charge of the police detachments which broke up this morning's outbursts.

Strong police forces patroled the business sections of Cairo and Alexandria in army trucks and mounted guard over damaged shops to prevent looting. Hundreds of demonstrators were arrested during the day, in addition to 310 persons which the premier said were arrested yesterday.

Nokrashi Pasha drove to one of the rioting scenes yesterday and, when a mob raided a large department store, personally arrested some of the looters. He said he seized them by the "scruff of the neck and placed them in custody."

Allied Troops in Barracks

American and British troops were still restricted to their barracks.

The influential weekly newspaper Akbar el Youm said it had learned that Zionist leaders in Cairo hired hoodlums to stone Jewish shops in order to discredit the demonstrations, called in protest on the 28th anniversary of the issuance of the Balfour declaration promising a Jewish national home in Palestine.

Salem Arb Pasha, leader of the young Moslem organization in Cairo, said he disapproved of looting Jewish shops and declared this might harm the Arab cause. A similar opinion was expressed by Abul Eyoun, grand ulema of Alexandria [a religious teacher].

Shoot at Lebanese President

LONDON, Nov. 3 (AP)—An exchange telegraph dispatch from Cairo said today an attempt was made to assassinate the Lebanese president, Beshara al-Khoury, near Beyrouth yesterday. The president was driving with his wife when a shot was fired from an approaching car, the dispatch said, but neither was injured.

Urges Palestine as Sanctuary

JERUSALEM, Palestine, Nov. 3 (AP)—The clandestine Jewish radio station "Voice of Israel" said today that the anti-Zionist outbreaks in Egypt demonstrated the insecurity of Jews in neighboring Arab countries, and proved that Palestine should be made a sanctuary for them as well as for European Jews who survived nazi persecution. Palestine was quiet again after the widespread action against the country's communication lines earlier in the week.

Girl Scouts Sing with '2 Ton Baker'

Guests on W-G-N

Thirty members of the Chicago Heights Girl Scout troop No. 1 made music with "Two-Ton Baker the Music Maker" yesterday during a visit to Baker's 8:15 a. m. broadcast from the W-G-N studios. Strains of the current song hits "Atchison, Topeka and the Sante Fe" and "Sentimental Journey" were sung over the air by the young Scouts.

The visit was the result of Baker's friendship with O. J. Feiffer, conductor on an Illinois Central suburban train which the W-G-N musician rides regularly. Feiffer's wife, director of the Scout group, accompanied the teen-agers to the broadcast.

CHICAGO NEGRO TAKES OATH AS FEDERAL JUDGE

Irwin C. Mollison

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Irvin C. Mollison, Chicago, first Negro to be appointed to a federal judgeship, was sworn today as a judge of the United States Customs court here. Presiding Judge Webster J. Oliver administered the oath.

Mollison, whose appointment by President Truman was confirmed unanimously by the senate, said he felt it was "an important step in the recognition of the colored people of the United States." He resigned as a member of the Chicago board of education to take the post.

Among those present were Louis Arthur Grimes, chief justice of the Supreme court of the republic of Liberia; Rep. Dawson [D., Ill.], Commissioner Edward M. Snead of Cook county, Ill., and John Sengstacke, publisher of the Chicago Defender.

TEAR GAS FIRED AT PERON RALLY IN BUENOS AIRES

Interior Minister Quits in Reported Row

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 3 (AP)—Two tear gas bombs were fired today while police were asking demonstrators in favor of Col. Juan Peron's candidacy for president of Argentina to halt their parade.

The rally was banned yesterday by Interior Minister Col. Bartolome Descalzo, who resigned soon afterward and was replaced today by Gen. Felipe Urdapilleta.

Ignore Police Request

Three hundred persons began a march from Buenos Aires to a Peron rally in suburban Avellaneda. Two gas grenades exploded along the line of march, but the crowd continued, ignoring a police request to disperse.

Urdapilleta, the fifth interior minister in three weeks, declared he would continue Descalzo's policy of impartiality in the elections scheduled next April 7.

Some observers said Descalzo's resignation, announced last midnight by President Edelmiro Farrell, resulted from an intra-cabinet dispute over his banning the demonstration.

Defeatist Spirit Spreads

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Nov. 3—Argentine political parties reportedly are making active preparations to campaign in the forthcoming general elections, despite innumerable obstacles placed in their path by the ruling powers.

The enthusiasm customarily displayed is noticeably less pronounced, however. Argentine politicians taking refuge here explain in effect, "While for obvious reasons the leaders cannot adopt a defeatist attitude and tell the party rank and file they are fighting a hopeless battle, they are fully aware this feeling is spreading, and therefore find it difficult to beat the drum and prophesy final victory with the perseverance a Goebbels [former nazi propaganda chief] would display in like circumstances.

"They make the most of the fact that Col. Juan Peron [Argentine "strong man"] is opposed by a large section of the army, navy, commerce, industry, and responsible labor entities, but they dodge the task of explaining why the betting odds are against such a combination proving successful.

"Dice Still Loaded"

"The Socialists hedge by saying that such a combination 'must prevail in the long run.' In this connection it may be recalled that the suicide of the founder of the Argentine Radical party [Union Civica], Leandro Alem, half a century ago, was caused by the depression resulting from his realization of the hopelessness of the struggle against the official party. That party, intrenched behind the police and ministry of the interior, conducted the elections to its liking.

"With the exception of the election of Irogoyen [Hipolito Irogoyen, leader of the Radical party] to the presidency, when untrammeled operation of the secret voting law permitted free elections, the loading of the dice in favor of the official party has continued uninterrupted to date."

GREEN CHEERED BY PROSPECTS FOR CANAL BILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3—Gov. Green of Illinois was jubilant tonight over prospects of speedy congressional action on the proposal that the federal government transfer ownership of the route of the Illinois-Michigan canal to the state of Illinois for construction of a new southwest super-highway.

The governor, Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] and Rep. Howell [R., Ill.] gained support for the measure during a busy day that closed tonight with Gov. Green as the principal speaker at a dinner honoring Atty. Gen. Clark.

Howell is the author of a house bill authorizing the transfer, which is now on file in the house public lands committee. After conferring with colleagues Howell expressed optimism at the chances for getting the bill to the floor of the house, where little opposition is foreseen. A companion bill is pending in the senate.

High government officials including members of the Supreme court were present when Green spoke tonight before the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity in the Mayflower hotel. The governor is grand tribune or chaiman of the board of the fraternity. He introduced Clark at a ceremony in which the attorney general was made an honorary member of the fraternity.

Record Is Set

An ex-WAVE and an ex-WAC are among the 36 women—an all-time record—in the freshman class at the University of Illinois college of medicine, 1853 Polk st. The women range in age from 18 to 34 and many have worked in laboratories as technicians or researchers. Most already have indicated special fields of medical interest. Several plan to become medical missionaries. Research, obstetrics, pediatrics, nutrition, and psychiatry are the spheres attracting others. "The chief trouble with women in medicine," university authorities said, "is matrimonial. They are likely to sidetrack the profession for domesticity."

BRAZIL'S NEW REGIME NAMES 16 GOVERNORS

Replaces President's Deposed Men

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 3 (AP)—The new government of President Jose Linhares named 16 new state governors today to replace the appointees of the ousted Vargas regime, and the army which put Linhares into power resumed its normal functions.

Jose Linhares

A presidential palace spokesman said the list of new governors had been held up temporarily to delete the name of Ovidio Abreu, former financial secretary of state, as governor for the big state of Minas Geraes. No official explanation was given for the deletion of Abreu's name.

The government news service announced tonight that Nisio Baptista Oliveira, chief justice of the appellate court of Minmas Geraes, had been appointed governor of the state.

Army Back at Stations

Word of his appointment precipitated a governmental crisis earlier in the day, when Gen. Enrico Gaspar Dutra, candidate for president in the Dec. 2 elections, threatened to withdraw his candidacy in protest.

War Minister Goes Monteiro, denying rumors that he planned to resign, reported that the Brazilian armed forces had returned to their stations. He said the army wanted now only "to live in the shadow of the law," but added:

"We shall be alert and vigilant, so that the government may take to good ends the aims and great task of reconstitutionalization of the country."

The navy minister, Adm. Dodworth Martins, warned that the population "should not become duly enthusiastic over the optimism of the moment, for there still exist some malcontents."

The only disturbances today were minor. On the downtown Avenida Rio Branco fighting occurred after Queremistas infiltrated into a group cheering the candidacy of Gen. Eduardo Gomez, chief opponent to Dutra.

Communists Join Group

The Queremistas have been supporting Vargas, and had been joined by the Communists in demands for a constituent assembly instead of elections.

Pictures and interviews with the deposed President Getullio Vargas were carried in afternoon newspapers. He is at his farm in São Borja, and dispatches from there quoted him as advising members of the partido social democratico to continue their support of Dutra, and to respect authority and obey the law. Other dispatches quoted Vargas as saying he was undecided about his political future.

What's World Coming To? Kitten Killed by Mouse!

Lawton, Okla., Nov. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Shirley Carter spotted a mouse in the bathtub drain, conked it with a slipper, and threw it on her back porch, where a half grown kitten spotted the creature and tossed it in the air. Revived, the mouse bit the kitten in the neck, severing an artery. The kitten died, the mouse escaped, and Mrs. Carter is shopping for a mousetrap.

SNOW FLURRIES USHER IN COLD WAVE IN CITY

Snow flurries fell briefly in the Chicago area yesterday as far south as South Bend, Ind—a final, visual warning that the balmy days of fall are past and it's time to dig in for winter.

Forecaster H. L. Jacobson said the cold wave was riding on a northwest wind and that it was expected to strike Chicago shortly after midnight this morning. He predicted lows of 28 degrees in the city and 24 degrees in the western suburbs—the lowest temperatures since March 8.

The snow flurries were brief and so slight as to be immeasurable, Jacobson said. A similar fall was reported in the western suburbs two weeks ago. Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan were in line for light snows. Jacobson said temperatures will climb today and tomorrow, but the cold snap will return for a longer stay early in the week.

ARMY COVER UP IN PEARL HARBOR PROBE CHARGED

SenatorsAccuseStimson and Marshall

bers of the Pearl Harbor investigating committee now enjoy under administration efforts to gag the committee.

"I think I may summarize the results of Maj. Clausen's investigations," Brewster told his colleagues. "They carried him entirely around the world in securing affidavits in which persons who had previously testified before the army Pearl Harbor board repudiated in substantial respects the evidence they had previously given.

"What kind of way is that to conduct an investigation? What else could have been in mind except to clear the records of certain individuals concerned?"

Provokes Senate Battle

The Brewster-Ferguson disclosures form part of the background of the Republican battle in the Pearl Harbor investigating committee against the Democratic majority's efforts to stifle the investigation, which provoked one of the bitterest battles ever fought on the floor of the senate yesterday.

Ferguson and Brewster pitched into Senate Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.], who introduced the resolution calling for the investigation of Pearl Harbor and who was named chairman of the committee.

As chairman, Barkley for two months has been asserting that he is going to conduct a full, impartial investigation into the responsibility for Pearl Harbor.

The Republican senators charged on the senate floor that Barkley and his Democratic colleagues were attempting to hamstring the inquiry by voting for a set of committee rules which would prevent a full, impartial investigation.

The explosion on the floor of the senate is expected to force a modification of the rules thru arousing congress and the public over what has been going on behind the closed doors of the committee's secret sessions.

Italy GI Redeployment Goes Swiftly, Says Army

ROME, Nov. 3 (AP)—The army today told American soldiers complaining of delays getting home that redeployment is proceeding smoothly. The 7th replacement depot at Naples handled 21,856 men in October, compared with 30,145 in September, it was announced, and all 60 pointers in the Mediterranean are due to sail this month. About 50,000 of the 107,000 GIs left in the theater have 60 points or more.

ICKES RUNS INTO A $41,000 SNAG ON HIS EXPENSES

Seeks O. K. on Plane Charter in Junket

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3—Harold L. Ickes, interior secretary and petroleum administrator, is having expense account trouble.

Lindsay C. Warren

Ickes, who takes a fierce pride in his vitriolic tongue, is speaking in honeyed accents these days to the general accounting office which must approve all federal expense accounts before they can be honored.

His problem is to tuck a $41,000 item for charter of an airplane for his recent oil treaty junket to Europe into his expense account so it will pass the desk of Controler General Lindsay C. Warren.

Ickes Asks Help

In a most unusual procedure, Ickes has thrown up his hands and called upon the general accounting office for help in his problem, according to members of the general accounting office staff and information gathered at the interior department.

This is something like a reporter hiring a limousine on an assignment and then going to his managing editor, who knows that the taxi fare between the points covered is 35 cents, and asking how he can get $15 for limousine hire on his expense account.

Ickes does not want Warren to ask embarrassing questions as to why he didn't take army transportation airplanes on his visit to London for oil treaty negotiations and subsequent junketing in Europe.

Visits Germany and Denmark

The petroleum administrator left with a staff in the middle of September and returned in the middle of October. He visited France, Germany, and Denmark as well as London, where an oil treaty recently submitted to the senate was drawn.

The document is a modification of a proposed treaty which the senate would not ratify a year ago.

The Ickes plane reportedly was chartered from a trans-Atlantic air line, evidently because the secretary wished to be in a position to go when he wanted to go and not take chances on delay in waiting for army transport planes.

THE AGE OF DECADENCE

The art of government appears to be lost in the greater part of the world and to be in a state of degeneracy nearly everywhere. The old times in Europe seem like bygone golden days. Then the German was regarded as a good natured, music loving head of family with a long pipe and a large stein. Austria was gay and, altho the nationalities in parliament threw paper wads and howled, the wildest thing in the empire was the Hungarian dance. Italy was the pleasant host to beauty loving tourists. More liberty was permitted under the czars than the Reds have ever allowed. Only the Turk was unspeakable. Now everything is.

The old paradise was a false one, of course, altho it looks beautiful in a mirage beyond the ruins and savagery of today. The masses of people the world over who wanted to pull up stakes and get into the United States proved the undesirability of life where they were. So long as we could receive unrestricted immigration we exercised a stabilizing influence by drawing off the more desperate, the more despairing, or the more adventurous of the various populations. When these outlets were closed the wars and revolutions began to brew.

In 1914 the governments of Europe forgot their old trick of isolating or localizing a war; of sealing it off so that there would be more onlookers than fighters; more people at the ringside than in the ring. That practice had saved their bacon for a hundred years. When they failed to make use of it they were done for. Now even an English king must read a socialist speech and France is to try a left handed republic with the Communists as the largest political party. The revolution which began when the governments forgot that big wars do not pay did not lead to emancipation. The enraged or bewildered individuals who thought they were overthrowing privilege and prerogative fell under a despotism more absolute and more terrifying than anything they had ever known. And they got another war.

Now the world is filled with lunatics crying out against fascism and trying to establish its living image wherever they can gain the upper hand. There is more slavery in the world today than under the Roman empire and not nearly as much well enforced law or well guarded peace. There is less liberty for the supposedly free individual in many lands than there was under the feudal system and not as much protection for him. The terror which prevailed a few years in the French revolution was stopped by the resurging decency of the French people. No one has been able to stop the terrors by which most of Europe has been governed.

Government has not only degenerated in ethical standards and moral purposes but also in intelligence and effectiveness. At the best its most ambitious efforts are its worst. In this statement the government of the United States must be included, altho its brutalities have been minor compared with the brutalities nearly everywhere else. However, it has displayed some of the malevolence of autocratic authority when provoked by a citizen's resistance. It may be asked whether these tendencies are transitory and evolutionary or whether they are indicative of a long time obscuration of human intelligence, decency, and humanity. You can't tell from the surface appearance of the world today.

The contradictions of world affairs would amuse the inmates of an insane asylum. South American nations which we call peace loving democracies are blowing off their autocratic tops. British Indian troops from a land which says it wants freedom are shooting Asiatics in Java who say they want freedom. Great Britain is trying to make it safe for the Dutch, recently released from slavery, to return to possessions unwilling to receive them.

The Japanese are being used in Indo-China to help the British Indian troops kill the revolutionary natives until the French, now enjoying the privilege of stretching their legs out of German clutches and shooting their own people, can get back in force to say whose land Indo-China is. In China, that great power and peace loving democracy, which has no power, is not a nation, and, as a government, does not like either democracy or peace, is falling into civil war because some millions of fellows called Communists—we'd probably call them the Chinese equivalent of Iowa farmers—will not submit to a graft ridden government which our government supports and the Russians pretend to support.

This Asiatic double dealing is beyond any ordinary understanding. American troops are caught in a three way conspiracy. They want to come home.

The governments which pretend to rule and do misrule the world have a world organization set up, but they cannot even hold a secretarial conference. They have all the apparatus for enduring world peace and they are unable to agree on a peace treaty even for Italy. They are racing to new armaments. Conditions are so bad in Germany that our troops probably will soon be shooting hostages and then every ideal of the American Republic will go overboard.

RIGHT DOWN THE PARTY LINE

Meet the latest friend of the GIs. He is Joe Curran, the communist stooge who runs the CIO National Maritime union. Curran says that unless the government speeds up the return of soldiers from abroad he will recommend that his union refuse to provide crews for any ships except troopships.

That wasn't the way Curran was acting just a few weeks ago. Curran's commy pal, Harry Bridges, was trying to take over the AFL longshoremen's union in New York thru a so-called rank and file movement and a wildcat strike. They tied up troopships in New York harbor, they booed and jeered American soldiers who had to unload the ships, because the longshoremen refused to do so, they kept ships from going back to Europe to bring home more soldiers, and in all these activities Curran and the comrades in the National Maritime union cooperated actively with Bridges and his gang.

Now Curran is excited about getting soldiers home from the war. The answer to that one isn't hard to find. Joe Stalin wants the American army out of Europe as quickly as possible. Curran, as usual, is following the party line, which in the last few weeks seems to have taken another of its twists. Curran doesn't give a whoop in Hades for American soldiers, for his own union members, for his own country, or for anything else except the Communist party, which uses him in its traitorous activities.

THE HEART OF AIR POWER

Down at Wright field, at Dayton, O., the army air force shot the works a few weeks ago. They spread out for public inspection not only the air weapons that were used in winning the war but also those weapons which until two months ago were the most closely guarded secrets, because they had not yet been brought into action against the enemy on a general scale.

It is not unlikely that the air force officers were disturbed by the popularity of at least one of their exhibits. It was a relatively simple little gadget, which sprays a waterproofing fluid on the windshield of an airplane, with the result that water won't stick to it. The droplets of water sprayed on a piece of glass so treated do not obscure vision and they cannot freeze there. The popularity of the exhibit was easily explained. People wanted to know when they could get it for their automobiles. The answer is very soon. Their interest isn't in future wars; it's in the conveniences of peace time.

While the weapons were being displayed at Dayton Gen. Arnold was describing a number of the newest of them to the senate military affairs committee. Among them were the television bomb, which is America's answer to the kamikaze plane.

Gen. Arnold's plea in Washington was for a retention of at least the semi-independent status which the air force enjoyed by Presidential order during this war. With the lapse of war time legislation the air force will become merely another corps in the army. If that happens, he fears, and probably fears rightly, that it will be unable to continue the development of new weapons such as contributed so substantially to victory in this war.

Future air warfare, Gen. Arnold says, cannot be auxiliary to ground or naval action, because it may occur hundreds or thousands of miles from such action. He is right. We have not yet sufficiently digested the lessons of this war, and particularly the potentialities of the atomic bomb, to know in any detail what kind of a national defense system we shall require in the future. It is certain, however, that we shall have to have some kind of an air force, preferably one with considerable independence of action.

It is doubly certain that whatever kind of air force we have we must continue energetic research to devise better planes and better air weapons. One of the most impressive exhibits at the Wright field fair was a simple sign, posted above a group of giant engines which generate four and five thousand horse power each. It said that every plane which brought us air victory in Europe was designed before we entered the war, and most of them before the war started in Europe.

Every plane shown at Wright field, including many which did not see warfare, is obsolescent today. There are more efficient planes on the drawing boards or in the testing laboratories already.

Wright field is the center of the army air research. Its buildings, greatly expanded during the war, are larger and more numerous than the laboratories of the biggest college of engineering in the country. It represents an investment of more than a hundred million dollars; during the war it was the control center for the expenditure of more than 500 times that sum. At its peak its personnel, a large portion of whom were engaged in administrative rather than research activities, did not number more than 25,000.

Whatever this country spends on air power, the expenditure will be largely useless unless the research facilities represented by the Wright field laboratories are liberally supported. There, and in the university and industrial laboratories of the country, we must continue to fight a battle during peace time to maintain the technical lead which American research and industrial capacity gave our air force during the war just won.

PEARL HARBOR BACKGROUND

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

Tonight I am bringing you the background of the Pearl Harbor catastrophe. What I have to say does not imply any criticism of the commanders at Pearl Harbor, of the boards of officers of the army and navy that have reviewed the catastrophe, or of any individual.

I am giving you a background that was so familiar to these boards that they did not think it necessary to mention it.

It is obvious that if the different members of any army or navy operated according to different theories, there would be chaos. They must all follow the same idea. This is called "indoctrination." Wrong indoctrination is not as bad as none.

The results of the early campaigns of a war come about more often because one side has the right indoctrination and the other side the wrong than from the difference in skill of the commanding officers or the degree of training of the subordinates. If the war is prolonged, both sides learn the correct theory and the stronger wins.

At the outset of this war the axis had the correct indoctrination—the allies and ourselves a faulty one. That is what led to Dunkerque and Pearl Harbor. In the case of Dunkerque we may wonder whether it would not have been better for the British to have fought it out with their allies and have weakened the Germans as much as possible rather than to have left their allies and their weapons and fled to England, but that was not the indoctrination of the British army.

In our case much of the damage of Pearl Harbor could have been remedied if our carrier planes had attacked the Japanese carriers, whose location was quite thoroly established. The ocean from northeast to south had been thoroly covered by ships in touch with Pearl Harbor and the radar had located the Jap planes three degrees east of north and 130 miles away, but that was not according to the indoctrination of the navy.

The indoctrination of our army was based on the maxim that "infantry is the queen of the battlefield." The theory was that "the infantry is the principal arm and that all of the other arms of the service are to be used in support of the infantry." All of the action of cavalry, field artillery, engineers, signal corps, aircraft, and anti-aircraft artillery was subordinate to what the infantry should do. It was not the mission of the anti-aircraft artillery to do any shooting on its own account.

On top of this the mission of the army was, of course, to prevent the capture of Oahu. That is obvious and is apparent in the reports. The references to air attack lack conviction. Besides, the last days' preparations had been to resist invasion. The garrison was below the estimated necessary strength. Men could not be added, but the strength of artillery, the killing arm, was doubled in the troops on hand.

For many years our war plan had been that the navy should be located on the west coast of the United States and that Hawaii should be an oiling station. Upon the approach of war the navy was to disappear into the blue and carry out its naval plans, using Hawaii as an advanced base of operations.

For years the army had maneuvered along the beaches and over the mountains of Hawaii, preparing to resist invasion. Its battle training had been to that end and its air force was to be used to assist in this resistance. The unwillingness of the ordnance department to issue ammunition to the anti-aircraft guns was based on the theory that there would be plenty of time to issue this ammunition before a landing could be made. The thought that the anti-aircraft guns of the army were to be used to protect the navy was alien to the military minds. An agreement so to use it was purely perfunctory.

We have not been informed when or why the fleet was moved from the west coast of the United States to Pearl Harbor, but its being in Pearl Harbor only added to the greater responsibility of the army to hold that island. If the islands were captured, the fleet would be compelled to sail out under the same disadvantageous conditions as Cervera's fleet faced when it sailed from Santiago in Cuba.

It is fair to Gen. Short to say that all he knew about navy affairs was what was told to him by naval officers. It would have been more than untactful if he had doubted the naval belief that battleships could not be injured by airplanes. His little squadron of planes, as is borne out by testimony, was to be used in protection of his army and in resisting a landing, and after it had been destroyed, the testimony says, the remaining personnel were to fight on land, just as the remaining personnel of the air corps on Bataan fought on land under the leadership of the heroic Dyess. That it could be spared from its mission to aid the infantry hold the island was unthinkable to navy and army alike.

Turning now to the navy: the navy was entirely battleship minded. The principal arm of the navy was the battleship and all of the other vessels of the navy—cruisers, destroyers, submarines, airplane carriers, airplanes—were to subserve the battleships, scout for them, and protect them while their 16 inch guns destroyed the enemy.

The high command of the navy thought little of aviation. To them, it was merely the eyes of the fleet to find the enemy for the battleships to destroy. It did not think that bombs could seriously injure battleships. It was more anti-Mitchell than the army command.

Our navy indoctrination did not think much of torpedoes. In the Civil war it declared them to be illegal weapons, such as gas was considered in the last war, and such as they are now trying to make atom bombs. It never did anything with torpedoes before this war. It did nothing in the Spanish-American war. It did nothing in the first World war, altho, as we know now, a bold use of torpedo boats might have destroyed the German navy in its harbors.

As it thought little of aviation and little of torpedoes, it thought almost nothing of a combination of airplanes and torpedoes and had no fear whatever of an airplane-torpedo attack on the fleet in Pearl Harbor.

It must be that the high command of the navy thought that the battleships tied up in Pearl Harbor behind a submarine net were safe from attack or it would not have had them there.

According to navy doctrine, battleships in harbor were entirely safe against air borne torpedoes and so strong against bombs that the manning of half the anti-aircraft guns of the fleet—and Washington knew that half of them were manned—was adequate precaution against possible air attack, even if they knew in Washington that it was under way.

After the defeat of Pearl Harbor the indoctrination of army and navy changed abruptly. So to understand the battle, as I will tell it in my next lecture, you must understand the indoctrination as it stood on that day.

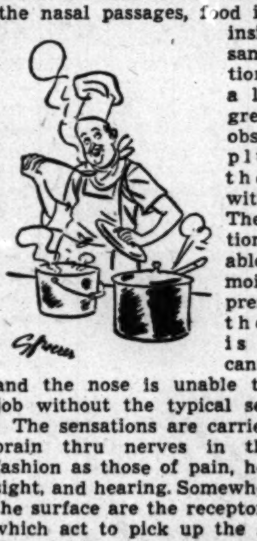
OUR SENSES OF TASTE AND SMELL

THE senses of taste and smell are closely associated and, should one be affected, the other is likely to be disturbed. When a "cold in the head" blocks the nasal passages, food is usually insipid. The same situation, but to a lesser degree, can be observed by plugging the nostrils with cotton. These functions are disabled unless moisture is present. If the tongue is dry, it cannot taste and the nose is unable to do its job without the typical secretions.



The sensations are carried to the brain thru nerves in the same fashion as those of pain, heat, cold, sight, and hearing. Somewhere along the surface are the receptor centers which act to pick up the stimulus. For sight we have two eyes; for taste, nature has provided hundreds of little buds, arranged in clusters along the membrane of the tongue chiefly; others are found in the soft and hard palates, pharynx, and epiglottis. These minute structures are extremely selective. Those in the tip concentrate mainly on sweet and salt; in the back, bitter flavors, and on the sides, sour or acid. Furthermore, a substance such as saccharine may appear sweet when placed on the anterior portion but bitter at the rear.

Loss of taste [ageusia] may follow derangement of the nerves in this area, or any abnormality affecting the membrane of the tongue. Perversions are not uncommon in fever, dyspepsia, pregnancy, hysteria, and the excessive use of condiments. There is no truth in the statement that dentures alter the savor of food. We must remember that taste preferences are not stationary; with the passing years, various alterations take place.

An increased sensitiveness is rare but some persons have cultivated the gustatory perception to a high degree. Nevertheless, victims of mental upsets encounter this symptom to an abnormal degree.

It has been estimated that the sense of smell is 24,000 times more impressionable than that of taste. The olfactory nerves are located in the roof of the nose. They are capable of distinguishing a diversity of odors which are divided roughly into pleasant and unpleasant. No suitable classification of aromatic materials has been made similar to colors in vision and tones in hearing, but in general we refer to them as fruity, flowery, putrid, spicy, etc. Many so-called odors are in reality irritations. An example of this phenomenon is household ammonia.

The organs of smell are fatigued more easily than any other. The first whiff of a rose is delightful but if the fragrance is inhaled steadily for one minute, the scent practically disappears. A cook may be oblivious of the redolence of the kitchen; but some one coming into the room from the outside would be conscious immediately of the emanations for a short period. It has been said that oil of camphor may suggest turpentine but, by sniffing the drug continuously, a nutmeg aroma is observed.

A few individuals are entirely devoid of the sense [anosmia], a defect which is similar to color-blindness. Temporary distortions or impairment—even total failure—may occur because of a mechanical obstruction caused by polyps or other growths, sinus involvement, or the inhalation of various fumes and poisons. The symptom may be the only untoward manifestation following injury to the head. Disease of the brain and neuroses may bring on the disorder. Abnormal susceptibility usually originates outside the nose and may be associated with emotional crises or mental aberrations.

Altho these sensations are complex and difficult to evaluate, any irregularity—particularly if sudden—warrants additional study. Occasionally trouble elsewhere in the body is indicated.

YOUTHFUL APPEARANCE

F. T. M. writes: What causes a person of 27 to look like 17? This makes me unhappy as it seems I scare the boys away because they think I'm just a kid.

REPLY

I've never known the boys to shy away from a 17 year old girl, but this does not answer your question. Your youthful appearance may be on a glandular basis, but a complete examination would be necessary before this diagnosis could be made. Perhaps your face is not marked with lines of care and responsibility. It may be that more sophisticated garments and hair-do will make you look nearer your age.

PENICILLIN AND ACNE

J. A. writes: I've heard of the five day penicillin cure for acne. Is this effective?

REPLY

The drug, applied locally and administered internally, will cause the pustular lesions to disappear. But the basic disorder will not be influenced. There is any time limit as some individuals respond more quickly than others.

GROWING MAN

R. M. writes: I am 46 years old and was ill in the hospital, where I had two transfusions. Since then I feel as if I am growing. Is this possible?

REPLY

Just feeling like growing does not mean that you actually have added inches. But should the scale reveal that this is the case, I would suggest that you submit to an examination by a glandular specialist.

GLANDULAR FEVER

L. S. writes: Is infectious mononucleosis serious?

REPLY

As a rule, no. Practically all victims recover.

STORY OF AN ADOPTED YANK

Cicero, Ill., Oct. 26—Back in December, 1941, when The Tribune sponsored the "Adopt a Yank" program, I called and requested the name of one of the boys who would be unable to spend Christmas at home that first year of the war. You gave me the name of Oswin Spitz from Olney, Ill., at that time stationed at Camp Forrest, Tenn. My husband and I packed up a nice box for Christmas and wrote him a letter stating that we had adopted him as our Yank. He acknowledged the gifts and was very grateful for being remembered.

From that time on we corresponded while he was in the United States and during the 20 months he was overseas. He sent us a photograph of himself and we in turn did likewise. Not only did we remember him at Christmas, but at different times we would send him a box of candy, nuts, etc. Among our folks and friends he was known as our Adopted Yank and always signed his letters as such.

Just the other night as we were having dinner the telephone rang and it was Corp. Spitz. He had arrived in Chicago from Fort Sheridan, where he had been just discharged. I can't begin to tell you how excited we were to meet him. We immediately rode downtown to pick him up at the U. S. O. lounge of one of the railroads. He was all we expected him to be and more, and even tho his time was limited, he was able to spend the night with us. It was a grand and glorious feeling to finally meet this young fellow who had done such a swell job in Europe.

GERTRUDE FICK

RAILROADING BORDERLINE SOLDIERS

Topeka, Kas., Oct. 31—Now processing at Topeka army air base preparatory to overseas shipment are over 4,000 men. A roster of these men shows that particular attention has been paid to their selection. The choice was apparently determined by length of service only. The men selected were the ones with the longest length of service, but under 36 points as of Sept. 2 the last computation date of discharge points. The apparent reason for this method of selection has been to railroad all the men with the longest service overseas before the end of the year, the time at which the point system is to be abolished.

We have expected overseas shipment for the entire length of our service and would accept the fact with no comment if we were the logical men to ship. However, we are well aware of the fact that there are many men with less than two years' service available at this time.

Also stationed here at Topeka is a group of men with less than two years' service, some with less than a year, awaiting shipment to points within the United States, posts from which we were called but a few days ago. We are not to be shipped according to job training, but just as so many men, another reason why men with shorter service and less specialist training are more logical to go.

BAKER

WAIT TILL THEY GET HOME

KOREA, Oct. 1—This is just a note to let you know that most of the service men are thankful for the splendid efforts of The Tribune to force the group on Capitol Hill to get the boys home as quickly as possible. It is still my opinion and that of a great many more enlisted men that this demobilization is being carried out primarily as a side interest, and when it pleases the brass hats of the army and navy. I often wonder if the big wigs are hoping that by keeping us over here longer, we might forget our trials, tribulations, and a little of that talk which might injure or kill certain people's political ambitions.

D. H.

FROZEN BY THE NAVY

Flossmoor, Ill., Oct. 30—My husband, who is a naval reservist, has 57 points [needs only 44], has three years and nine months in service, 22 months spent overseas. Now the war is over and his rate, storekeeper disbursing, is frozen! No, he is not entitled to be near home, he must stay at Shoemaker, Cal., rather than be at Great Lakes, to help pay off men who have never left the United States, who have never known what it is to be 8,000 miles from home over the ocean, who do not know the responsibility of dependents—youngsters as compared with his age of 38.

ELLEN GOEWEY

FOREIGNERS FIRST

Oak Park, Ill., Oct. 26—You can send 11 pounds of food or gifts to a foreigner, but if you have four ounces over five pounds going to an American son overseas you are forced to take the package back home and remove the four ounces. Foreigners, as usual, get preference over a son now in his fifth year in his country's service.

A DISGUSTED AMERICAN

VENGEANCE ON THEIR OWN BLOOD

Cleveland, O., Oct. 19—The writer has been in the United States nigh onto 40 years. My two sons are in the forces of the United States and they are still in Germany. But I also had an 80 year old mother, three brothers, and many nephews and nieces there. And tho the war has been over for months I have been unable to ascertain whether or not my kin is alive or dead. It is evident that unless something is done promptly I may be unable to aid them in any way, tho they may be facing death by starvation or exposure.

We of German blood have done our duty to America; in the shops, in offices, in the armed forces of our country, we have taken leading parts. But we have helped to destroy not only the armed might of our adversaries, but their industries, their means of transportation and their cities as well, under the rubble of which thousands of men, women, and children still lie unburied. Some of these may be our parents, our sisters, our brothers, or other relatives.

Seldom in the history of the world has any race been called upon to exact such vengeance on its own blood. What anguish this caused us can only be appreciated by those who have lived thru similar experiences. But now Germany has been defeated and that with our help. We therefore have the right to be heard, at least on the treatment of our own families.

It is now evident what fate has been decided upon for Germany by those bent on its destruction: The 70 million German people who occupied the German reich, which was the most densely populated space of Europe, are to be deprived of about one-half of this space and all of them are to be driven into what is left. To them will be added another 4 million Germans from various countries. Those driven from their homes must leave behind everything they saved and possessed, something which is unknown in European history. These refugees will arrive in the new German area, in which we have destroyed all major cities and industries and where everything else of value has been carted away into other countries, without any means of subsistence. There are but few living quarters and little food and fuel. It is a foregone conclusion that in the next eight months Germany will become a charnel house, a ghastly cauldron of death of women, of children, and the aged. The young and the strong are being detained or shipped to the territories of the justice and peace loving allies where they are kept as slave labor at starvation levels.

Our government is the creation of all of us. In the administration of Germany it represents all of us, too. To aid without protest the persecution and destruction of our immediate kin is a reflection on the honor, humanity and decency of every American, but particularly on every one of German blood.

NO LONGER "ESSENTIAL"

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 29—As a means of providing the army and navy with man power, may I suggest that all those men between 19 and 25 who were declared essential during war because they were working in essential industries as machinists [?], tool and die makers [?], etc., be drafted, and given two years' training in the vocation where strikes don't occur. This would let my son out after three years, and would open up jobs for GI's. Why should these men be deprived of military service, or is the CIO going to have Washington issue honorable discharge buttons to them?

ROBERT HANLON

SHADES OF LYSISTRATA

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 25—If Mr. Truman's recommendation for peace time conscription becomes law, I sincerely hope the women of America will stage a sitdown strike and refuse to cook a meal, wash a dish, or bear a child until it is repealed.

JENNIE M. LIVESAY

FIXED RENTS, MOUNTING COSTS

Chicago, Oct. 23—In The Tribune of Oct. 20 John J. Ryan, OPA area rent director, takes issue with the statements of the various realtors quoted in your paper regarding low rent ceilings in Chicago. Mr. Ryan is lacking in facts, not the realtors. He talks of war workers looking for $100 apartments in February, 1942. A statement more out of line with facts could hardly be made by any one. Apartments renting in Chicago for 12 years previous to 1942 for $100 or more would not amount to more than 1 per cent of the total rental property in the city and would be located along South Shore drive and on the Gold Coast or along Sheridan rd. on the north side. Since when did war workers ever go into these neighborhoods to look for flats?

Apartment rentals all over the south side are at depression levels and do not cover operating costs, with rentals of from $40 for four room apartments to a top of $70 for a six room heated apartment with garage thrown in. Since OPA put rent ceilings in effect, the price of coal has increased $2.50 a ton. Realty taxes are up 15 to 20 per cent; decorating costs, 30 per cent, and everything else that goes into the upkeep of a building is up in proportion. Why does not Mr. Ryan explain why OPA did not freeze all of these items when rents were frozen? Perhaps OPA figured these increased costs would be taken care of thru lend-lease.

The statements of the realtors are 100 per cent right. With taxes in Chicago the highest of any city in the United States except one, and rent ceilings the lowest, I doubt if there is an investor or builder who will put a dime into any new building in Chicago until rent control is abolished or rent ceilings lifted at least 30 per cent.

A VICTIM

RENTS AND NEW BUILDING

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 20—Raise the rent ceilings? Actually, rents should be reduced. For one thing, the buildings are older. In fact, most residential buildings in Chicago and suburbs are so old that the owners should have completely recovered their investment thru savings in income tax permitted by depreciation allowances.

The principal argument advanced by the real estate interests for raising rents is that "low rents" are discouraging new construction. This will come as news to the many hundreds of Chicagoans who have contracted for the construction of new homes and find they can't get them built because of the lack of building materials.

WHO OWNS X-RAY?

Chicago, Nov. 1—Is a patient entitled to X-rays and reports on tests taken in a hospital? They might be of use to the patient later when he is examined by another doctor.

E. H.

While it seems to be a common practice for physicians and dentists to claim ownership of X-ray plates that have been paid for by their patients, we question the soundness of the claim. The amount involved is too small to be worth litigating and hence there are no published decisions squarely in point, but in the case of Dougherty v. Bliss, 244 Ill. App. 282, 285, where the owner of a picture of Abraham Lincoln paid a photographer $4 for making a negative and 35 cents for each print, the court held, "It is not a reasonable inference to assume that appellee would pay the cost of making the 'negative' in order to have it become the property of appellant after appellee had paid for it." McGarry v. Mercer Co., 272 Mich. 501, holds X-ray belongs to physicians. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

L. F. H. writes: "I had a minor speech difficulty when a child. I was cured of it while I went to high school for four years and for two years afterward when I worked. As soon as I entered the army this trouble recurred and thruout four and a half years of service I was unable to overcome it. I still have the difficulty and plan to attend a speech clinic. Would this come under the classification of a disability and entitle me to a pension? What percentage of disability would be granted to me? I intend to attend college under the GI bill. Will the expenses defrayed by the government for books, fees, tuition and subsistence be deducted from any future bonus that may be granted?"

You may apply for compensation because of your speech difficulty and a veterans administration medical board will make a determination whether your condition is service-connected or service-aggravated after consideration of all the facts, including your pre-service history. Fill your application for compensation on a veterans administration form 526. As the GI bill now stands, Sec. 1505 says any benefits received under the law—education, subsistence, or unemployment compensation—will be deducted from any future bonus that may be authorized and that if any government guaranteed loan is outstanding the guaranteed portion of the loan must be paid to the extent that the bonus will permit. A proposal now is before congress to repeal this section and to increase the subsistence allowance for students.

ARMY AND NAVY APPROVE STARS FOR 112 BATTLES

Tribune Compiles List of Ribbon Honors

(The first compilation of campaign and battle stars authorized by the army and the navy during World War II. has been made by The Chicago Tribune with the cooperation of the army and the navy. Families of men still overseas will find it an interesting tabulation to save for perusal when the men return. The army's list is presented today; the navy's will be given in a subsequent issue.)

BY WILLIAM STRAND
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3—The army and the navy have authorized 112 campaign and battle stars for their respective theater ribbons since Pearl Harbor.

The army list includes 34 specific battle honors in the European, Asiatic, Pacific, and American theaters. The navy has authorized 78 stars, including engagements by the fleet, the marines, and the coast guard.

Honorable Service Required

Army regulations provide that an individual wearing a star must have served honorably and been present for duty at some time during the period in which his unit participated in the battle for which credit is given.

Bronze stars indicating campaigns or battles are not to be confused with the bronze star medal, which is awarded for heroic or meritorious achievement. Battle stars are 3-16 of an inch in diameter and are attached to area ribbons. When five or more have been earned, silver stars of the same size may be substituted in ratio of one to five.

Army Actions Listed

The complete army list follows:

BELSEN TRIAL MONTH BEHIND PLANNED PACE

Lessons May Bring Swifter Justice

LUENEBURG, Germany, Nov. 3 (AP)—The Belsen war crime trial will enter its eighth week Monday, a month behind schedule, but officials tonight said valuable lessons had been learned which would shorten subsequent trials and bring about "swift justice."

One lesson, defense attorneys and the prosecution agreed, is that the number of accused hereafter should not exceed 20 and that eight to 12 would be more satisfactory. Forty-five are being tried concurrently here.

Here are suggestions and opinions of 11 British officers and one Polish officer of the defense counsel on how the trials could have been shortened:

By more careful preparation of the case; use of oral witnesses only without the introduction of a mass of affidavits; amendment of the royal warrant [which sets up the procedure and organization of the court] to permit only a few types of secondary evidence.

Stick to One Group

Restricting the accused to those of one nationality to avoid translating from English to German to Polish; selection of the accused by types, such as personnel in responsible positions who can be charged with specific acts, and giving more care to the selection of witnesses for the prosecution.

At today's session Helena Kopper, 35 year old Polish woman defendant who became a camp spy for the SS [elite guard], declared Irma Grese, SS woman guard, had sent women across wire barriers at Oswiecim concentration camp to be shot by guards at the rate of 30 a day.

"Grese took pleasure in selecting me to carry the shot prisoners away," Kopper testified.

She also testified that Heinrich Schrier, another defendant, was in the SS and was stationed both at Oswiecim and Belsen. Schrier previously had contended that he was not in the SS and had arrived at Belsen after it was liberated by the British.

Herman Mueller, an SS [Elite guard] official in charge of food stores at the Belsen concentration camp, has been found in a British internment camp after a two month search. He will appear in the Belsen war crimes trial next week as one of six final defense witnesses, defending counsel reported today.

Reds Criticize Procedure

MOSCOW, Nov. 3 (AP)—A correspondent for the government newspaper Izvestia criticized British prosecution of the Belsen war crimes case today, specifically for failure to use evidence dug up by the soviets at the Oswiecim prison camp in Poland, where most Belsen SS personnel had served.

Writing from Belsen, the correspondent, I. Bachelis, termed the failure "completely unforgiveable." He also said the prosecution had failed to invite representatives of the Polish government, public, or press to the trial.

6 WEEKS' DELAY IN TRIAL OF NAZI CRIMINALS SEEN

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 3 (AP)—The Nuernberg war crimes trials, scheduled to start Nov. 20, may be delayed six weeks to allow defense attorneys additional time to prepare their cases, it was indicated today.

Examinations still are to be made to decide whether Rudolf Hess and the bed-ridden Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach will be brought to trial with the first defendants.

Defense counsellors are expected to demand additional time before the cases are called before the international military tribunal, and court observers said they did not see how the tribunal could refuse. It was indicated that the start might be held up until Jan. 2.

DETROIT RACE FOR MAYOR NEAR ITS BITTER END

Expect a Record Vote in Tuesday's Election

Mayor Jeffries

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP) — The hottest municipal election campaign Detroit has experienced in several decades entered its final phases today with charges that large sums of money were being spent in behalf of the two candidates for the $15,000 a year mayoral post. The election is on Tuesday.

From Mayor Edward J. Jeffries Jr., seeking a fourth two year term, came the allegation in a speech that the CIO Political Action committee had put $100,000 into the effort to elect Richard T. Frankensteen, vice president of the CIO United Auto Workers.

Frankensteen, charging a "conspiracy among certain top automobile manufacturers to bring back the depression and destroy organized labor," asserted in a speech that the "manufacturers are spending lavishly to elect Jeffries."

803,223 Voters Register

Detroit, normally a Democratic stronghold in state and national elections, chooses its municipal officials on a nonpartisan basis. The city election commission reports 803,223 registered as voters. The highest previous registration was 814,007 in the last Presidential election.

A 500,000 vote would be the highest ever cast in a municipal election. The previous high mark was 419,000 in the city election of 1937. The primary in August brought out only a little more than 201,000 votes. In that voting Frankensteen got 82,936 votes and Jefferies 68,754.

Both Frankensteen and Jefferies are native Detroiters. Frankensteen, 38, took a bachelor of science degree at the University of Dayton and a law course at the University of Detroit.

Jefferies, 51, seeking his fourth term as head of the city government, was graduated from the University of Michigan law school. He served in the city council from 1932 to 1940 when he began his first term as mayor.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Nov. 4—Defeat of St. Clair

IN the treaty of Paris in 1783 Britain had recognized American rights to the northwestern territories lying east of the Mississippi river and south of the Great Lakes, but she calmly continued to hold fortified posts in the area.

Moreover, Canadian officials and traders, fearing that the rich fur trade of the region might be diverted from the St. Lawrence river to the Ohio if the United States made good her claims in the northwest, wooed the Indians by gifts of ammunition and supplies. Americans who dared to settle in the area led a life of peril.

The situation was going from bad to worse. Finally, after Gen. Arthur St. Clair, governor of the Northwest Territory, had sent out one unsuccessful expedition to chastise the Indians, congress voted to raise troops for a major campaign.

In the fall of 1791 a new expedition, with Gen. St. Clair himself in command, moved out of Fort Washington, which was on the Ohio at Cincinnati, and took the path toward the northern wilderness. A month later, having traveled less than 100 miles, St. Clair made camp near the headwaters of the Wabash river.

Here, in the pre-dawn darkness of Nov. 4, stealthy Indians, who in the silence of the snowy night had moved up to the neighborhood of the camp, fell on St. Clair's forces. The result was a fearful rout. Abandoning horses, arms, ammunition, and supplies, the soldiers beat their way out of the trap and made for open country. Out of a force of 1,400 which had taken part in the fight, only 50 were uninjured.

The new nation's first major foray against the Indians had been a disastrous failure. Not until three years later did an American army, this time under Gen. Anthony Wayne, decisively defeat the Indians.

EX-COACH SEEKS OFFICE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 3 (AP)—A warm fight for mayor of this industrial center, with the Republicans trying to wrest control from the Democrats who have been in power 12 years, will be decided Tuesday.

The candidates for the $15,000 a year job are David L. Lawrence, 56, Democratic state chairman and former secretary of the commonwealth, and Robert N. Waddell, 47, Republican, insurance executive, and former football coach at Carnegie Tech.

SHAKEDOWN CHARGED

Cleveland, O., Nov. 3 (AP)—Charges by Republican Nominee Ray C. Miller that the city administration has conducted a "political shakedown" and Mayor Thomas A. Burke's proposal of a 68 million dollar post-war improvement program have enlivened Cleveland's mayoralty campaign which will be climaxed by Tuesday's election.

Mayor Burke, who succeeded Gov. Frank J. Lausche as chief executive, said the projected improvement program would be undertaken without any increase in the Cleveland tax rate.

Burke's attempted ouster of Police Chief George J. Matowitz for alleged "gross neglect of duty and failure to suppress commercialized gambling" drew criticism from Councilman Miller.

G.O.P. IN KENTUCKY BATTLE

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 3 [Special]—Kentucky Republicans, sweeping victors for the first time since 1927 in state elections two years ago, are seeking to extend their gains at the polls Tuesday when control of the 1946 state legislature, and city and county administrations thruout the state will be determined.

Gov. Willis and the rest of the Republican state ticket, with the exception of Charles K. O'Connell, Democratic secretary of state, won four year terms in November, 1943, but found sledding difficult in the 1944 state legislature because Democrats retained control of both the house and senate.

All 100 members of the house are to be elected Tuesday. Thirty-four Democrats and 20 Republicans are unopposed, with contests over 46 seats.

Half of the 38 member senate is to be elected, 13 Republicans and six Democrats being holdovers for another two years.

EX-BOY FRIEND CALLED KILLER OF ARMY WIFE

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP)—Larry Theis, 29, of Detroit, once accused of having defrauded Mrs. Alberta Young, 35, of several thousand dollars during the absence of her army officer husband, today was accused of murder in the slaying of the attractive brunette.

Larry Theis

The whereabouts of Theis, who once worked with Mrs. Young in a Detroit factory, is unknown, and a nation-wide search for him was started after the warrant had been issued.

Mrs. Young's body, a bullet hole in the head, was found Wednesday in the Clinton river near here.

Police obtained the warrant against Theis after investigation showed that Mrs. Young's bank account had dropped from $3,181.69 to $1.68 in a few months.

Capt. Donald S. Leonard of the state police said he estimated that Theis owed Mrs. Young $4,000 at the time of her death. He said she apparently was disturbed over the prospect of accounting for her depleted bank account to her husband, Capt. Franklin Young.

RELEASE OF TAX EVADER IS MADE POLITICAL ISSUE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 [Special]—Sen. Willis [R., Ind.] said today he has requested President Truman to furnish information about his commutation of the five year income tax evasion sentence of James Gavin, 47, professional gambler of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Gavin was paroled Sept. 21 by the United States parole board, eight days after the President had commuted the gambler's prison term from five years to two years. He had served 16 months.

Willis' interest in the case followed a request for information made to Mr. Truman by the Southern Republican club of Louisville, Ky., where the release of Gavin has become an issue in a mayoralty election campaign. The election will be held Tuesday.

Barkley Called Sponsor

Republican leaders in Louisville have charged that Kentucky's Senators Barkley and Chandler and Rep. O'Neal sponsored Gavin's parole.

Jeffersonville, Ind., where Gavin's gambling operations have been conducted, is the industrial city across the river from Louisville.

Willis told a reporter that the release of Gavin was "generally considered flagrant in Indiana." He said he is seeking full information about the presentation of facts leading up to the executive commutation of Gavin's sentence.

Gavin was convicted May 24, 1944, of evading $53,000 in income taxes. The following August he petitioned for commutation but his appeal was turned down. He later paid the $53,000 tax and a fine of $5,000 which the court had assessed in adition to the prison sentence.

Termed a Good Citizen

The justice department explained the parole by saying Gavin was a first offender, had an excellent prison record, and had many prominent citizens of his community attest that he was a good citizen.

The Louisville mayoralty fight is a bitter one between E. Leland Taylor, an attorney, the Democratic nominee, and Brig. Gen. Roy Easley, Republican, recently retired as deputy commander of the 38th [Cyclone division] in the Philippines.

Republicans have challenged Louisville Democrats to deny that the interest of Kentucky senators and congressmen in Gavin's release is connected with campaign contributions from Gavin's gambling interests.

Two Bandits Rob Three Truck Drivers in Half Hour

Wabash av. police last night sought two Negroes who robbed three truck drivers within 30 minutes. The victims: Ray Zorm, 3338 W. 61st st., $18, in front of 4906 Vincennes av.; Gino Cocanig, 2316 W. 24th st., $15, in front of 5323 Calumet av., and William E. Meyer, 4915 S. Sleeping Tablets Taken by Accident, Nurse Says

Disorderly conduct charges lodged against Miss Diana Kosinsky, 25, of 500 Mills rd., Joliet, who was found unconscious from an overdose of sleep inducing tablets in the berth of a train a week ago, were dismissed yesterday by Municipal Judge J. M. Braude. Miss Kosinsky, a nurse, explained she had taken them accidentally while en route from Birmingham, Ala., where she had gone to see her fiance who is coming north to marry her soon.

O'DWYER FOES VOICE HOPE, BUT NOT MUCH FAITH

CIO-Democrat Expected to Win in N. Y.

BY ARTHUR EVANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Nov. 3 — New York's three ring mayoralty circus approached Tuesday's polls with indications today that William O'Dwyer, nominee of the Democratic and communist dominated American Labor parties, is leading the field.

The camps of Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, Republican and Liberal Fusion candidate, and Council President Newbold Morris, a protege of Mayor Fiorello La Guardia on a No Deal ticket, voiced hope but little faith in their chances.

The apathy as shown in the registration of 2,178,908 seems to cling to the campaign. This total is about two-thirds of that for the Presidential election last year and 273,168 fewer than the total for the last city election four years ago. Most of the statisticians look for a vote of about 2 million.

Expect O'Dwyer Victory

The small registration is construed as favorable to O'Dwyer. The O'Dwyer camp, which for a week has been coasting along, figures its man will poll at least a million votes, leaving the other million to be split between Goldstein and Morris. Some Republican leaders privately echo the belief that O'Dwyer will win.

Recheck polls have been made to estimate what effect the charges against Tammany hall for communist and underworld alliances has had on the voters. The first results showed that O'Dwyer had dropped about 2 points, leaving him 69 per cent of the straw vote.

In the background of the campaign is an effort to strengthen the Democratic-CIO machine for the state election next year, when Gov. Dewey's term expires, and the 1948 Presidential election.

Tired of LaGuardia

Analyzing the feelings of the citizenry, Republican and Democratic politicians say the ordinary voter is tired of being pushed around by La Guardia.

The radio duel last night between Gov. Dewey, supporting Goldstein, and Mayor La Guardia for Morris, shook off the campaign somnolence for a time.

Dewey attacked the Tammany Tiger and its underworld connections, and said La Guardia's No Deal ticket was "invented to divide the forces of good government." The mayor assailed Goldstein.

La Guardia Called Liar

Judge Goldstein today charged that La Guardia was guilty of "at least two infamous falsehoods." He said the mayor's speech proved he "is intent on putting "Tammany hall back into city hall." It is evident, he added, "that the No Deal represents a deal with Tammany. La Guardia works hard to earn the Democratic nomination for United States senator next year."

Goldstein said "one falsehood was in characterizing me as a 'lover of Tammany.' He knew I was appointed to the bench by Gov. Lehman in 1936 and that Tammany refused to nominate me. He knew I fought Tammany in 1936, and in 1939 when I was elected to my present term.

"The second falsehood was in stating I had appointed a Jimmy Hines captain to my staff.

"His speech proved he is intent on putting Tammany hall back into city hall. He proved this by failing to mention the Tammany candidate, O'Dwyer, during his half hour tirade."

O'Dwyer has denounced communism, but the Daily Worker, Communist organ, is whooping it up for him.

On the Tribune Farm

Nov. 3, 1945

THERE are many random notes to be picked up on the farm these days now that the driving tempo of harvest time has slowed. The warmth of the last week made it pleasant to ramble thru the fields and woodlots. Here are the jottings of one walker.

The biblical tragedy of Samson and Delilah has been enacted on the farm. Samson is a bulldog [better known to readers as Tommy] with a long record of good nature and flawless conduct. He was a protection to everything on the place; a menace only to groundhogs. Delilah came to the farm recently in the guise of a toy dachshund.

Samson Falls for Lure

Delilah soon picked up the habit of chasing the Karakul sheep that graze quietly in front of one of the farm homes. This, in itself, would not have amounted to much, because she could not catch them, and could not hurt them if she did. But, alas, she enticed Samson into her ideology of direct action.

Delilah now has been given away, but the problem of Samson remains. City people do not want an aging bulldog, and history shows that the sheep killing trait in a dog is almost impossible to cure, especially among the bull breeds.

Samson has a host of friends who hope that he will not pull down the temple upon himself.

The annual endurance contest among the leaves is on. The poplar, ironwood, elm, box elder, plum, cherry, sycamore, maple, pear, plain cottonwood, and even the rugged oaks have fallen vanquished. Still in the battle to cling to their leaves are the catalpas, locusts, osage oranges, horse chestnuts, and lilacs.

Jottings of Indian Summer

The soft corn has been stacked ready to be fed out as it is needed. By spring it will be gone and there will be little danger of spoilage if the weather remains cold. Recent warmth, however, lured farm residents into taking sun baths. Quite a number of flowers in the garden have bloomed again in the Indian summer mildness.

The goldfish that passed the summer in the pools were removed for the winter to a bowl, but could not adjust themselves to the change. Most of them have died.

ELUSIVE BUCK ENDS CAREER AS VENISON STEAKS

The fate of a buck deer that leaped thru show windows of an automobile agency at 5129 N. Kedzie av. Friday and disappeared was solved yesterday to the satisfaction of Melchior N. Soennichsen, an investigator for the state department of conservation.

Soennichsen said the deer eluded Boy Scouts and other searchers who combed the area, only to be struck and killed by an automobile, whose driver divided the carcass with three passengers, then drove on to their homes on the south side.

The information came to Soennichsen from a south side filling station owner, who said the motorist stopped to wash blood stains from his car, and told of the deer's fate. The animal is believed to have escaped from a wild life farm.

G. W. ROBNETT'S $100,000 SUIT TO OPEN TOMORROW

Selection of a jury to hear the $100,000 damage suit brought by George Washington Robnett, executive secretary of the Church League of America, against E. P. Dutton, Inc., publishers of a book entitled "Under Cover," will begin tomorrow in the federal District court of Judge Walter J. La Buy. The case is expected to last nearly three weeks.

Robnett seeks the award on the allegation that he and the church league were defamed by advertising on the cover of the book. Presenting his case will be Attys. Clifford Edmister and Harry S. Ditchburne. Atty. Lloyd D. Heth, former president of the Chicago Bar association, will defend the publishers. John Roy Carlson, alias Arthur Derounian, author, will be on hand for the trial.

Two other suits arising out of the same allegations are pending in federal court. One seeks a million dollars from the Jurgens Lotion company and Walter Winchell, radio gossiper, while the other, for $100,000, named Carlson as defendant.

Cancer Is Curable!

When Diagnosed and Treated Early

Complete Facilities at United Medical Service

CANCER is perhaps the most serious disease problem confronting the nation today. Loss of life from its insidious onslaught is appalling. More than 160,000 deaths annually are accredited to its increasing development. However, there is a more favorable outlook for the future. During the past ten years medical science has made notable advances in the early discovery and treatment of certain types of cancer.

Those most easily diagnosed and treated are cancers of the skin, lip, mouth, throat and cervix. 80 to 90 per cent cures have been reached in early cases and 10 to 20 per cent cures in advanced cases.

Cancers of the stomach, bowel, liver, kidney and other less accessible parts of the body, present a more difficult problem. However, even in these cases there are symptoms which, if given prompt medical attention, often lead to an early diagnosis. The most effective prevention against cancer is prompt medical examination and care for all ailments. Continued inflammation or irritation in any part of the body is a dangerous thing. The following conditions when neglected have potential cancer possibilities. Watch for them—when they appear have them examined and cared for immediately.

Any strange growth under the skin, lumps in the breast, moles, old scars, warts or birthmarks that change in appearance or size, swellings, sores that refuse to heal, a persistent stomach ailment or rectal disturbance, blood in the urine or stool, or any abnormal bleeding or discharges. Close observance of these and all other physical disorders, together with prompt medical care will definitely provide protection from cancer.

Complete medical facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of ailments or conditions which could lead to cancer are available here. They include qualified physicians and surgeons, X-rays, laboratory tests and other special medical procedures. Conveniently accessible by railroad trains, street cars, buses, elevated and subway trains, automobiles. Fees are moderate and the same to all. Information upon request.

Ailments Must Be Accurately Diagnosed

All persons who have passed 40 years of age as well as those of younger years who are not feeling physically fit should have a thorough physical check-up. To be fully protective there should be, in addition to the physician's clinical examination, an X-ray of the chest showing condition of heart and lungs, an electrocardiogram of heart, blood pressure, a basal metabolism test, a full mouth X-ray of the teeth (14 films), a urological or gynecological examination and laboratory tests of the blood, urine and other secretions. These combined services.................. $18.50

Skin Disease

As a rule the majority of skin conditions, when properly diagnosed and treated, present a simple medical problem. On the other hand there are afflictions of the skin which are serious and require the most expert medical knowledge and scientific facilities to diagnose and bring under control. Of these, skin cancer is the most feared and often the most difficult to recognize. Competent skin therapy is available here by physicians who have adequate knowledge and experience as well as the support of complete examining and treatment facilities. Examination includes urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The fee is...... $4.50

Female Troubles Need Special Care

Perhaps in no other field of medicine have modern facilities added more value to prevailing medical knowledge than in the diagnosis and treatment of women's diseases. Many ailments long considered hopeless can now be successfully controlled if not entirely eliminated through early diagnosis and competent care. With the help of modern facilities the physician can diagnose such symptoms as: headaches, nervousness, pains in the abdomen, irregular menstruation, frequent or painful urination and other conditions. This is important, especially in women past 40, when beginning cancer is a dangerous possibility. It is also of value in all cases of infectious diseases, where an immediate diagnosis is desirable and often possible. On your first visit the physician will make a regional examination, including the use of the colposcope, Schiller's test, microscopic study of secretions and discharges, urinalysis and blood tests. When infection or beginning disease is discovered, treatment can start without delay. The fee for the examination is................ $4.50

Ear, Nose and Throat

These organs are so closely related through connecting sinuses that one is rarely affected without involving all three. That is why severe colds will cause sore throats, inflammation and infection in tonsils, adenoids, discharge from ears, and other serious conditions. Lowered body resistance may account for recurring colds or they may be the result of more serious acute or chronic ailments. Our ear, nose and throat physicians have the medical knowledge, experience and facilities to diagnose and successfully treat these conditions. The examination will include tests for hearing, urinalysis and blood tests. The fee is...................... $4.50

Relief for Older Men

Modern facilities play an important part in the diagnosis of degenerative diseases which develop in men of 40 and older. These are the result of age and the strain of living. Outstanding symptoms are: fear, nervousness, frequent or painful urination, blood in the urine, discharges, and pain or discomfort of any kind. Any one of these symptoms calls for a thorough physical check-up. To be fully protective, the clinical examination by the physician must include microscopic examination of all secretions and discharges, blood and serological tests. Examining fee is $4.50

Have Your Eyes Examined
Glasses Fitted
UNDER MEDICAL DIRECTION

Such symptoms as persistent headaches, dizzy spells, nervousness, etc., should call for a medical examination of the eyes without delay. These symptoms can be due to disease in the eyes or to ailments in other parts of the body. In any case treatment should begin at once. When vision is impaired and glasses are needed it is especially important to have them fitted correctly. Improperly fitted glasses can cause serious damage. Glasses fitted under medical direction provide greater protection to your eyes. This protective optical service is available here. In addition you can make your selection from beautifully engraved ful-vue, gold filled mountings with excellent quality lenses for near and far vision. Exceptional values are available for as low as......... $8.00

A Complete Medical Examination of the Eyes is...................... $4.50

What Causes Stomach Trouble?

Now that facilities are available with which to see the stomach in operation, study its size, position and general condition, many acute and chronic stomach complaints can be diagnosed and promptly treated. While many stomach complaints are the result of abuse and wrong eating habits, persistent cases often indicate a more serious condition. The stomach often produces the first symptoms of beginning disease, such as kidney and liver complaint, gall bladder trouble, and other serious ailments, including cancer. Therefore, never neglect a chronic stomach ailment, particularly if you are past 40 years of age. Diagnosis requires a special gastro-intestinal examination, including a physical check-up by trained physicians, blood pressure, urinalysis, a blood examination and serological tests. The fee is..... $4.50

A fluoroscopic examination of the stomach and small bowel following a barium meal, and an X-ray film of the abdomen when necessary, is.............................. $8.50

A fluoroscopic examination of the colon following a barium enema, including two 14x17 in. X-ray films, one of barium-filled colon and one after evacuation, is..... $8.50

An X-ray examination of the gall bladder is important. The fee is........ $6.50

A laboratory examination of the gastric contents and stool is................ $5.50

Have Your Teeth X-rayed
Under Medical Direction

Good teeth are an important asset, not only to one's appearance but to the general health of the entire body. Since the development of the X-ray it is no longer necessary to lose good teeth or endanger health through decayed teeth or infected gum tissue. An X-ray at regular intervals will disclose beginning decay before serious damage has occurred. Prompt treatment will save teeth and protect health. Unexcelled facilities operated by well trained technicians insure good service here. Full mouth X-ray, 14 films, and a report are $2.50

Piles Can Be Very Dangerous to Health

Nearly all rectal ailments can be successfully and painlessly treated in our offices without loss of time from work.

Under experienced medical care a simple hemorrhoid or pile will clear up within a short time. However, if neglected or improperly treated, rectal disorders can become very dangerous ailments. Chronic or long standing cases are frequently the source of cancer invasion, in fact statistics show that several thousand persons die every year from cancer of the rectum. Among other dangerous conditions which often follow an attack of hemorrhoids or piles is a fistula or rectal abscess.

When this occurs the physician's problem becomes more difficult and the patient's condition more serious. As soon as the abscess is opened by the physician most of the pain will cease. If it is delayed too long, however, pus may burrow into surrounding tissue, causing more abscesses and fistula tracts to form. Proper medical attention can prevent this constant menace to health. Examinations made here include the services of a competent and experienced physician as well as urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The examining fee is $4.50

CONDUCTOR KEYS 'LA TRAVIATA' TO TINY VIOLETTA

Miss Sayao Exquisite and the Opera Charming

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY

"La Traviata" is an uncommonly obliging opera. If you are lucky enough to have a great Violetta such as the late Claudia Muzio, you can key it to the splendors of the grand style. If you happen to be blessed with the fastidious elegance of a Lucrezia Bori, you can scale it to the intimacy of a bijou theater like the lamented Ravinia opera. And you can combine the two without wrecking the performance.

The Chicago Opera did just about that yesterday afternoon when Fausto Cleva took his Verdian measurements from diminutive Bidu Sayao, even tho his theater was the capacious Civic Opera house. As a result, Miss Sayao was exquisite, "La Traviata" was charming rather than brilliant, and both Richard Bonelli and the best of the season's lyric tenors, Mario Berini, could have used more orchestral support.

Sayao's Soprano Like Spun Glass

Miss Sayao lacks the depth of dramatic projection that made a Bori performance carry in a big theater as well as bewitch a small one. She has not yet learned to sing as beautifully with others as alone. But in its own fragile terms her Violetta is a beguiling creature who grows more poignant with the seasons.

Her soprano is like something spun of Venetian glass, delicate, brittle and delightful. It holds the first act arias like champagne, and you get the bubbles of bravure if not its full, heady substance. Her second act has gone deeper into grief, altho it was handicapped in the duet with Mr. Bonelli by humdrum accompaniment. The last scene, where the slender voice can come into its own, was beautifully done from the instant she began to read Germont's letter, not in dramatic declamation, but softly, almost inaudibly, as a woman reads a message remembered in her heart.

Two Need More Help from Pit

Mr. Bonelli, a picturesque figure in that soft crimson coat, sang easily and well in the high lyric baritone so long a gift to Chicago opera. He would have sung more richly with more help from the pit, for baritones do not thrive on orchestral moonbeams.

Mr. Berini, too, could have used more orchestral assistance, for his is a full-sized lyric tenor of range and volume with a satiny luster, a vibrant timbre and the natural placement that gives his singing the true arch of projection. The "Traviata" tenor has a couple of arias often trivial in performance, but he made them distinguished as we used to know them in the days of Tito Schipa and Charles Hackett. More Berini, please.

Small Roles Played Convincingly

Except for the final scene, which is not only an eyesore but soiled, the stage pictures were attractive, the chorus sang agreeably, and smaller rôles played by Inge Manski, Ola Moser, Wilfred Engelman and Lodovico Oliviero had a touch of helpful conviction. Apparently some construction work was going on outside the lovers' country home, for a barrage of backstage lights rode gravely up and down during the garden scene, but most people kept their eyes on Sayao despite the competition.

The little Brazilian is said to own diamond mines and she must have squandered at least one of them on those new costumes. They range from bouffant mauve sprayed with jewels to green the color of violet leaves dimmed with dust. For all I know, diamond dust.

Reunion

Allan Jones and Marion Claire in dressing room before they sang "Bitter Sweet" last night on Theater of the Air program. They sang the roles a decade ago.

Marion Claire appeared last night on the Chicago Theater of the Air broadcast of the Noel Coward operetta, "Bittersweet" over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. The operetta, in which the stars recreated roles in which they played together in the Municipal opera of St. Louis, Mo., was presented in the Medinah Temple auditorium before 4,500 persons.

Miss Claire sang the dual rôle of Sarah Linden as a girl who fell in love with her music teacher, Carl Linden, portrayed by Jones, and of Lady Shayne, the Sarah of later life. Miss Claire and Jones both took speaking as well as singing roles. Bruce Foote sang the role of Capt. August. Henry Weber conducted the orchestra and chorus.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, was the speaker. The text of his address appears on the editorial page.

ASK FREE PRESS PROVISION IN ALL FOREIGN RELIEF

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—A strong house group disclosed plans today to attach to every future bill for aid to foreign governments a "free press" requirement similar to that put into an UNRRA appropriation measure this week.

Specifically the group proposes to restrict foreign loans to nations which give United States reporters full access to news abroad.

The amendment to the appropriation bill does that insofar as the gathering of news about united nations relief and rehabilitation administration activities is concerned. The senate, however, has not acted on that measure.

Want Billion More

Still in the house legislative mill is a bill authorizing a new grant of 1 billion 350 million dollars to UNRRA. This is in addition to the 550 million fund to which the rider was attached.

In the offing are measures to authorize loans to Great Britain, Russia, and other allied nations, and to enlarge the capital of the export-import bank.

Hanging fire in the house foreign affairs committee is a bill to repeal the Johnson act prohibiting loans to foreign governments in default on past obligations to this country.

All these proposals are likely to be the targets of "free press" amendments when they reach the house floor.

If the show of strength made on the UNRRA amendment means anything, the restrictions will be written into the other legislation. There were 188 votes for the UNRRA amendment, and the total probably would have been higher if it had not been for pleas that UNRRA is strictly a relief agency and should not be hampered in its operations.

"We are going to undertake to require in all foreign aid legislation hereafter that United States reporters be given free access to news in countries receiving the aid," a Republican leader said.

"We are not asking any nation to borrow our money, but if they want it bad enough they should be willing to let trained observers representing the American public look around and see what it is being used for."

Compromise Made

As originally proposed, the UNRRA rider would have required general news freedom in countries receiving aid under the bill, but a compromise cut it down to apply only to UNRRA information.

The Republican leader's disclosure of plans was based on his expectation that the Republican-southern Democratic groop which shoved thru Thursday's amendment would hold together in future votes along the same line. Thirty-two Democrats, mostly from the south, joined 156 Republicans in that vote. Only two Republicans voted against the rider.

HUNT FUGITIVE AUTOIST; PRIEST KILLED BY CAR

An inquest into the death of Rev. John Sylvester, 45, assistant pastor of St. Benedict's Roman Catholic church, Blue Island, who was killed early yesterday by a hit and run automobile, was continued at the request of police.

Police said no witnesses or clews to the identity of the driver been uncovered yet, but several squads are searching in the vicinity of 69th st. and Western av., where the accident occurred.

The Rev. Fr. Sylvester apparently was hit as he crossed the street. His body was found later. He formerly was at St. Agnes' church in Chicago Heights.

PEARL HARBOR? LET'S BE GLAD OF IT, KELLY ADVISES

Mayor Says Jap Attack Awakened U. S.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 3 [Special]—Mayor Kelly of Chicago visited Henry Wallace's home state tonight to praise President Truman and extoll the New Deal philosophy before a gathering of Iowa Democrats at a $25 a plate Jackson day dinner.

Kelly eulogized the late President Roosevelt in his speech. He said we should be glad the Japs attacked us at Pearl Harbor because that act awakened us to the realities of our situation.

He indorsed universal military training and called for the establishment of national policies leading to full employment. As means toward this end he recommended maintenance of credit, price and rent controls, extension of social security benefits, and a government housing program.

Defends Machine Politics

He defended his rule of the Chicago "political machine," asserting he "had to run the machine or it would run him."

In his mention of Wallace, Kelly called him "your great citizen." Earlier in the day he got a public snub from Nelson G. Kraschel, former Democratic governor of Iowa and now general agent for the farm credit administration at Omaha, Neb., who refused to attend the dinner.

"I will not be a party to honoring the man who helped beat Henry Wallace in the 1944 Democratic convention," Kraschel said.

At a press conference the Chicago mayor called Wallace "a fine fellow," but added that at the time of the convention "many thought he wouldn't add strength to the ticket."

"If it had not been for President Roosevelt, Hitler would have been victorious and America today would be a slave nation," Kelly said in his banquet speech.

Glad of Pearl Harbor

"Despite the tremendous price we had to pay in men and materials for victory, we can be glad that the Japs made the mistake of attacking us at Pearl Harbor. That act awakened us, as nothing else could, to the realities of our desperate situation, a situation partly due to the selfish political opposition to President Roosevelt's preparedness program."

President Truman is motivated by the "same high ideals and warm understanding" as his predecessor, Kelly said. He described Truman as sincere, courageous, charitable, a good listener, a respecter of the other fellow's opinion, and not a show-off.

BETTY ALBRECHT UPHELD IN LIE DETECTOR TEST

Betty Albrecht, 16, chief witness in the murder trial of John Taubery, 17, was not threatened or offered money to leave town last Sunday, the day before the trial was scheduled to start, a lie detector test showed yesterday.

Assistant State's Atty. William Brumlik said the test indicated Betty was telling the truth when she said the only thing which prompted her to leave was compassion for Taubery. Miss Albrecht was found Wednesday in Warren, O., where she was visiting a married sister.

Taubery has been indicted for the murder of Charles Dryden, 14, who was stabbed when he attempted to stop Taubery from attacking Miss Albrecht. The girl lives at 1837 S. Loomis st.

State's Attorney Tuohy disclosed yesterday that he had requested four of his assistants to resign on Nov. 15 in favor of prosecutors who have been absent on military leaves. Several others will be asked to step out as other prosecutors return from the army and the navy.

The four who resigned are Howard Christensen, Lloyd Beach, George Kyros, and Myron F. Lewis. Lewis announced earlier in the week that he was to enter the publishing business with his father.

Former Lt. Col. Robert L. Donigan, in the army since 1940; Walter L. McCoy, in the coast guard since 1942, and William F. Fitzgerald have returned to Tuohy's staff. George Blattberg will return next week.

BARRETT TELLS ACCORD ON AUDIT OF FOUNDATION

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 3 (AP)—Atty. Gen. Barrett said today counsel for the Forest Park Home foundation, Peoria charitable organization, has signed a stipulation permitting the attorney general to examine and audit its books and accounts.

Barrett asked the Peoria County Circuit court Oct. 19 to appoint a receiver for the foundation and asked for an accounting of funds received by it. The foundation was established in 1939.

The attorney general contended, in a quo warranto suit, that the foundation had failed to carry out charitable purposes as outlined in its state charter. Barrett's statement today said Richard J. Kavanaugh, attorney for the foundation, had agreed voluntarily to submit the foundation's records in order to speed determination of the foundation's financial condition.

"THE BEER"

"I sometimes think that we're almost in the entertainment business too, because MEISTER BRAU Beer brings enjoyment to so many people. Our radio entertainment is the best we can find. That's why we're telling you here about the different shows you might enjoy."

9:30 P. M. MYSTERIES

COUNTRY SHERIFF
W-G-N—9:30 to 10 P. M. Friday

"Sheriff Bates and me have a lot in common. We stick to old-time methods and come up with the right solution. But he's dealing with humans instead of malt and hops, so every week there's a new angle to his detecting—and, believe me, it's fine to sit down in your easy chair with a bottle of MEISTER BRAU and listen to a hair-curling Sheriff Bates thriller. Or for real live entertainment, you can't beat watching the 'Country Sheriff' broadcast at the W-G-N Theater."

MYSTERY HOUSE
W-G-N—9:30-10 P. M. Sunday

"Every Sunday night my wife and I have a date with Dan and Barbara Glenn at 'Mystery House.' They're one of the nicest young couples we know and they always let us watch when they act out their murder yarns. You're invited, too, so why don't you all come along to 'Mystery House'? You can see as well as hear it at the W-G-N Studio Theater. Get your tickets from W-G-N."

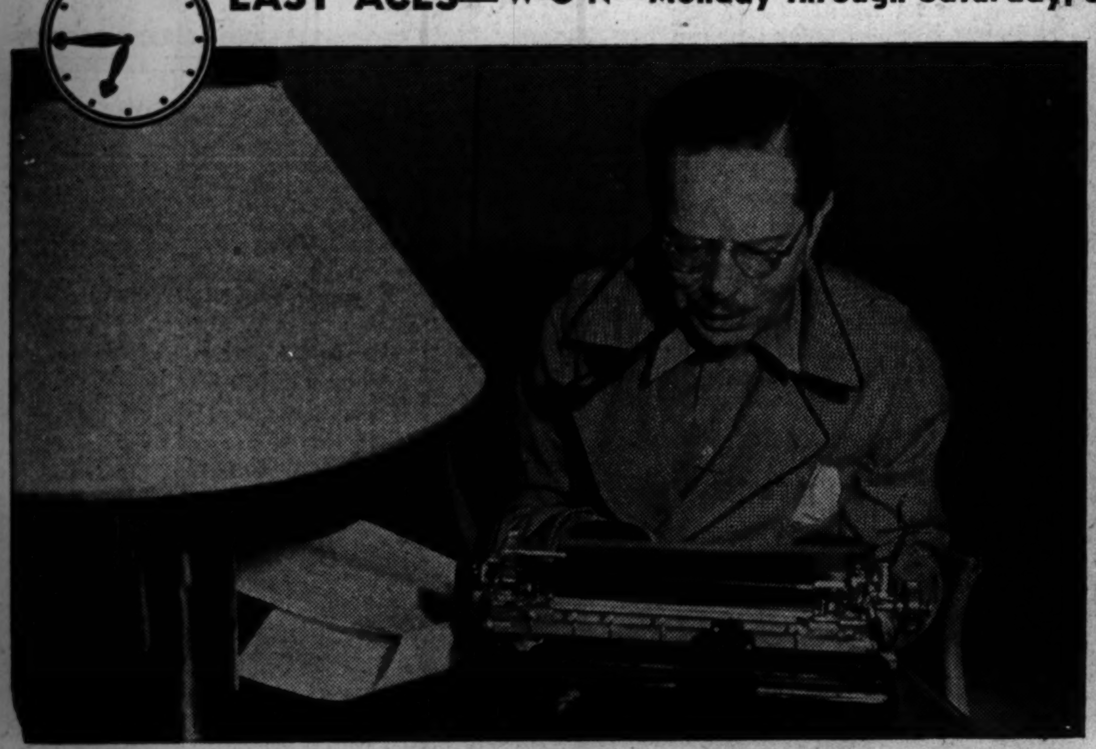
CRIME FILES OF FLAMOND
W-G-N—9:30 to 10 P. M. Tuesday

"On Tuesday nights I like to go down to the W-G-N Theater and see as well as hear 'The Crime Files of Flamond.' I don't think my wife likes this, because she says I go down there just to see Pat Dunlap, the girl who plays the part of Flamond's secretary. But while everybody likes Pat, I really go down there because it's always a thrilling, hair-raising mystery show."

BULLDOG DRUMMOND
W-G-N—9:30-10 P. M. Monday

"The other day I was walking down the street when I heard some heavy footsteps right behind me. It took me unawares and I thought for a minute I was listening to 'Bulldog Drummond.' This is a swell mystery show and if you like 'whodunits' tune in."

EASY ACES— W-G-N—Monday through Saturday, 6:45 to 7 P. M.



"We wanted a good daily program for our MEISTER BRAU fans. So we gave it a lot of thought and care, like our brewing process. Well, we came up with 'Easy Aces,' and I'm mighty glad we did. Because nobody could get any more fun than I do out of listening to this fine show."

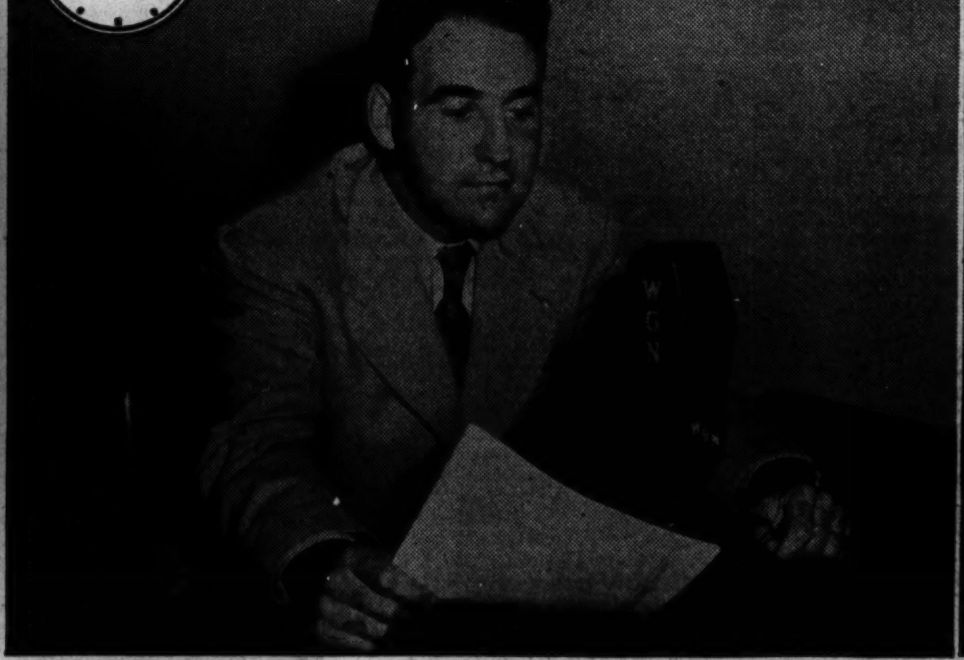
"They always say women talk a lot, but I've never known the beat of Mrs. Ace. And Mr. Ace is a pretty good talker, too. He has to be, I guess, or he'd have taken her for worse instead of better. Anyhow, our radio audience takes them both for better—or for best in entertainment!"

"It's easy as falling off a log to sit back and laugh at Jane Ace finanglin' and Goodie trying to talk her out of things. The two of them can get into and out of more tangles in fifteen minutes than you and I meet with in a week."

CASA CUGAT
W-G-N—2:30 to 3 P. M. Saturday

"I'm not quite old enough to learn how to do the rhumba, but I like to listen to the rhumba music played by Xavier Cugat's orchestra in the program 'Casa Cugat.' It's one kind of music that most people like, and you can always depend on getting what you're looking for when you tune in 'Casa Cugat.'"

JIMMY EVANS
W-G-N—9 to 9:15 P. M. Friday



"If you follow the football games and try to pick the winners, just tune in Jimmy Evans and all through the football season he'll tell you which team is going to win. It's almost uncanny the way he picks winners. Last year, he was more than 85% right. That means the outcome of nearly nine out of ten of every major college and professional game was predicted correctly by Jimmy Evans."

BOSTON BLACKIE
WMAQ—5 to 5:30 P. M. Saturday

"Maybe I'm old-fashioned, like some folks say. But I'm modern enough when it comes to entertainment. That's why I like to tune in Saturdays on 'Boston Blackie.' I know the story is good, and I understand he's got a pretty girl friend, because I've seen her in the movies. So I'm specially glad now I can hear him right in my own house every week."

KELLY SUPPORTS REVISED CODE TO SPUR BUILDING

House Shortage Requires Action, He Says

BY LEWIS HUNT

The demand for modern, liberal building regulations found by THE TRIBUNE in its recent survey of the Chicago code has the support of Mayor Kelly. He said yesterday that he favors the kind of code that will promote sorely needed housing within the city limits and approves going over the existing provisions "with a fine tooth comb" if necessary.

"When we adopted the code in 1939 we knew it wasn't all it should be," he said. "It wasn't what I had hoped for in many respects. But revision of the old 1911 code had been going on for more than 10 years and I accepted the new code as the best we could get at the time."

Seeks to Encourage Building

The mayor did not go into the specific objections to the code, which were expressed by builders, architects, and materials suppliers canvassed in THE TRIBUNE's survey. Principally, these included criticisms of the code as out of date, confusing in form, politically administered and, in some instances, protective of special interests. Instead, he expressed himself as hopeful that sufficient interest would be aroused to bring about code changes encouraging to building.

"I hope the movement started by THE TRIBUNE will keep going," he said. "The building code is important to all the people of Chicago. I believe the council wants to give the people a code that will encourage them to build homes in the city, permitting them to use new ideas for efficiency and economy.

Calls It Difficult Task

"We all know that there are numerous conflicting interests clamoring to be heard when a building code is being drawn up. It is a difficult task for the aldermen. It would be helpful to get back of the aldermen and support them."

In the present desperate housing shortage, the mayor said he thought code restrictions should be relaxed to the extent of permitting any type of temporary housing that the fire underwriters would pass. Commenting on the council's 1942 action approving federal housing administration minimum building requirements for the period of the war and six months thereafter, he said:

Immediate Action Needed

"We have a peace time emergency in housing more serious than during the war. Something has to be done immediately to find homes for 50,000 war veterans. One thing we can do is to amend the building code to permit the portable houses the government put up around the big war plants.

"But we need more than temporary measures. We need to provide stimulus for building up the city permanently. Chicago is a good place to live. We don't want to see people continue to move into the suburbs because it is easier to build homes there. We should make it possible for them to build in the city on the same terms. They should have the opportunity to make use of every advanced building method. The code should not be a barrier."

MICROFILM FILE IS SOUGHT FOR COURT RECORDS

John E. Conroy, clerk of the Circuit court, is getting so inundated with legal records that he has asked the Circuit judges for permission to adopt microfilming for court document filing. Such a system, he said, would be safer, more convenient, and cheaper.

"There is simply no more space," Conroy said. "Because we use so much of the available amount, the county clerk and other officials have to rent warehouse space for their records. One suit alone in our vaults is taking up 90 cubic feet."

Microfilming is photography in miniature and 3,000 pages of documents can be kept on 100 feet of film. Conroy said the office employes could learn in a few days how to operate the machines. The films are projected, much enlarged, on a screen for reading.

Two Fashion Designers to Demonstrate Art

"Designers Drape Before Your Eyes," the first program in the Museum of Science and Industry's "Parade of Fashions," will be held at 2 p. m. today in the museum's auditorium instead of 10:30 a. m. as earlier scheduled. Miss Louise Herman, teacher of designs, is commentator. Jaconelli and Miss Julie Provis, Chicago designers, will do the exhibition draping.

Owl on City Roof

Visiting owl atop roof of James F. McManus' home, 8127 S. Sangamon st., yesterday. Camera 50 feet away scared bird away.

Residents in the neighborhood of 81st and Sangamon sts. are puzzled by the presence of an owl which appeared in the vicinity two days ago. Yesterday it was photographed while perched on the roof of the home of James F. McManus, 8127 S. Sangamon st., after which it flew away. But later in the day it returned. McManus has no idea where the owl came from. Thus far it has made no attempt to attack children or animal pets.

U. S. COURT SETS A PRECEDENT IN ALIENATION SUIT

Rules Child Has Claim Against Other Woman

A child has a legally enforceable financial claim against a woman who has won its father's affections from its mother and caused him to withdraw his presence, guidance, and support, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The court held that Judge William J. Campbell erred when he dismissed in federal District court a suit for $100,000 damages by the four children of Mrs. Olive Means Daily, 45, of Oil City, Pa., against Mrs. Marian Lammers Parker, 42, of 77 E. Cedar st.

Dismissed for Lack of Precedent

The suit charged the children suffered when Mrs. Parker allegedly enticed Wilfred J. Daily, 49, a salesman, of Oil City away from his family to live in Chicago. Mrs. Parker, wife of a naval officer, is the wealthy daughter of an oil man, and the families formerly were neighbors in Oil City. Judge Campbell dismissed the suit for lack of precedent.

Because such rights have not been recognized before is no reason for denying them, the appeals court held, and there is no reason why a federal court should be more prone to deny them or grant them than a state court.

Three Judges Uphold Right

"Our conclusion . . . is that a child has a right enforceable in a court of law against one who has invaded and taken from said child the support and maintenance of its father, as well as damages for the destruction of other rights which arise out of the family relationship and which have been destroyed or defeated by a wrongdoing third party," the opinion said. It was delivered by Justices Evan A. Evans, Will M. Sparks, and J. Earl Major.

"The father is still the master," the court ruled, "but the duties of the master have changed. Where it was . . . his duty to rule, he now serves. He recognizes the rights of others and his obligation to meet them. Perhaps he is still titular head of the family. If so, his position merely carries with it greater duties and obligations."

Mother's Suit Pending

"There is, we must confess, weight to the argument that no loss was suffered when the children were deprived of the society of a father who deserted them to run away with a married woman and who left his wife and children to struggle as best they could with the task of making a livelihood," the court said.

"In other words, before there can be a loss measured in damages, there must be something to lose. And a father should have at least a shadow of character before his loss can be said to create a claim for damages in his children."

The children are Barbara Ann, 18; Ellen Marie, 16; Mary Jane, 15, and Wilfred Jr., 9. Mrs. Daily also has pending in District court an alienation of affections suit which seeks $300,000.

Urban A. Lavery, attorney for Mrs. Daily, said the decision was the first in the history of American or English law establishing the right of minor children to such damages. The appeals court directed the suit be permitted to proceed in District court.

BUILDERS CHART CONSTRUCTION OF APARTMENTS

A Long Dormant Market Starts Revival

[This is the fifth article of a series on the home building outlook in metropolitan Chicago.]

BY AL CHASE
[Real Estate Editor.]

Despite federal rent control, or perhaps in anticipation of its removal next year, the Chicago area's long dormant apartment construction market is showing definite signs of revival on an encouragingly large scale. With announcement yesterday of plans for four large buildings, at a total cost of more than 1 million dollars, projects in Chicago and suburbs either contemplated or under way represent a total investment of about $1,800,000. They will provide 293 apartments to help relieve the present housing shortage.

Herbert N. Lustig

Plans for three buildings containing 72 suites were announced for the Budlong Woods area by Atty. Erwin E. Cowen, seller of the sites. Cost was estimated at about $500,000. Construction will start as soon after Jan. 1 as possible, it was said. All will contain 3½, 4, and 5 room units.

Plans 36 Apartment Building

Atty. Samuel N. Levin bought the southwest corner of Berwyn and Francisco avs., 240 by 125 feet, and is having plans drawn by Loewenberg & Loewenberg for a 36 apartment building.

Atty. Henry H. Marks purchased a 300 by 125 foot site on the south side of Berwyn av., between California and Washtenaw avs. He is having plans drawn by Carl J. Kastrup for two buildings, each of 18 apartments. They will be financed with an FHA insured mortgage thru the First Mortgage Corporation of Chicago.

Marks also has started work on 16 apartments of 4 and 5 rooms at 5220 South Park way to cost $80,000. Kastrup is architect. Financing is thru H. F. Philipsborn & Co.

To Build at Wabash-60th

Ground is being cleared at the northwest corner of Wabash av. and 60th st. for a $200,000 group of two story brick buildings to contain 38 three and four room units. The owner is the 60th and Wabash corporation, of which Newton C. Farr is president. Anton Johnson is architect. Occupancy is planned for early 1946.

The first of several three story 36 apartment buildings planned for Chicago and Oak Park was announced by Herbert N. Lustig & Associates for the southeast corner of Hyde Park blvd. and Woodlawn av. Designed by Loewenberg & Loewenberg it will have 3½ to 5 room units and is expected to cost about $250,000. June 1 completion is sought.

Rentals will be $75 to $100. Kolliner Brothers Realty company was broker for the seller of the site. Similar apartments are considered for the Rogers Park area.

Flats for Three Suburbs

Three big suburban apartment projects are in various stages of construction. They represent a total cost of about $780,000 and will have 131 units. Riverside's first apartment building in 15 years is under construction on Lincoln av., between Forest av. and Park pl. It will have 11 suites. A 36 apartment building at the northwest corner of Lake st. and Bonnie Brae, River Forest, is nearing completion. It will cost about $250,000.

Work has been started on a $420,000 project in Broadview, on Roosevelt rd., just west of Hines hospital, to contain 84 apartments. All three suburban projects were designed by Kastrup.

Several other big city and suburban projects are in early stages of planning for announcement shortly. They are predicated on the belief of many realtors and builders that rent control will be lifted when home building gets under way on a volume basis.

AUTO FIRM EXPANDS

Clif Woodbury, one time auto racer, of Woodbury Brothers, automobile repairing, has broken ground for a $50,000 one story addition, 50 by 175 feet, to the firm's building at 4926 W. Madison st.

Change in Tenancy

Multiple tenancy of Marquette building, at northwest corner of Dearborn and Adams sts., is gradually being supplanted by Commonwealth Edison company, building owner, and its affiliates.

All Marquette Building Will Go to Edison

Complete change of tenancy in the Marquette building at the northwest corner of Dearborn and Adams sts. is under way, it was disclosed yesterday. By May 1, 1946, all except a half dozen tenants who have leases running to 1947 will be out of the building and the entire structure will be occupied by Commonwealth Edison company and its affiliates.

Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, which occupies six floors at 79 W. Monroe, is to be moved into the Commonwealth Edison building and various Edison activities will be transferred to the Marquette as fast as present tenants move out, said Earle Schultz, manager of the two buildings.

Built in 1895, the Marquette at one time was well known as a railroad office center with 60 lines having offices there. Several individuals have been tenants since the building was opened. The building is noted for its glass mosaic murals in the elevator lobby.

HOME LENDING FACILITIES OF FHA ENLARGED

The federal housing administration yesterday announced plans for enlarging its activities in the home mortgage insurance field. FHA Commissioner Raymond M. Foley said firm mortgage commitments up to a maximum of $7,200 will be made to builder-mortgagors. The order provides commitments up to 80 per cent of the first $6,000 valuation and 60 per cent of valuation over $6,000, up to $10,000, which means a builder will be able to get a firm commitment of $7,200 on a $10,000 house. Above $10,000 the top loan would be held at $7,200, he said. Formerly a speculative builder could get a commitment of only $4,200 or 70 per cent of the valuation, whichever was smaller.

Foley said FHA is encouraging use of insured mortgage financing in the field of suburban country homes which heretofore it has paid little heed to.

An enlarged use of title I. property improvement loans for conversion of larger houses into two or more units and rehabilitating others is to be promoted thru all FHA offices, Foley said.

SOUTH WABASH BUILDING SOLD

The two story building at 839-43 S. Wabash av. was sold by Chicago Title & Trust company, trustee, to George R. Berger for an undisclosed price. William H. Ames of Frank M. Whiston & Co. was broker for the buyer and Aldis & Co. for the seller.

NEW FACTORIES, HOMES PLANNED ON SCHOOL LAND

One of the largest building programs in the city's history, involving nearly 10 million dollars worth of new residential and industrial construction, will result from the recent sale of 108 acres of school fund land in the west side Austin area, Joseph B. Ford, of Joseph B. Ford & Co., realtor, said yesterday. The land, in the square mile bounded by W. Madison st., Cicero and Central avs., and Roosevelt rd., was sold for $1,469,969.

Joseph B. Ford

When he was president of the Chicago Real Estate board Ford was active in persuading the board of education to put this real estate on the market. James B. McCahey, board president, said when the land is improved with residential and industrial buildings it will return $300,000 annually in taxes.

$8,900,000 in Homes

Ford was broker for John A. O'Keefe, agent for 112 persons, who purchased 530 lots for $851,000, or for an average price of about $1,586 per lot. Ford said the buyers intend to build as soon as possible 450 two flat buildings, with a total of 900 living units, to cost about $7,700,000, and 80 single family residences which may total $1,200,000. A total of 980 new home units will be available during 1946 if building conditions permit.

In addition 5 acres east of Laramie av., between Congress and Harrison sts., were bought by S. E. O'Toole for $75,000. These are expected to be improved with homes, it was said.

Plans Huge Factory

The Chicago Flexible Shaft company expects to build a one story plant of at least 900,000 square feet of floor space on the 53.7 acres it bought for $543,969, said B. A. Graham, president. This initial improvement of the property may cost $1,100,000, he said. Eventually the company will center in the new plant most of its manufacturing facilities, now in various locations in Chicago and downstate.

The Roosevelt Manufacturing district bid only $470,000 for all of the industrial land south of the Chicago Great Western railroad, 93.2 acres, which includes the Chicago Flexible Shaft purchase. The Roosevelt bid was rejected. The 39.5 acres unsold will be offered for sale again.

LEND $35,000 ON THEATER

A $35,000 loan, due in 1951 at 4½ per cent, was negotiated by C. Robert Lazerus, president of Mortgage corporation, on the 1,000 seat Alex theater, 3826 W. Madison st., owned by Alex Theater corporation.

ASKS U. S. TO LIFT CONTROLS ON RENTALS OF $75 AND UPWARD

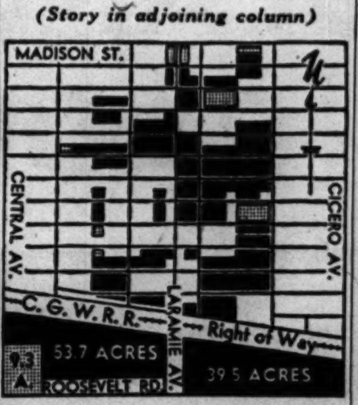
Removal of rent control on all residential units renting for $75 or more a month was urged yesterday by the Chicago Real Estate board. Floyd G. Dana, president, said landlords receive rents of a depression or near-depression level despite constantly rising maintenance costs.

"There is no inflationary danger in removing rent controls from this type of so-called luxury rental accommodations," he said. "In fact, it would be a corrective. There is no justification for continuing control in the higher rental brackets. To do so is to control merely for the sake of exercising authority.

"The Chicago Real Estate board supported rent control from its inception as a willing compliance of rental property owners in the interests of the war situation," Dana said. "But when it became apparent in OPA's hold-the-line policy that nothing actually was held except rents we and the National Association of Real Estate Boards protested this economic discrimination."

Sell School Land

(Story in adjoining column)



Black areas show land the board of education offered for sale last week, most of which was bid in by home builders and industrial users. Shaded areas indicate land to be used for future school use. Unmarked areas were sold several years ago. The 39.5 acres in the lower right corner were bid in, but the offer was rejected. The parcel will be reoffered for sale for factory use.

Container Company Plans Large Factory Addition

Plans have been drawn by A. Epstein for a one story addition containing 40,000 square feet to the plant of Corrugated Containers, Inc., 4545 W. Palmer st., M. Norian, board chairman, said yesterday. The plant now has 110,000 square feet of floor space. When the addition is completed the company expects to employ 400 persons.

Wells Street Building Purchased for $75,000

The six story store and loft building at 111-19 S. Wells st. was sold yesterday by the New England Mutual Life Insurance company to Robert Berg of Berg Sales company for $75,000 thru Arthur Rubloff & Co., which will continue to manage the property. Ralph Strader of Hall & Ellis represented the seller.

CHANDLER NAMES RUEL AS AID; OUTLINES POLICIES

VETERANCOACH OF SOX SIGNS FOR 7 YEARS

Baseball Ready to Lead Sports Boom

BY EDWARD PRELL

Herold [Muddy] Ruel will help Commissioner A. B. [Happy] Chandler administer baseball's affairs for the next seven years. Ruel, for 12 years a White Sox coach, yesterday was named by Chandler as his assistant. Chandled signed a seven year contract last summer at $50,000 a year. Ruel's contract will run concurrently. His salary was not announced.

Chandler spent two days in Chicago conferring with Ruel and left last night for his Kentucky home. Ruel, in baseball 30 years as a player and coach, will take up his duties officially on Dec. 15 in Cincinnati when the baseball office is transferred there from Chicago.

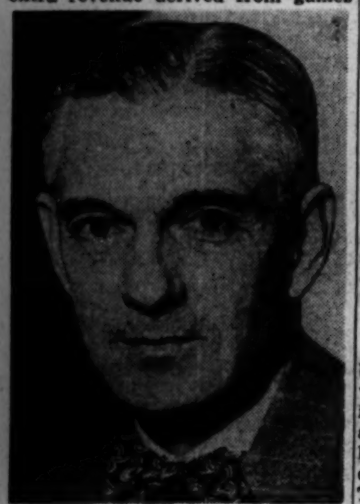
In the interim, the 49 year old Ruel, whose home is in suburban Flossmoor, will learn the mechanics of his new job by visiting the baseball offices in Chicago presided over by Leslie O'Connor. Ruel is succeeding O'Connor, who will have a new job, too, on Dec. 15, when he becomes general manager of the White Sox. Ruel, who is married and has four children, will establish his residence across the Ohio river in Kentucky, where Chandler lives.

Plan Missionary Campaign

The commissioner, after the Ruel announcement, revealed the outline of plans to blanket the nation in a gigantic baseball missionary campaign.

He reported having met in Chicago last week with representatives of the national Junior Chamber of Commerce and that this group's active support was enlisted to spread interest in the game.

Chandler will propose to President Truman that he designate National Baseball day each year. The extra revenue derived from games played on this day would be turned over to Chandler's proposed National Baseball Foundation. This group, with representatives from the junior chamber of commerce, the American Legion, industry, and perhaps other organizations, would work hand-in-hand with Chandler's office in promoting baseball participation for the nation's youth.



MUDDY RUEL

Mulbry Named Secretary

"I feel that I now am ready to do a job," said Chandler. "I have selected sober, loyal and industrious men who love baseball."

Chandler's other aid will be Walter Mulbry, who was his secretary during the commissioner's senatorial days in Washington. Mulbry will be secretary and treasurer of baseball. It is believed that Ruel will serve a double-barrelled purpose—that of using his legal knowledge in respect to baseball contracts and agreements, and also to participate in the commissioner's program of selling the game.

Ruel, tho expressing regret at leaving the White Sox, said that he is eager to enter his new field.

Baseball Needs Fanfare

"I believe it will be a pleasant and forceful job," he said. "Mr. Chandler has the drive to create things and carry them thru. I think that baseball needs a touch of fanfare. I know that the commissioner has tremendous plans. Naturally, it will take a reasonable length of time to put them into operation.

"I had 12 pleasant years with the White Sox and it will be hard to leave Jimmy Dykes, Harry Grabiner, and Mrs. Grace Comiskey. I feel especially indebted to Mr. Grabiner, who in the last few years has explained to me the workings of baseball in the front office. Those lessons will be valuable in my new job."

By revealing his plans and hopes

FRANK DANCEWICZ, NOTRE DAME PASSING STAR, SHOWS VERSATILITY BY INTERCEPTING ENEMY TOSS IN SECOND QUARTER

MICHIGAN CRUSHES MINNESOTA, 26 TO 0; SCORES 3 TIMES IN 4TH

BY EDWARD BURNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 3—Michigan was much too slick for Minnesota this afternoon in every phase of football technique. As a result, the foxy Wolverines won by the comfortable count of 26 to 0 before a capacity crowd of 85,132, largest ever to see any of the 36 Michigan-Minnesota battles in the series that began 53 years ago.

Michigan altered the pattern of last week's victory over Illinois only slightly, insofar as touchdown distribution was concerned. Then the Wolverines scored all of their 19 points in the fourth period. They made 19 points in the final quarter today, but these proved simply insurance to add to a victory touchdown negotiated near the close of the first period.

First Shutout Since 1939

It was the first shutout suffered by the proud Gophers since they were stopped, 6 to 0, by Nebraska in 1939. Today they rarely showed any symptoms of drawing anything but a zero for their offensive efforts, despite a total of 11 first downs. There were times when their defensive strength approached pregame promise, but not often, as witness the 19 first downs made by the Wolverines, 261 yards made by rushing and 131 yards negotiated on passes.

If you are clamoring for Wolverine stars, we hand you the Michigan roster. There seemed to be no specialists in overland toting, in plunging, sprinting, in tossing or catching passes.. Every lad seemed to have the savvy and the skill whenever the sign was given to make yardage.

Everybody Lends a Hand

It is said the Gophers had been warned to keep their eyes glued to Howard Yerges, first string replacement for the injured Capt. Joe Ponsetto, Bob Nussbaumer, Jack Weisenburger, and one or two others. All these young gents made the warning stand up, but there were many others scampering and ramming hither and thither, to the constant perplexity of the unhappy Gophers, like Henry Fonde, who gained 42 yards on six tries, Pete Elliott, who made 35 yards on five attempts, and Dan Dworsky, who heeled and toed 44 yards on only two attempts.

Then there was Don Robinson, who completed two passes in as many tries for 56 yards; Leonard Ford who snatched a couple for gains totaling 34 yards, Ed McNeill, who speared a 45 yard heave, and Warren Bentz, who caught a pass for the fourth score. All these things happened, and the warned against Weisenburger still had time to gain 70 yards and Teninga 50.

The Threat Takes Form

The first scoring began to loom as the first period neared the finish. After Judd Ringer had punted to Michigan's 35 yard line Teninga tried a long pass which failed to connect, whereupon Weisenburger plowed thru center for 13 yards. After one scrimmage play, Yerges cut loose a pass to Teninga good for 24 yards and a first down on Minnesota's 28 yard line.

Weisenburger went spinning thru to the Minnesota 17, then Yerges' aim again was good as he tossed to Fonde, who was dropped by Tom Cates a foot from the goal line. Teninga made only six inches then Yerges sneaked over with one minute and five seconds remaining in the opening period. Bob Callahan added the point from placement.

In the second period the Wolver-

Great Lakes' Early Drives Jar Illini, 12-6

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 3—Great Lakes' Bluejackets, led by Marion Motley, a superb Negro full back, today scored the third consecutive victory of their up-and-down season by defeating a game band of fighting Illini, 12 to 6, before 14,569 in Memorial stadium. The Sailors scored all of their points in the first quarter, while the Illini, who all afternoon did a fine job of maintaining their reputation as a right obdurate defensive team, a record built up against such rugged parties as Notre Dame, Indiana, and Michigan, tallied in the final quarter.

Just a Polysyllabic Parade

The scoring for the day was a polysyllabic parade, Franke Aschenbrenner, the old Marquette back, delivering both of Great Lakes' touchdowns, while Gene Kwasniewski, an Evanston boy, registered the Illini points. Master Kwasniewski was listed as a third string right half back, but for the better part of the doings he played like an old varsity hand, matching the work of Motley on both offense and defense.

Until Kwasniewski got around to churning up yardage in the second half, Illinois' offense was a punchless sort of thing that produced only 20 yards by rushing, against 173 for the Bluejackets. The final tabulation showed the Illini with 122 yards, against 296 for Great Lakes, the latter compiling 16 first downs to its opponents' seven. The Sailors were guilty of three fumbles, Illinois pouncing on all three of same.

Motley Receives Good Support

Aside from Motley, Great Lakes had several other handy gents, including Grover Klemmer, Bill O'Connor, Marty Wendell, and Jean Lamoure. Motley, a Canton, O., resident who played three years at the University of Nevada and is the father of three children, gained a total of 110 yards in 20 attempts.

Kwasniewski was the standout performer for Illinois today, altho credit is due in great part to Stan Stasica, Jack Pierce, Bill Kolens, and Wes Tregoning, all of them potent factors in the protection of the Illini defensive record and also in the drive which averted a shutout.

Motley introduced himself quite rapidly, taking the opening kick-off deep in his end zone and proceeding therefrom for a small jaunt of 73 yards. There Capt. Frank Serpico of Illinois detained him. Aschenbrenner contributed 8 yards on the first play from scrimmage, then Klemmer moved to the 15

OHIO STATE DEFEATS WILDCATS ON FIELD GOAL IN LAST 2 MINUTES

BY WILFRID SMITH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Columbus, O., Nov. 3—The red neon letters on the score boards read: 1 minute, 28 seconds to play in the fourth quarter; score, Northwestern, 14; Ohio State, 13. It was fourth down. The Buckeyes had the ball on the Wildcats' 15 yard line on the chalk mark 15 yards from the east side line.

From the Ohio State bench came Max Schnittker and all in the huge double tired stadium knew Schnittker would try a place kick.

The thousands, who second earlier were wildly cheering Ohio State's rally, which already had scored a fourth period touchdown, sat silent. On this one play rested their hope that the Buckeyes still would have an opportunity to retain their Western conference championship.

Ohio Stays in Race

Hal Daugherty knelt on the 21 yard line extended his hands, and the ball shot back from Center Jack Lininger. Schnittker stepped forward, kicked, and the ball soared high over the cross bar. A Niagara of sound swept the stadium. The lights flashed and the score now read: Ohio State, 16; Northwestern, 14.

By this dramatic finish the Buckeyes won their fourth conference victory of the campaign against one loss, to Purdue, and now continue with title ambitions intact to face Illinois and Michigan.

The fifth largest throng ever gathered in this 24 year old stadium, 74,079, watched the battle. They saw a struggle replete with stirring plays, long runs, accurate passes, and a series of mechanical errors which contributed to a rising surge of excitement.

Buckeyes' Surge Succeeds

These thousands today watched an undermanned Northwestern squad smash the Buckeyes' defenses for two touchdowns in 10 minutes with all the fury the Wildcats displayed last week in trouncing Purdue, only victor over Ohio State in two seasons. Then they saw Ohio State slowly gather its power, score in the second quarter, and come back with the 10 points in the last to climax their successful fight.

Schnittker was the hero of the moment and when the game ended, hundreds of spectators leaped the low retaining walls to join the Ohio State players as they lifted Max to their shoulders and carried him to the dressing room. Northwestern's tired young men, who almost had surprised the confident Buckeyes as they had whipped Purdue seven days before, silently plodded thru the celebrators to their dressing room.

Reserve Power Decides Game

Northwestern had its list of stars but in final analysis, the Wildcats were unable to match Ohio State in reserve strength. Statistics show, for instance, that the Wildcats matched the Buckeyes with seven first downs in the first half and outgained them 113 yards to 90. Final figures gave Ohio State 17 first downs to 9 and a total gain by rushing of 258 yards to 155.

The most important Ohio State man was Ollie Cline, sophomore full back. Cline played without relief for 52 minutes and then left the game briefly after he had scored his second touchdown. He returned to make two first downs which advanced the ball for Schnittker's winning placement. Without Cline, Ohio State today would have been a mediocre eleven.

In the Buckeye line, Lininger was a standout as a 60 minute man in a vital position, as was Bob McGinnis

Pent-Up Bear Fury Menaces Packers Today

This is the day all the pent-up fury of a disillusioned, frustrated Bear team may explode. It's a strange match, this 54th meeting of the Bears and the Green Bay Packers in Wrigley field. Its setting is unprecedented, for in every other year in this decade and most any year you'd care to mention this was the big game in the National league's western division.

It has been the game when the Bears could clinch western honors or the Packers, by winning, could stay in the fight until the bitter finish. This afternoon a sellout crowd of 43,000 will see a Bear team which has yet to win a league victory challenge the 1945 champions who are in a triple tie for the western leadership.

Upset Ingredients There

The ingredients are there for an upset. The Bears' back-of-the-scenes troubles have been brought out into the light. The players have held at least one secret meeting, where attempts were made to resolve those little differences which develop when a team is losing Sunday after Sunday.

Sid Luckman, the one time king of T formation quarter backs, will be out of the picture at the start. In his place will be 36 year old Gene Ronzani, given the task to rally the Bears against their most bitter gridiron foe.

Luckman has pitched only two touchdown passes in five losing games. The Bears' coaches have gone down the line with him. They have seen him fail and tho there has been no tendency to center all the blame on Sid, a change is dictated.

Ronzani will get a thoro trial to make the aerial and ground thrusts in the team's arsenal of plays. If he fails, Luckman will get his chance and Luckman in the past has been a competitor who comes thru in the tight spots.

Could Be Great Day

This is a terrific assignment for Ronzani, who left big time football a half dozen years ago. Since then he has been a part time professional coach, a college scout, a college coach, and a player. The war brought him back into uniform. He has the spirit of a rookie, is nimble

Badgers Drop Hawkeyes to Cellar, 27 to 7

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 3—Wisconsin's Badgers finally acquired a 1945 Big Nine football victory today, 27 to 7, and at the same time kept the willing but weak Iowa Hawkeyes in the maiden class.

Much too skilled for the Iowans, the wearers of the cardinal colored jersies took an early lead and stayed there, altho they were handed more than a slight scare in the second period when the home town boys launched a pitching assault that carried them across the victor's goal line.

The Badgers broke into the scoring column in the first seven minutes of play by reeling off a march of a mere 58 yards and in the second period added another seven points that were in the nature of a gift. The Iowans made the mistake of not capturing a punt after touching the ball, but a few minutes later the Hawkeyes put on their scoring burst and then hung on until the fourth period when the Badgers kept the regulars on the job for two touchdown demonstrations, one a 44 yard advance and the other from midfield.

Don Kindt Scores Twice

With the Iowa line not much of a match for the Wisconsin forwards, the latter's backs quite naturally enjoyed a field day. The 200 pound Don Kindt, an army veteran, threw himself around the field to the extent of 90 yards in 16 plays, two of his attempts resulting in touchdowns. Jerry Thompson, who scored once, handled 80 yards in 14 plays. Ben Bendrick, who scored the other touchdown, handed in a net of 43 yards in 13 plays.

Iowa's running game was practically nil, as might be guessed by a glimpse at the statistics, but the Hawkeyes did cause the Badgers more than a little concern with their overhead play. They attempted no fewer than 30 aerials, most of them pitched by Jerry Niles, the ex-navy dive bomber pilot. Nine of the 30 passes were completed for 117 yards—which was exactly 117 yards more than the Badgers accomplished in the air. They made only four such attempts.

Badger Defense Rugged

The Hawkeyes quickly discovered after taking the initial kick-off that the Badger defense was slightly too rugged, so punted, and the wearers of the cardinal promptly showed that was all they were waiting for. Charley Chaney captured the punt on Iowa's 42 yard line and the Badgers proceeded from there to

BY ARCH WARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Cleveland, O., Nov. 3—Undefeated Navy and undefeated Notre Dame tonight still were undefeated after 60 minutes of the most exciting football in the history of their 19 year old series. The game ended in a 6 to 6 tie with Notre Dame only six inches from a winning touchdown.

For 53 minutes the Midshipmen were giants in fetters. For 53 minutes, which put their courage and endurance to a test, they were decisively outplayed despite the fact they were trailing by only six points.

Then Notre Dame made a mistake. In a flash it was converted into a touchdown that tied the score. Midway in the last quarter after the Irish had dominated the play from the opening whistle they had the ball near midfield on third down and eight yards to go. Frank Dancewicz, whose all around performance was a highlight of this furiously contested encounter, whipped a pass intended for a Notre Dame half back.

Navy Misses the Big Point

Clyde Scott, Navy's left half back, intercepted the toss on his 40 yard line and ran 60 yards for a touchdown without a Notre Dame man getting near enough to lay a hand on him. Jack Currence had a chance to put his team ahead, but his kick was wide, which probably was only justice prevailing, because Notre Dame today was a much stronger team than Navy.

The game attracted a capacity crowd of 82,000 to Cleveland's Municipal stadium. The series now stands at 14 victories for Notre Dame, four for Navy and one tie.

With only a minute and 10 seconds to play and the ball in Notre Dame's possession on its 23 yard line, every one in the stadium was satisfied to call the battle a draw. But this didn't go for the 11 blue-shirted players representing Notre Dame. They were unwilling to settle for a tie.

Just Inches from Victory

George Ratterman, 19 year old quarter back who had relieved Dancewicz, fired a pass to Bill Leonard, right end, behind the Navy secondary. Leonard caught the ball on Navy's 40 and raced to the 17 before he was caught from behind by Anthony Minisi. A 5 yard penalty against the Midshipmen for too many times out moved the ball to the 12.

Dancewicz, relieving Ratterman, faded deep and shot a pass to Phil Colella, who, according to the field judge, stepped out of bounds on the 1 yard line. Only seconds remained on the clock.

On a quarter back sneak Dancewicz was stopped eight inches short of a touchdown. There was time for only one more play. Again it was a thrust at center by Dancewicz and again Navy held. When the pile was unscrambled Dancewicz was six inches away from the goal and the game was over.

But Navy Gets the Ball

Referee Bill Blake called together Dancewicz and Minisi, who were serving as captains, and flipped a coin to determine ownership of a ball that will be a treasured souvenir. Minisi won the toss as Navy men rushed from the bench to congratulate him and the other stalwarts who added another brilliant chapter to Navy's star spangled gridiron history.

Both Notre Dame and Navy

DODGE STABLES TIE HAWTHORN FOR SHOW LEAD

Accidents Befall Young Riders at Coliseum

BY JAMES SEGRETI

The Hawthorn farms of Libertyville, Ill., and the Dodge stables of Rochester, Mich., have gone into the lead again over the nation's outstanding show ring performers for top honors in the second annual Chicago horse show, which continues today with matinee and evening performances.

The close battle between the two midwestern stables is an old story to followers of tanbark presentations. Last year the Dodge stables, owned by Mrs. James B. Johnson, the former Frances Dodge, edged out the Hawthorn farms, owned by John F. Cuneo, in the race for cash prizes and blue ribbons. The two now are engaged in another nip and tuck affair, followed by the entries of H. Leslie Atlass of Wheaton, Ill.

Each Has Three Winners

As the show pranced into its third performance last night, Hawthorn farms and Dodge stables each had three first place winners on the records, leading the entries of stables representing 32 states. Hawthorn moved into the tie by capturing two events on yesterday's matinee program, while the Dodge stables had only one winner. Atlass' horses have triumphed in two events.

Wisconsin, Missouri, and Illinois stables accounted for three events which highlighted the evening's program. Capt. Bird, owned by Mrs. Curt G. Joa of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., won the $1,500 championship stake for harness horses. Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Lee's Summit, Mo., drove her brown gelding to victory in the $1,000 stake for harness ponies, and Jitterbug, driven by Miss Mary Jane McGrath of Chicago, captured the $500 stake for three gaited saddle horses.

The total attendance for the show reached 16,000 for three performances. Approximately 4,000 saw yesterday's matinee events and an additional 6,000 were in the stands for the evening's performance.

Young Riders in Accidents

The afternoon crowd saw accidents in which two young riders narrowly escaped serious injury. Joe Mackey Jr. of Kansas City, Mo., youngest rider in the jumper event, suffered bruises when he was knocked down by Col. P. W. Evans' Shadrach near the show ring shortly before the youngster, who rode Our Herbert, was judged the winner of the first event on the program. Mackey, 12, had dismounted after completing the five barrier course, and he was standing near a gate when Shadrach suddenly bolted and crashed thru a wooden fence on the south end of the arena.

Miss Gloria Lempke of Chicago, 18, riding Ace High, owned by John Perring Jr. of Champaign, Ill., was thrown by the horse at the final barrier, but was not injured. Summaries:

WALT TENINGA GETS GOOD BLOCKING BUT 1ST PERIOD PASS IS INCOMPLETE

MICHIGAN ROUTS MINNESOTA IN JUG DUEL, 26-0

ines seemed content to advance to the Gopher 14 yard line, but activity in the third period became significant in the first minute of the fourth.

Penalty Hurts Gophers

The early touchdown in this period hove in sight when a roughing penalty on Minnesota put the ball on Minnesota's 41 yard line. Fonde then went to the 26 yard line and Weisenburger advanced to the 22 as the third quarter ended. Fonde went to the 13 yard line as the final session opened and Weisenburger found the path to the goal easy going when the center of the line opened up a lane for him. Callahan again added the point.

Fonde, Ford, and Teninga were the main men in setting up the third touchdown, made by Teninga with 10 minutes and 25 seconds of the game remaining.

As the game went into the last five minutes the Wolverines swept to the 4 yard line, where they lost the ball on downs but bounced right back for their final points. After a great punt by Fitch from the end zone had put the ball out of bounds on Michigan's 44 yard line, a pass, Robinson to McNeill, was good on the Minnesota 12 yard line. Robinson then passed to Bentz in the end zone for the final points of the afternoon. Statistics:

Chicago Latin, defending football champion of the Private School league, assured itself of at least a tie for the 1945 title by routing North Shore, 20 to 0, yesterday on the Latin gridiron. It was the sixth consecutive victory for Latin and left only Wheaton in the path of an undefeated league season. The Latin-Wheaton game will be played next Saturday, when all teams finish their schedules

Emil Iverson, leading scorer in the league, led the attack against North Shore, getting two touchdowns and an extra point, and throwing a pass for the other touchdown.

Harvard school beat Todd school of Woodstock, 6 to 0, in Washington park. The lone touchdown was made in the first quarter when Harvard took the opening kick-off and drove 66 yards, Bill Phillips plunging over from the 1 yard line to give Harvard its fourth victory in six starts.

Joe Pahr paced the Luther offensive against North Park academy in Hanson park, scoring all three touchdowns as his team won, 19 to 6. In the first period he plunged thru center from the 4 yard line. In the third he went around right end from the 9, and his final one was on a 4 yard left end sweep.

Allen Kanter, left half back, scored seven of eight touchdowns as Francis Parker defeated Wheaton academy, 51 to 0, on Latin field.

St. Mary's got two touchdowns in the third period, marching 61 yards in six plays and then plowing 22 yards after reconvering a Trojan fumble.

CATHOLIC PREP FANS HAVE TWO BIG GAMES TODAY

BY DAVID CONDON

Two intense Catholic league prep football rivalries, both of which have a bearing on the south section and most likely the league championship, will be settled today before crowds expected to be the largest of the regular season.

One of these, the annual Sisters of Mercy charity game, brings together Leo, still in the running for the south section crown, and St. Rita, victor in two of four games. This battle in Comiskey park is expected to draw 25,000 or upwards, depending on how well the various ticket chairmen have assembled the vote.

Fenwick Plays St. George

The second feud will be played in Hanson park, also before a full house, with undefeated St. George, 1943 Kelly bowl champion, meeting unbeaten Fenwick in a contest to settle the section lead. Rivalry in this contest is intense and has been built up thru successive weeks as each eleven continued undefeated.

Proceeds from the Sisters of Mercy game have been marked for the maintenance fund of Mercy hospital, altho the sisters, who have more than 40 charitable institutions in this area, have hinted that part of it might be set aside for a contemplated new $5,000,000 hospital.

The Fenwick-St. George game is expected to be highlighted by performances of three of the league's leading back field men—Roger [Moose] Brown and Dick Martin of Fenwick, and St. George's Larry Coutre.

Still Faces Leo

Perhaps it should be pointed out that the victor in today's contest necessarily will not take the title. Should Fenwick beat the Dragons, it still would have to get past the strong Leo eleven next Sunday. If Fenwick and Leo win today, and Leo should beat Fenwick, it would be a three way tie.

In the north section of the league St. Ignatius will attempt to hold on to first place when it meets St. Patrick in Key Branch stadium. Two other elevens which still are in the title race also see action. Weber, defending league champion, meets Loyola in Loyola stadium, while St. Mel battles St. Philip in the Gaels' new stadium. Holy Trinity and De Paul play in Lane Tech stadium to round out the schedule.

The second block was rolled at the same establishment last night and the final two blocks will be held at Bomar's home alleys at Matty Faetz's recreation, 5961 N. Ridge av., today.

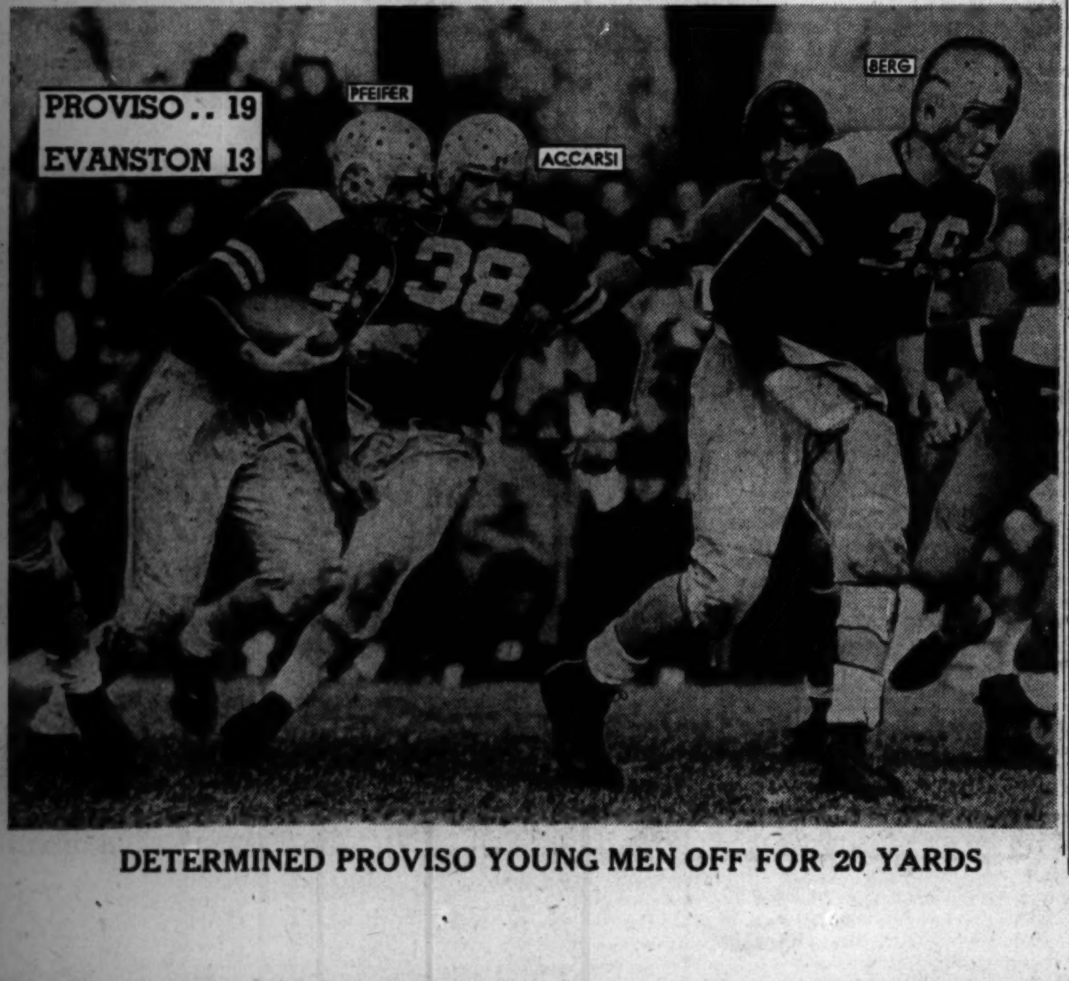
START OF PREP GRIDIRON JAUNT



DETERMINED PROVISO YOUNG MEN OFF FOR 20 YARDS

Ohio Beats N. U., 16 to 14 on Field Goal in Final Minutes

at guard. In all other positions, Ohio State substituted frequently and advisedly. By this reserve strength, particularly at three back field positions, Ohio steadily strove for the winning points despite its misplays. The Buckeyes fumbled eight times and lost possession on five. Northwestern had five errors and lost the ball on three.

N. U. Strikes Early

In the opening quarter Northwestern, then on even physical terms, struck Ohio State's defenses with bewildering speed. The first opportunity came three plays after the opening kickoff by the Wildcats, who had chosen to defend the south goal with advantage of the wind. Cline fumbled when tackled hard and Stan Gorski recovered for the Wildcats on the Buckeye 40.

Dick Conners slashed inside defensive left tackle for 5 yards on a quick opening. Then Don Whan, starting his second collegiate game, swept around Tom Watson at right end, cut back nicely from the west side line to pick up two blockers, and ran 36 yards to the goal. Jim Farrar place kicked the point for Northwestern's 7 to 0 lead.

Northwestern's next assault ended when Conners fumbled on Ohio State's 10 yard line and on fourth down thereafter, Cline was rushed and his punt against the wind went out on the Buckeyes' 29. Northwestern needed only six plays to score again.

N. U. Takes 14-0 Lead

Bruce Bairstow crashed thru guard for 5 yards. Farrar sneaked for 4 more from the T formation quarter back position and Conners made a first down on Ohio State's 16. Whan swung around defensive left end for 6 yards and Bairstow's quick opening play put the ball 6 inches from the goal line. Farrar stepped to his right for a fake and then plunged over defensive right guard for the touchdown. His kick for the extra point completed Northwestern's scoring.

Ohio State's first touchdown in the second quarter began with completion of a long forward pass, but was culminated only after an Alphonse-Gaston act. Conners' punt against the wind had given the Buckeyes the ball on Northwestern's 45 yard line. On first down Dick Fisher threw to Bud Kessler, his left end, who made a leaping catch on the 4 yard line altho guarded by Bairstow and Don Laser.

Trade Fumbles Near Goal

Cline was stopped without gain and Jerry Krall got only 2 yards at defensive left tackle from a wing back formation. Cline then fumbled and Gorski recovered for the Wildcats. On Northwestern's first play Laser pulled back from center on the T setup and dropped the ball, which was recovered by Thornton Dixon for Ohio State. Cline required two plunges to go over for the touchdown. On the placekick for the point, Daugherty fumbled Lininger's pass, which left the score 14 to 6 for Northwestern, a tabulation maintained until the intermission.

The Buckeyes chose to receive to start the third period and Northwestern took advantage of the south wind which materially aided in its successful defense for 15 minutes. Ohio State was held for downs on the Wildcats' 28 yard line and, shortly after the start of the last quarter, again surrendered the ball on Northwestern's 16 when Cline fumbled and Gerald Vick, Wildcat end, recovered.

Ohio State scored the next time it had possession, going 42 yards in 10 plays altho two of these were pass failures. Paul Sarringhaus now was at left half back for Ohio State—Daugherty and Krall had preceded him—but Cline still was the full back.

From Northwestern's 10 yard line Cline carried four times, getting 7 yards on his first plunge and nudging the ball ahead a yard at a time thereafter but barely reaching the scoring strip. Schnittker place kicked for the 14 to 13 count.

Cash in on Last Chance

Eight minutes and 15 seconds remained. Northwestern received and Conners' fourth down kick was run back 49 yards to the Wildcats' 35 yard line by Alex Verdova after the Buckeye substitute right half escaped five men. This threat ended when Sarringhaus fumbled and Vick recovered on his 40.

Three plays later, Northwestern needed a yard for a first down and 3 minutes and 15 seconds remained to play. Farrar tried to sneak over center and failed. If he had been successful Northwestern might have won. Here was Ohio State's last opportunity.

Cline and Daugherty returned to the field and the former swept defensive left end for 18 yards. Daugherty got 5 yards but his long pass was incomplete. Cline raced around Northwestern's right end for a first down on the Wildcats' 13. Two of Daugherty's passes failed and Cline lost 2 yards. That was the setting—fourth down on Northwestern's 15 yard line. Then Schnittker kicked the points for victory.

despite all those years, and is thoroly schooled in the Bears' T formation maneuvers. It could develop into the grandest day of his long career.

The Bears are superior in man power and condition than when all this losing business started on Sept. 30 in Green Bay with a 31 to 21 defeat. Since then they've picked up Hugh Gallarneau, Jim Daniell, and Bobby Swisher. Lee Artoe, who made his post-war debut against the Packers, played only briefly that day. Lee's play has improved so much that he is a reasonable facsimile of the pre-war Artoe, an all-league tackle. Gallarneau likewise is making headway each Sunday.

Green Bay has improved, too, since that Sept. 30 opener. The champions have picked up Bruce Smith, the great back from Minnesota, and Ernie Pannell, tackle, has returned from war.

If the Bears can forget their own problems for the moment for their usual problem in Don Hutson. The 32 year old end has scored 75 points in five games. The Bears have mustered only 59 points in their five defeats. Smith will be making his Green Bay debut.

Cards Face Redskins

There will be excitement on other National league fields. The Cardinals are expected to contribute another victory to the Redskins in Washington. This team now is favorite to win in the east, but still faces formidable competition in its own sector, plus an engagement with the Bears. The Redskins, with fine personnel at the start of the season, have welcomed several pre-war stars.

The Cleveland Rams and Detroit Lyons, tied for the western lead with the Packers, are in the east today. The Lions meet the Boston Yanks, a team which is deadlocked with the Redskins with three victories and a defeat, tho carrying the impost of a tie. The Lions meet the New York Giants, who have won only one game while losing two and tying one.

In the fifth game the Philadelphia Eagles meet the Pittsburgh Steelers in Pittsburgh. The Eagles stepped back into the eastern race last Sunday by dealing the Rams their first defeat.

York Defeats Glenbard for Section Title

York High school of Elmhurst yesterday defeated Glenbard, 19 to 6, for the first time in nine years and won the West Suburban conference football championship for the first time since 1932 as Right Half Back Henry Tiedeman ran all over the Glen Ellyn gridiron.

The victory was York's sixth straight and ended its league season. The defending conference champion was La Grange, which had won the title for the last four years.

Tiedemann Is Standout

After a scoreless first half, Tiedemann raced 70 yards to give York a 6 to 0 lead at the end of the third period. Starting the fourth quarter, Tiedemann ran 60 yards for his second touchdown. After this, Glenbard scored as Bob Tyler took Rollin Tomberlin's 20 yard pass in the end zone, but it was only a matter of minutes before Tiedemann was off on another 60 yard dash for his third touchdown.

PURDUE BACKS DIVIDE HONORS IN 28-0 VICTORY

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 3—The fangless Pittsburgh Panthers didn't even cut a new tooth today as they continued on their way to Pitt's most disastrous season in 42 years, falling prey to Purdue university's diversified attack, 28 to 0, before 15,000 in Ross-Ade stadium.

The Boilermakers, led by a triumverate of speedy backs, Ed Cody, Bill Canfield, and Bob De Moss, each of whom leads the Western conference in separate departments of play, scored twice in the first period, once in the second, and again in the third quarter for their sixth victory in seven games.

Cody Scores Twice

It was Cody, fleet full back, who started the ball rolling, scoring both touchdowns in the first period, but it was Canfield and Paul Gilbert, second string back from Mitchell, S. D., who provided touchdown thrills. Gilbert got his score in the second period when he took a fumbled pass from Jack Smodic of Pitt 20 yards behind the line of scrimmage and ran 36 yards to the goal. Canfield recorded his touchdown on a 50 yard run down midfield in the third period.

Cody added to his prestige as the conference's leading ground gainer and Canfield held up his end as leading scorer. De Moss, the Big Nine's best passer, completed three passes in six attempts, good for 35 yards.

Pitt's Robinson Stopped

Pitt had little success against a rugged Boilermaker line and even their star Negro half back, Jim Robinson, never could get going. Time after time he was brought down behind the line and, on several occasions, by Ernie Dobrzykowski, South Bend youngster whose defensive play stood out for the Boilermakers.

The defeat was Pittsburgh's fifth against two victories and its next three games are with Ohio State, Indiana, and Penn State, in each of which the Panthers will be decided underdogs. Their poorest previous season was in 1903, when they lost six without a victory.

A 40 yard drive in which Cody carried the ball three times for 32 yards after Dave Shaw had made 8, put the Boilermakers out in front seven minutes after the kick-off, Cody going over from the 10 yard line on an off-tackle play. Tom Hughes, Purdue's consistent placement kicker, added the first of four extra points.

Penalty Nullifies Long Run

Canfield almost got away for another score shortly after the kick-off, but his 46 yard run was nullified by a clipping penalty. Purdue started another touchdown drive from the Pitt 45. Demoss passed to Canfield for 16 yards and, after two more plays, Cody went inside left end for 14 yards and the touchdown. Hughes' place kick made the score 14 to 0.

Pitt got going early in the second quarter thru Vic Manauzzi's ability to crack the Purdue line. He picked up two consecutive first downs, and Pitt had the ball on its 43 before being forced to punt. Purdue also punted and Pitt opened a pass attack which took the ball to the Purdue 36, Smodic conecting with a pair of passes to Don Matthews.

Gilbert Runs 36 Yards

After an exchange of punts, Smodic hit Robinson with two passes and Pitt had the ball on Purdue's 44 when Paul Gilbert, Boilermaker end, gathered in a jostled pass behind the line of scrimmage and went 36 yards to score. Hughes added the extra point and the half ended with Purdue leading, 21 to 0.

Purdue go tits fourth touchdown late in the third quarter. With a minutes and a half to go, Pitt punted and Shaw lugged the ball back to the 50 yard line. One the first play Canfield broke thru center, side stepped three tacklers, and raced to a touchdown. Hughes kicked the extra point.

Purdue's third stringers took over in the last period and made sporadic gains, with Bill Deem, Alan Dale, and Frank Setear doing most of the ball carrying. However, Pitt was able to make its deepest point of penetration of Purdue territory only thru a break. Smodic tossed a long pass intended for Douglas, but it was knocked into the hands of George Linnelli, who was dropped on the Purdue 29. Statistics:

Vikings and Swedes Head Soccer Card

BY OFFSIDE

Eyes of National Soccer league fans will be centered on Winnemac park and Sparta stadium today, where two games will be played that have direct bearing on the 1945 title.

In the Winnemac park contest the Vikings meet the Swedes, while Sparta will be at home in its own field to Hakoah, both matches starting at 3 o'clock.

The Vikings, trailing the league leading Hakoahs by a single point, but with one more game to play than the pace setters, must defeat the Swedes to stay in the race, while Hakoah will be battling to maintain its slim margin of leadership.

The inclusion of George Nemchik in the forward line and Danny Dawson in the half back line has greatly increased the Vikings' title hopes.

The Swedes, in completing their schedule today, could end their season in a blaze of glory by removing the powerful Vikings from the race.

Two new Canadian stars from Toronto will be in the Vikings lineup. They are Robert Gibbons and Don Bain. Both players arrived yesterday and immediately signed for the Vikings.

In the first division there also is a match which can jumble the standings, with the Norwegians facing the Slovaks. The Slovaks trail the leading Necaxas and must win today to stay in the race.

FENGER RETAINS TITLE; DEFEATS HYDE PARK, 31-6

Victors to Meet Tilden in in Prep Play-Off

Fenger, defending City league south section football champion, won the crown again yesterday by defeating Hyde Park, 31 to 6, in 83d-Yates av. stadium. It was the Titans' fifth victory in six games, the Fenger eleven playing a 6 to 6 tie with Parker in the sixth game.

Dom Sukowicz and Dick Raklovits paced the victors' attack, each scoring twice, both of Sukowicz's touchdowns coming on long dashes. Jim Fuchs scored for Hyde Park in the first period.

Fenger now will meet Tilden, co-champion of the city, in the league semi-final play-offs. The site and date will be selected tomorrow.

Parker concluded its south section season by defeating South Shore, 12 to 7, in 83d-Yates av. stadium, scoring two touchdowns after a scoreless first half. Galen Cheuvront set up the first Parker score, running 43 yards to the South Shore 11, and then driving to the 1, where Bob Plotkin carried it over. Later, Cheuvront passed 47 yards to Glen Gareiss for another touchdown. Joe Hoffman plunged over for the South Shore touchdown, and Dave Olwin made the extra point.

Calumet beat Hirsch, 13 to 7, in Shewbridge field.

Bowen defeated Harper, 12 to 0, last night in Shewbridge field.

to give every youngster in the nation a chance to play baseball, Chandler clearly showed that the game is starting on a new era, one in contrast to the conservative regime of the late K. M. Landis.

Baseball for Everybody

"Sports are in for their biggest boom of all time," said Chandler, "and baseball should lead the way. In the past it hasn't reached out so that every boy who wants to play gets an opportunity. It is our basic plan to make this possible. In our zeal to promote baseball among the kids we are not going to abandon any of the fine principles laid down by Judge Landis to keep the game safe and clean.

"We are enlisting the coöperation of the young business men of this country. The response has been fine. These belong to our new generation of leaders. Baseball will not be lost in the shuffle of readjustment, but it will grow bigger than ever."

Batterymate for Johnson

Ruel broke into baseball in 1915 with the St. Louis Browns and next appeared with the New York Yankees in 1917. He joined the Boston Red Sox in 1921 and was bought by the Washington Senators in 1923 where he was Walter Johnson's batterymate.

He scored the winning run in the final game of the world series against the New York Giants in 1924. He doubled with one out after Catcher Hank Gowdy lost his pop foul when he tripped over his own mask. Ruel later scored when Earl McNeely's grounder bounced over Freddy Lindstrom's head.

Ruel remained with the Senators thru 1930, was with Boston and Detroit in 1931. He returned to the Browns in 1933 and came to the White Sox in 1934. His all-time batting average is .275.

Chandler and Ruel first met last summer when the commissioner led a group of army officers into the White Sox clubhouse in Griffith stadium, Washington. But they probably wouldn't have recognized each other on the street until Chandler came to Chicago for the two day conference which led to Ruel's appointment.

Great Lakes' Early Drives Jar Illini, 12-6

yard mark. George Terlep, Sailor quarter back, then tried a pass which was stopped by Mickey Perkins. Motley moved the ball down to the 4 on a drive over the defensive right guard, picked up another 2, then Aschenbrenner smashed over his left guard for the first touchdown, after less than four minutes of play.

Bob Sullivan, late of the Seahawks, missed the try for the extra point.

Aschenbrenner Finds Opening

Aschenbrenner returned an Illinois punt 14 yards to the Illini 40 yard stripe. Klemmer and Motley made it a first down in two line thrusts, and shortly thereafter went 19 yards to the Illinois 9. Klemmer picked up 6 yards, and, after Motley had been thwarted by the right side of the Illinois line, Aschenbrenner found a convenient opening there for another touchdown. Sullivan again failed to make the point.

In the second period Kolens blocked a Great Lakes punt, Illinois recovering on the Bluejackets' 20. Bill Butkovich tried two futile passes, Tommy Zaborac got 6, but Pierce was stopped on a fourth down try at the Great Lakes' 13. The Sailors then instituted a parade which was frustrated at the Illinois 10, whereupon Center Ettson Wilkins attempted a field goal for Great Lakes which went awry.

Illini Check Sailor Attack

The Illini kept the Sailor attack well bottled up during the second half and got their touchdown chance early in the fourth period. Aschenbrenner intercepted a Butkovich pass and returned it to his own 23 yard line. Pierce scooped up a fumble by Aschenbrenner on the Great Lakes 38 yard mark, then Kwasniewski picked up 5 in two tries. A pass, Butkovich to Tregoning, was good on the Great Lakes 31.

Kwasniewski hammered out another 8 yards, then Pierce found a hole at the defensive left tackle and kept on traveling to the 8 yard line. Kwasniewski required only two punches at the right side of the Sailor line to put it over. Butkovich's try for the extra point was blocked, but Pierce scooped it up and almost ran it over, being pushed out of bounds on the 5 yard line.

BADGERS DROP HAWKEYES, 27-7, TO BIG 9 CELLAR

their first touchdown. Bendrick clicked for 7 yards and Kindt slipped thru for a first down on the 26 yard line.

Kindt made another contribution of 6 yards and Wisconsin got an unexpected lift in the shape of a 5 yard penalty hung on the Hawks for offside. Jerry Thompson slipped a 2 yard advance into the proceedings, Kindt added 3, and Bendrick ripped thru to the 5 yard line. Kindt handled matters from then on. He slipped thru for 2½ yards, added 1 more, and then, on the third attempt, galloped inside his left tackle to cross the Hawkeyes' goal. Martin Meyer's placement made it 7 to 0.

Punt Sets Up Score

Punting was popular during the first few minutes of the second period and it was one of these punts that set up the Badgers' second batch of points. Paul Golden endeavored to capture the punt that Rex John sent down field but after getting his hands on the ball failed to hold it, Bendrick grabbing it for the Badgers on Iowa's 39. By the time the Hawkeyes had recovered from the shock, Kindt had waded thru their defense to reach their 4 yard line. Jerry Thompson swung around for two yards and Kindt then turned in at his right tackle to cross the goal line, Meyer converting for a 14 to 0 score.

After the kick-off following their second touchdown the Badgers did such an elaborate job of substituting that they were handed two five yard penalties for delaying the game, giving the Hawks a first down on the Badgers' 41 yard line.

This was where Niles began pitching in a big way, three of them finding catchers to drive the Badgers back to their 10 yard line. Art Johnson plunged for four yards after which Niles resumed his throwing, his third pitch dropping into the arms of Harold Loehlein who was standing unguarded in the end zone. Niles booted the seventh point.

Chaney Returns 35 Yards

The fourth period opened with the Badgers operating on offense in the neighborhood of Iowa's 44 yard territory. Jerry Thompson, Bendrick, Kindt and Thompson again shaved off 19 yards and then Kindt turned in another yard. Thompson did the rest in one sprint that carried him over his right end to the Hawks' goal for the third touchdown. With Meyer out of action because of an injury, John took over the job of getting the extra point but he missed.

The Badgers' final touchdown began with Chaney getting up to midfield with a 35 yards return of an Iowa punt. Bendrick and Jerry Thompson monopolized the march, the former's first effort netting four yards. Thompson slid over his right end for 16 yards and eight more disappeared when Bendrick chiseled his way thru the Hawkeye wall. Thompson did another sprint around end for nine and Bendrick then shot over the goal, John converting for the final point of the game.

Sportsman's Feature Won By Grey Days

Grey Days, a 5 year old gelding which races for H. H. Fausett of Longview, Tex., scored a length and one half victory over B. H. Wise's Bushwhacker and W. Gher's Compatriot in the $5,000 Sportsman's handicap, featured event yesterday at Sportsman's Park.

Surprises had been sprinkled among the earlier races, but few among the 12,644 at the half mile track anticipated a victory for Grey Days and, in the mutuels the winner paid $11.80, $7.40, and $5.20. Bushwhacker also a long shot, was $13.20 and $9.80 while Compatriot paid $11.80 to show.

Grey Days, shipped to Chicago a month ago from Fairmount park at Collinsville, Ill., failed in his first outing at Hawthorne and then won twice in a row at the half mile track. All of his recent starts, however, had been in races at the shorter distances and it was generally believed that he was a sprinter. In reeling off the mile and a 16th in 1:51 3-5, he won his eighth victory in 22 starts this season.

The mutuel handle for the nine races was $910,095.

NAVY BATTLES NOTRE DAME TO 6 TO 6 DEADLOCK

played the ball you would expect from teams ranking second and third, respectively, in this week's national poll. Seldom has a crowd seen better blocking, surer tackling, finer line play, more spirited ball carrying or more intelligent direction of team tactics. There were stars galore, but the real actors were along the scrimmage strip.

Rival Ends at Their Best

The end play was outstanding with Leon Bramlett and Dick Duden scintillating for Navy and Bob Skoglund and Dick Cronin for Notre Dame. Notre Dame thru the years has sent some rugged guards against Navy, but few turned in a better performance than John Mastrangelo contributed today. His work at left guard was one reason Navy gained only 24 yards by rushing while Notre Dame was rolling up 146. The Irish would have had a wider margin in the ground statistics were it not for the magnificent play of Dick Scott, Navy center.

Frank Ruggerio was the leading ground gainer for the Irish. If he had been in the lineup in the last two plays of the game it is unlikely Navy would have escaped with a tie. He carried the ball 10 times for a total gain of 51 yards and usually he was called on when yardage was needed for a first down. Elmer Angsman was the most active of the Notre Dame backs. He carried 16 times for 56 yards.

Irish Superior in Air

Bill Barron, who didn't enter the game until the fourth quarter, had the best ground gaining average for Navy. He made three trips for 25 yards. The most dangerous ball carrier for the Middies, however, was Ralph Williams. His average showed only 3.5 yards for four efforts, but that figure did not include some fancy returns of Notre Dame punts.

While Navy's forward passers included Bob Hoernschemeyer, former aerial ace from Indiana university, Notre Dame had a wide margin on yardage thru the air, making 116 yards to Navy's 55. Dancewicz completed three of his 13 tosses for 65 yards and Ratterman clicked for 51 yards in his only attempt. Hoernschemeyer completed 4 out of 12 passes for 21 yards. Five other midshipmen shared Navy's pitching.

First Play Startles Navy

Notre Dame stunned Navy on its opening on the first play from scrimmage. Newbold Smith kicked off for Navy to open to the game and Colella returned 15 yards to his 32.

Dancewicz crouched under center, stepped back while Navy tacklers swarmed toward him. His poise indicated he knew he had enough time for a cup of coffee. Suddenly he heaved a long pass to Colella who had sneaked down the north sideline. Colella all but got away for a touchdown, but he was crowdel out of bounds on Navy's 25.

The Irish advanced to Navy's 10 on ground plays, but the drive collapsed when the attack was lifted to the air and Navy took the ball.

The Middies never got out of the hole. Twice they held inside their 20, but finally came the drive that culminated in a touchdown for the boys from South Bend. It started when Ruggerio intercepted a pass from Hoernschemeyer and returned to Navy's 33.

Ruggerio Goes Over

Ruggerio hit center for three and Angsman matched it at left tackle. Ruggerio earned a first down on Navy's 22. Angsman bolted thru his left guard for 3 and Ruggerio got 4 before John Coppedge, Navy's left tackle, brought him down. Ruggerio gained another first down on the 11. Navy's Bramlett grabbed Colella for a 1 yard loss, but on the next play Colella stepped thru the middle for 7. Ruggerio banged over for the touchdown with two Navy men getting a free ride on his back.

Stanley Krivik came in from the sidelines to try for the point by dropkick, but the ball was blocked.

Notre Dame came close to scoring again in the second quarter, but a mechanical slip dissipated the opportunity. It was a long pass from Dancewicz to Leonard, who was in the clear on Navy's 10 yard line. Leonard momentarily had the ball, but it slipped out of his hands when he started to run and was ruled incomplete.

The Irish moved to Navy's 12 early in the fourth period, but a fumble by Colella which was recovered by Coppedge ended a drive that had carried from midfield.

MICHIGAN STATE TRIUMPHS, 14-7, OVER MISSOURI

Homecoming Crowd Sees Spartans Gain Revenge

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 3 [Special]—Michigan State was successful this afternoon in the completion of a dual job. The first was in pleasing a homecoming day crowd of 14,870, the largest turnout to witness a home game in three years. The second was in dealing the University of Missouri a 14 to 7 defeat to avenge a trimming the Tigers gave the Spartans last year to spoil an otherwise perfect season.

A 69 yard touchdown drive in the final quarter gave the Spartans their margin of victory. Not content to being held scoreless during the first two periods Michigan State opened the scoring after eight minutes of the third quarter.

Hendricks Scores Standing Up

Nick Zeigler broke thru, blocked Len Brown's punt, and recovered on the Missouri 24. Russ Reader passed to Zeigler on the 15 yard line. A line buck and a pass was of no value and then Steve Contos went around right end to the 2 yard line. Don Hendricks advanced to the 1 foot line and then on the next try went over standing up for the first score. Bob Mataga entered the game and added the extra point.

Michigan State's score seemed to inspire life to the listless Missouri attack. Eldon Ihm entered the game for Missouri and sparked the Tiger attack. He returned the kickoff to his own 35 where the Missouri attack opened up. Ihm, Bob Hopkins and Howard Bonnet moved the ball to the Michigan State 17 on six plays. Hopkins then shot a pass to Roland Oaks who went across for the Missouri score. Jim Kekeris tied the count with a perfect placement.

Scores on 26 Yard Run

Sustained drives seemed to set the pattern for the second half as Reader returned the Missouri kickoff to his own 31 yard line, a return of 24 yards. Reader and Breslin moved the ball to the Missouri 40 as the third quarter ended.

Reader, on the first play of the final period, shot a 9 yard pass to Warren Huey on the Missouri 31. Breslin then made it a first down on the 26. On the next play Reader was apparently trapped back of the line of scrimmage when suddenly he broke loose from three tacklers and set out around left end. He wove his way thru the Missouri tacklers and went the 26 yards for what proved to be the winning touchdown for the Spartans. Malaga again converted to give Michigan State a 14 to 7 lead.

This is what uncounted thousands of dubs have been waiting for. You, too, can be a Byron Nelson with this mechanical pro invented by a British washing machine manufacturer. No hooks, no slices, true putts, the inventor says. Of course, Nelson plays without the machine, but until the atomic age can come along with robot Nelsons, this is the next best thing for duffers. Sorry, none here yet. This particular Rube Goldberg contrivance, the only one yet extant, belongs to St. Andrews in Scotland.

ARE YOU A DUB? THEN GET ONE OF THESE IRON PROS

BY JAMES SLOAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Oct. 14 [Delayed]—Thanks to the ingenuity of a maker of electric washing machines, it now is possible to learn to become a Byron Nelson in the cozy confines of your own home or backyard. It's all very simple. All you need is a hammer, a wrench, a screwdriver, and a mechanical pro invented by R. F. Cottingham of Scunthorpe, Lincolnshire.

The mechanical pro, a sort of Rube Goldberg gadget onto which any golf club can be affixed, is not intended to alter a golfer's swing but to increase his distance and correct direction by making it impossible for him to swing the club outside of a perfect groove.

Adjustments Are Possible

Adjustments can be made in the device to compensate for any player's height, physique, and strength. A break can be applied to impress the correct swing on the student.

A reporter who has tested the device on a fairway said he soon found out how an occasional slice or hook appeared in his game, since it was impossible to make any but the perfectly grooved-arc swing so much envied by the high handicap player.

He said that when the brake was applied he found himself working hard to perform a complete swing against the mechanical perfection of the machine, but that as soon as the ball was brought into use and the brake released he consistently hit straight, 200 yard drives without effort or worry as to whether any errors could creep into his style.

There are two versions of the mechanical pro, which is expected to be on public sale here soon. One handles fairway shots while the other makes it impossible for the student to make any but straight putts.

It Weighs 60 Pounds

The complete pro for correcting full swings weights between 60 and 70 pounds. It can be erected in the open air or indoors in less than 10 minutes, the outdoor model requiring no tools other than a hammer and a wrench. For indoor erection the base plate consists of a circular disc screwed to the floor and a strut which is attached to a wall.

The pro's inventor, an amateur par shooter at the Holme Hall Golf club, hopes to make it available for rental to students of golf thru large department stores within a few weeks. He has been experimenting on it for two years.

Yachting Notes

Leon J. D. Healy, veteran yachtsman of the South Shore [Milwaukee] Yacht club, was elected commodore of the Lake Michigan Yachting association yesterday at the annual meeting held in the Chicago Yacht club. Commodore Healy, owner of the racing sloop Live Yankee, succeeds Theodore M. Dunlap of the Jackson Park Yacht club. Dunlap, coöwner of the racing schooner Fame, is the only yachtsman to have been twice reëlected head of the association since its founding in 1895. He has been commodore since late in 1942.

Representatives of the 36 affiliated yacht clubs also chose Commodore George W. Schaeffer of the Southern Shore Yacht club as general secretary and T. M. Blackwood, chief flag officer of the Michigan City [Ind.] Yacht club, as treasurer. Victor C. Milliken of the Chicago Yacht club was renamed judge advocate.

SHORT BIER WINS JACKSON PARK'S FROSTBITE SERIES

Jack Rice, sailing his boat Short Bier, won the Jackson Park Yacht club's Frostbite dinghy series yesterday in outer Jackson park harbor. Skipper Rice won four of the eight races and scored 27 points. Max Lauderback, in the Nick Nack, was runner up with 25 points. Gary Comer, sailing Debutramp, owned by Chief Photographer's Mate Fran Byrne, U. S. S. G. R., was third with 18 points.

Sam Clarke won the Chicago Yacht club's series of seven races for D class Frostbite dinghies, sailed in Belmont harbor. Fleet Capt. A. D. Dowrie Jr. was second, and Warren Hedden third.

The first races in the Jackson Park Yacht club's annual series for the Commodore Fred Weston trophy will be sailed by the club's dinghy fleet this afternoon. A regatta for D class dinghies in honor of Rear Commodore Ed Schnabel and Mrs. Schnabel, and Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Van Mell, charterers of the R class sloop Ardelle, will be held by the Chicago Yacht club starting at 1:30 p. m.

LEAFS TO MAKE DEBUT TONIGHT ON STADIUM ICE

Pro Hockey

NATIONAL LEAGUE
Games Tonight
Montreal at Boston.
New York at Detroit.
Toronto at Chicago.

The Chicago Blackhawks will entertain the Toronto Maple Leafs in Chicago Stadium tonight. It will be the first local appearance of the season for the lads who captured last year's Stanley cup playoffs and who have been bolstered by the return of Syl Apps, Bill Taylor, and Gay Stewart.

This trio is a boon to the Leafs, for Apps in his prime was considered by many to be the equal of the great Howie Morenz, while Taylor, before his service in the Canadian army, led all Leafs in scoring and Stewart won the Calder trophy in 1943 to gain recognition as the best rookie of that season.

Their return has offset the loss of Goalie Frank McCool, who blanked Detroit in the first three finals of the cup series of last spring. McCool, who has retired from competition, has been replaced by Baz Bastien, 23 year old rookie from North Bay, Ont.

Stadium fans tonight will see one of the largest squads in league history, for Manager Connie Smythe of the Leafs is carrying two goalies, six defensemen, and four sets of forwards as a safeguard of reserve strength for the long season which lies ahead.

The Blackhawks are not particularly impressed by the quantity of their opponents, and because of three intensive drills since their victorious home debut against the New York Rangers Wednesday are in fine shape and not too worried about the Leafs' quality, even tho the Toronto sextet dealt them their only league setback some 10 days ago.

The lineups:

CHICAGO		TORONTO
Karakas	G.	Bastien
Allen	L.D.	Pratt
Wares	R.D.	Morris
D. Bentley	L.W.	Schriner
M. Bentley	C.	Bodnar
Mosienko	R.W.	Carr

OUTDOOR SPORT TO REACH PEAK IN THIS MONTH

BY BOB BECKER

Sportsmen are going into just about the busiest month of the year, what with the peak of duck hunting in the midwestern states, the opening of the deer hunting season in the northern states, pheasant, rabbit and quail shooting starting in Illinois a week from today, and field trials scheduled for week-ends.

Bird dogs that have been inactive while waiting for these great autumn days of hunting are about to gallop thru marshes and fields once again. The little beagle hounds, the best canine singers in the business when they hit the scent of a cottontail, are going to start broadcasting before long. And the long-eared coon hounds who can yodel and sing baritone with the best of 'em also will do their night hunting before many more days.

This Is Big Month

This is the big month for both upland game and duck hunters and it keeps the rifle and shotgun boys trying to maintain their hunting schedules.

The northern states are looking for a bigger crowd of deer hunters this fall than they've had for quite a few years. The boys who tote rifles or bow and arrows for killing deer are a large and enthusiastic group.

They also are a fairly optimistic bunch, because recent surveys show that in some states a fellow hasn't much chance to kill a deer. This isn't the deers fault. The old timers tell us it's usually because many hunters can't shoot well enough to drop a buck with a quick or difficult shot, or else the boys aren't smart enough to outwit the deer.

Utah Best Deer State

In Maine a survey shows that 50 out of every 100 deer hunters bring home meat. In Michigan, where 224,000 sportsmen enjoy the thrills of deer hunting, about one out of three brings home a buck. Utah apparently is the hot spot for the deer hunting game, for 80 out of every 100 shooters in that state get venison with their bullets.

In upland game hunting the number of birds brought home per hunter per shot undoubtedly would show a big increase if sportsmen would use fewer full chock guns and more hunting dogs to find the cripples.

In all the plans for postwar hunting—better and more attractive shotguns and rifles—more efficient ammunition—more comprehensive game stocking programs and other features to produce big crops of game, it's noticeable that no organization has a plan to conserve game by increasing the number of hunting dogs.

Uncounted Ducks Lost

Millions of ducks are lost each year by shooters without retrievers. In upland game hunting actual field surveys show that one third to better than one half of the pheasants shot are not recovered by dogless hunters.

Here is an obvious waste of game bird resources that could be cut materially if American hunters were induced to take a greater interest in retrieving wounded birds than in longer barrel shotguns and shells that drop game at greater distances.

12 STOCKS to Benefit from Foreign Trade

WITH termination of lend-lease and removal of export controls, U. S. foreign trade is beginning to accelerate sharply. Volume should climb well above the prewar average. In two years following World War I total exports were almost three times larger than the prewar level.

What Issues to Buy?

Because export trade normally carries wide profit margins, some good investment opportunities are developing. This week's UNITED Report presents 12 stocks in position to benefit directly from the expansion in exports already under way.

RELYING ON SET INTEREST RATE HELD PERILOUS

Shift Would Affect Investment Value

BY THOMAS FURLONG

In 1899 the president of the Equitable Life Assurance society asked for opinions on the future trend of interest rates from a number of individuals chosen for their reputed financial acumen. The replies, which were to guide the company managers in their investment policy, displayed remarkable unanimity in the opinion that the then existing low rates would continue indefinitely.

Subsequent events proved the "experts" to be dead wrong. The low rates lasted about two years, after which there was an upward trend in interest costs and an accompanying drop in the prices of bonds issued at the old rates. Included among the experts was August Belmont who peered gravely into the future and delivered himself of the opinion that the existing rates would hold at least 20 years.

Experts Can Be Fooled

The results of this survey were described the other day by Thomas I. Parkinson, now president of Equitable, as an illustration of how the experts can be fooled.

Parkinson then mentioned the remarkable agreement in financial quarters today that there is no threat to bond prices from a rise in interest rates. It is a maxim, preached in Washington and accepted everywhere, that because the government has a big debt to carry interest rates will remain low of necessity.

Letting the record speak for itself, Parkinson did not prophesy a rise in rates and a decline in bond prices. He made plain, however, that Equitable's investment policy takes those possibilities into consideration.

Profits Made on Utilities

Parkinson told incidents in the recent investment history of Equitable.

The company in 1935 bought second grade utility bonds of underlying properties of the Insull system and other groups when prices had been unduly depressed by the financial troubles of the parent concerns. These investments were made, Parkinson emphasized, after thoro research. The bonds have since been called and refunded at much lower rates, in some cases two or three times, and have yielded substantial profits to Equitable.

In 1938 the company bought railroad bonds which then were being dumped at "unbelievably low prices."

Parkinson also referred to a utility bond which the company hesitated to buy a few years ago at a 4¾ per cent rate which since has been refunded repeatedly, in the most recent case at a 2¼ per cent rate. He described the bond as second grade.

Investment Policies Differ

Pointedly, Parkinson said that Equitable has been liquidating public utility bonds and is unwilling to load up with issues currently offered at extremely low rates.

But this policy is not shared by all insurance companies. He mentioned one whose holdings of utilities have increased in recent years by almost the same amount as Equitable's holdings have been reduced.

Parkinson was speaking to a group of investment men. He closed by admonishing them to avoid tying up disproportionate amounts of funds at present low rates unless they are prepared to face losses.

CHICAGO TO GET AIR SHIPMENT OF FISH TOMORROW

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 3 [Special] —Five thousand pounds of fresh fillet of haddock, consigned to Chicago and the west coast, will be flown from Boston Monday morning aboard a United States Air Lines "Flying Icebox," a twin engine DC-3 cargo liner fully refrigerated.

Of the cargo, 2,000 pounds will be in Chicago markets 12 hours after processing at the Boston fish pier. The remainder will be carried to San Diego and Los Angeles, Cal.

Light Aircraft Engine Made by Chrysler

Development of a new 2,500 horse power liquid cooled airplane engine —more powerful than any engine of similar size—was disclosed yesterday by Chrysler corporation after secrecy was lifted by the army air forces for which it was built.

Weighing only 2,430 pounds, less than one pound per horse power, the Chrysler engine is a 16 cylinder inverted V type. It has developed speeds approaching 500 miles an hour in a specially adapted testing plane. The engine's small frontal diameter permits excellent visibility and reduces "drag" in flight, conserving fuel.

Extensive Tests Conducted

The first engine was delivered to the air technical service command last January, 56 months after work was begun on designing boards. Designers and engineers numbering 312 conceived and designed more than 1,100 parts for the engine. More than 25,000 hours of testing were devoted to the engine and its parts and assemblies.

Included in the development program were the construction of a propeller test house and an aircraft engine test house adjoining the Chrysler engineering division in Detroit. Equipment valued at more than 1½ million dollars was installed. The government provided 15½ millions for the power unit's development.

Adaptable to All Planes

Flight tests up to 30,000 feet have been conducted at Evansville, Ind., by test pilots of Republic Aviation corporation. Tho the engine has been installed only in a fighter type ship, said a Chrysler spokesman, it is an all around engine that can be used successfully in large multi-engine planes.

Chrysler engineers planned the engine from its inception for mass production, applying the technique of auto engine design. The result was an engine which could be produced quickly and with maximum economy.

Omnibus Net Profits Dip in Nine Months

Omnibus corporation, Chicago holding company whose subsidiaries are the major local bus transportation companies in Chicago and New York City, yesterday reported reduced net earnings in the first nine months of 1945.

Net income decreased to $990,308, or 95 cents a share, from $1,064,086, or $1.06 a share, a year earlier. Gross operating revenues, however, rose to $10,273,538 from $9,664,844 a year ago. Tho federal tax provisions shrank slightly, operating expenses and other than federal taxes totaled $8,816,111, against $8,045,670 a year ago.

Certain-teed Income Higher

Certain-teed Products corporation, Chicago building materials maker, reported nine months' net income rose to $694,363 from $498,335 in the first three quarters of last year. A contingency reserve of $70,000 was set aside, altho no similar reserve was made a year ago.

Sales continued at high levels, said Rawson G. Lizars, chairman, despite man power shortages which have limited production. Volume rose 13.5 per cent to $17,749,283 from $15,638,543 a year earlier.

New Plant Rising

Lizars said construction is proceeding on a new roofing plant in Dallas, Tex. Completion of the unit will facilitate Certain-teed's southwest operations.

Radio Corporation of America reported September quarter net income was $2,527,280, or 12 cents a share, compared with $2,294,456, or 11 cents, a year ago. Nine months' profit was $8,204,470, or 42 cents a share, against $6,734,671, or 31 cents.

PLEDGES FIGHT IF BRITISH TRY TO DUMP WOOL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)— Rep. Barrett [R., Wyo.] said today that any attempt by Great Britain to sell 380 million pounds of United States stored wool on the domestic market will bring "vigorous protests" from congressmen representing wool growing states.

He asserted the wool was brought to this country for "strategic purposes only and with the distinct understanding that it would not be sold on the domestic market."

"It is reliably reported that representatives of Great Britain have indicated a wish to sell the wool on the American market," said Barrett.

The British wool was brought here for the "sole purpose" of providing an adequate supply for Great Britain in the event shipments from Australia were stopped by the war, he explained.

847 Surplus Army Cars and Trucks Will Be Sold

RETAILERS' PROBLEMS

Altho retail trade has no adjustments to make corresponding to war plant conversion difficulties of manufacturers, it has certain transition problems of its own which are receiving increasing attention of merchants and investors. Among these is the announced policy of the office of price administration in many cases to require retail dealers, along with wholesalers, to absorb ceiling price increases granted producers.

Manufacturers are being permitted to raise prices as an offset, at least in part, to increases in labor and materials costs, but with no increases in ceiling prices of distributors. An example is washing machines, on which the OPA permitted producers to raise prices 7.7 per cent, to be absorbed partly by the wholesale and partly by the retail dealers. On radio sets OPA allows a 12 per cent advance in manufacturers' prices but permits no rise in 1941 prices to consumers.

Protests against such policies have come from officials of such organizations as the National Retail Furniture association and the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations. A large volume of sales of products which had not been produced for civilian use since 1942 may to some extent offset the reduction in distributors' gross profit margins.

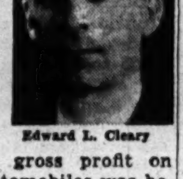
But in some cases there is likelihood that the saving to consumers from this policy will be apparent rather than real. In announcing price increases for refrigerator makers, the OPA said that despite these advances—with retail prices unchanged—"there will be no reduction in dealers' over-all profits since they will not find it necessary to accept trade-ins at more than resale value or hold special sales to stimulate consumer buying." If such a rule should be applied to automobiles, the reduction in old car trade-in allowances in effect would amount to a corresponding addition to the retail price of the new car.

Other problems of merchants include scarcities of many kinds of goods, altho much merchandise not offered in recent years is now becoming available. Discussing the outlook, Fred Lazarus Jr., president of Federated Department Stores, Inc., told stockholders recently that, altho a relatively favorable sales record should continue, restoration of many customer services withdrawn during the war and increased wage rates will probably reduce profits before deducting taxes.

"Somewhat reduced purchasing power plus the increased cost of merchandise promotion and markdowns that usually attend an adequate supply of goods will also, it is believed, affect the high rate of profits before taxes, which should be recognized as a war phenomenon," he said.

Dealers Fight Sharing Costs of Car Output

Chicago automobile dealers yesterday assailed as unfair the suggestion by Price Administrator Bowles that dealers absorb a part of increased costs of manufacturing new cars. Bowles wishes prices of the new cars to be close to the 1942 levels.



Edward L. Cleary

One dealer said that before the war the average gross profit on the sale of new automobiles was between 20 and 25 per cent. Dealers thruout the country had long had as their objective a net profit of 5 per cent and in 1941 a substantial total made 4 per cent, he said. However, for many years the lively competition in the industry held net profit below that figure.

Operating Costs Rise

Out of his gross profit the dealer pays his costs of doing business. All dealers said their operating costs have risen steeply since the war, rents alone, in some instances, increasing 50 to 100 per cent.

"Dealers are bitterly opposed to Bowles' proposal that they take less profit on the new cars," said Edward L. Cleary, president of the Chicago Automobile Trade association. "They will fight such a move to the limit. Dealers' overhead costs have gone up sharply all along the line. The cost of conditioning old cars taken in on trades is increasing because of their age.

"We disagree with Bowles' contention that less salesmanship will be required to sell new cars. Actually we believe that competition will make necessary a high degree of salesmanship. Not only will each make of car compete with the others in the industry, but automobiles will have to compete with refrigerators, rugs, radios, and numerous other items for the consumers' dollars.

"Can Break a Dealer"

"Regulation of prices can make or break a dealer." Bowles expects dealers to maintain their profit position thru greater volume. But how about the small dealers?

"If profits are cut and new car prices are held to the 1942 levels the public can expect to see allowances on used cars cut sharply."

Chicago Bank Clearings Increase to 560 Millions

Chicago bank clearings last week were $560,700,000, compared with $539,900,000 in the preceding week and $564,600,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

RAIL STRENGTH HELPS STOCKS ADVANCE AGAIN

Price Average Sets 8½ Year Peak

Securities exchanges will be closed Tuesday because of elections in New York and other cities.

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Strength in rails helped today's stock market to close higher again. The average was at the highest level in more than 8½ years.

Demand for carriers apparently was based on rising dividend hopes and realization the financial position of most roads was the best in their history. Dealings quickened at intervals. Gains of more than 2 points were numerous at the close, but losers were plentiful. Turnover of 920,000 shares was largest for a short session since June 23.

Highest Since Early 1937

The Associated Press 60 stock composite was up 0.2 point at 73.8, highest since March 13, 1937. The rails topped their June high with a gain of 0.7 point at 46.2, a record since May 8, 1937. The utilities were up 0.1 at 50.9, a high since Feb. 20, 1937. On the week the average rose 1.7 points, the widest gain since the week of Sept. 22. The carriers were up 2.2 points. The market was fairly broad with 839 issues traded. Of these, 405 rose and 227 declined.

The week's volume was 9,460,000 shares, largest since the week ended June 30. Activity on the Curb aggregated 4,830,000 shares, the largest total since June, 1937.

New highs were reached by Great Northern, Southern railway, Schenley, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, and A. O. Smith. Higher were Santa Fe, New York ville, Public Service of New Jersey, and Standard Gas $4 preferred.

RAIL BONDS ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 3 (AP)—Heavy demand for secondary rails in today's bond market pushed several carriers fractions to more than a point higher. The activity failed to extend to other sections of the list and industrial and utility issues were narrow and mixed. Volume expanded to $4,330,000, the largest total for a Saturday since June 23. United States government issues and foreign dollar bonds were quiet. Central, Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Bethlehem, Johns-Man-

CHICAGO STOCKS CLIMB

Prices again were higher in a large Saturday turnover of 37,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Forty-seven issues advanced against 19 declines in a total of 87 traded. Most active were New York Central, up ¾; Commonwealth Edison and Miller & Hart, each up ⅛, and Chicago corporation, unchanged.

MANUFACTURERS OPPOSE FORCE IN ARBITRATION

The Midwest Manufacturers Associations, Inc., yesterday advised management representatives to President Truman's labor-management conference next week in Washington, D. C., that it was opposed to peace time compulsory arbitration of labor disputes by any agency.

E. H. Sims of Elkhart, Ind., president, said the organization represented industrial and manufacturers associations in 11 states.

"The compulsory arbitration of labor disputes necessarily involves the assumption by government of the fundamental perogatives of manangement and labor in private industry," said a policy statement accompanying Sims' letter. "Experience with the war labor board has fully demonstrated that compulsory arbitration is undesirable and unsatisfactory.

College Gifts Are Possible at Low Costs

The urgent need of substantial gifts to colleges and charitable institutions, and the methods of making such gifts at low net costs to contributors are described in a booklet mailed yesterday to Chicago business and professional men.

Prepared by the investment house of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, the booklet says the educational institutions which provided such valuable assistance in war time research, especially in connection with the atomic bomb, need "more money than ever this year."

The first payment of the country's "immeasurable debt" to the schools can be made by individuals in "generous but thrifty" ways, it said. These include outright cash gifts, giving securities, or selling securities on which a loss has been incurred.

Examples Show Costs

The following examples show what the net costs would be under the various methods to a person in the 75 per cent federal income tax bracket who wishes to donate $7,500 to a school or charitable organization:

Outright cash gift—If he deducts $7,500 from adjusted gross income [generally gross income less business deductions], the net cost of the gift is $1,875, or 25 per cent of $7,500.

Giving securities — He owns 1,000 shares of stock for which he paid $5 a share. The present market value is $7.50 a share, a paper profit of $2,500. If he turns over to the college the stock at its appreciated value he may claim a charitable deduction of the full $7,500. This will mean a tax saving of $5,625 [75 per cent of the $7,500 deduction] and the college will get the benefit of the full $7,500. Altho taking the full market value as a deduction, he is not considered to have realized any capital gain.

Sale Reduces Saving

If he sold the stock and gave the proceeds, the tax saving would be only $5,156.25 [75 per cent of net proceeds of $6,875] and the college would get only $6,875 [$7,500 less the $625 capital gains tax on securities held more than six months].

Selling securities on which there is a loss—If he holds securities on which he has incurred a paper loss of $15,000 and the securities are now worth $7,500, it will be to his advantage to sell the stock and give the proceeds. He may then use the $15,000 loss to offset any capital gains he may have. Any excess loss may be taken as a deduction from ordinary income to the extent of $1,000. If there is any unused portion of the $15,000 loss, it may be carried over to any or all of the five following years.

ICKES PROPOSES WAR RESERVE OF SUBMERGED OIL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)— Creation of a large oil reserve from submerged deposits of the continental shelf may be the key to the United States remaining a world power, Secretary of Interior Ickes said today.

With new discoveries of oil in the United States declining, Ickes said the nation will draw more and more from foreign sources and it is vital that sufficient supplies be retained in this country for future self-protection.

President Truman two months ago proclaimed United States jurisdiction over the natural resources of the continental shelf.

INFLATION VIEW PUSHES GRAINS TO NEW PEAKS

Rye Future Attains 20 Year High

Inflation psychology dominated grain trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, and general buying lifted all deliveries of rye, December and May wheat, and the distant futures of oats to new peaks.

Closing quotations were near the top, with wheat up ⅛ to ⅝ cent a bushel. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ higher, with December at the ceiling. Oats were up ⅝ to ⅞, rye 1 to 3⅛, and barley ¾ to 1¼.

Buying of rye was stimulated by an advance of the 5 cent permissible limit for one day in the December contract at Minneapolis. In Chicago the December future reached $1.68¼, a 20 year high. Despite high prices little cash rye was offered from the country.

Oats and Wheat in Demand

A marked revival in the shipping demand for cash oats, with sales of 300,000 bushels, and expectation of export business helped the upturn in oats futures. December was the only delivery not reaching a new seasonal peak.

The probability that European countries would be in the market for large quantities of wheat early next year, after announcement that 7 million bushels or more would be purchased for December shipment under government allocation, was a factor in buying of wheat futures. However, buyers were inclined to be cautious because December was less than 2 cents below the ceiling.

Government Buying Small

Government purchases of wheat last week were relatively small as the result of reluctance of elevator and other interests to sell because of a shortage of box cars to ship large amounts of grain from the country.

Clear and cool weather prevailed over the greater part of the corn belt, but offerings of grain for deferred shipment were relatively small, altho processors and feed manufacturers bid ceiling prices. The quality of Illinois corn received so far this season has been relatively favorable, but no grain from areas affected by a killing frost late in September has been included.

ANDERSON MAY SEEK PURCHASE OF 2 SUGAR CROPS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)— American sugar authorities said today Secretary of Agriculture Anderson may ask congress for authority to buy two Cuban sugar crops at a time to break an impasse in negotiations for purchasing Cuba's 1946 supply. Sugar stocks are the lowest since 1942.

Two week old negotiations for Cuban sugar were postponed yesterday until Dec. 4 to permit further discussion of problems. Officials said the administration would seek authority from congress to offer a compromise which involves purchase of the 1946 and 1947 Cuban crops for 3.675 cents a pound.

Cuba has been asking that price for those crops and 1948 production as well.

A CHALLENGE TO MANAGEMENT

The national wage and price policy announced by President Truman, Tuesday night, places directly on management the responsibility for increasing wages while maintaining prices.

Confronted by this serious problem, alert management will face the challenge and will endeavor to devise ways and means to pay more, produce a quality product and still make a fair profit.

The answer will be found in keeping unit costs in line, through

Methods improvement
Revised plant layout
Elimination of waste
Job classification and evaluation
Sound wage and salary structure
Wage and salary incentives
Supervisory training
Basic personnel administration
Adequate organization structure
Wider markets and better selling

These are areas in which we are experienced, qualified, and able to assist management. An interview entails no obligation.

PROFITS have come
TOO EASILY!

That certain industries would profit from the post-war boom demand for goods has long been all too obvious. Little skill was needed to select these particular companies as good investments—but, as always, THE OBVIOUS HAS BEEN OVERDONE! Some of these obvious situations have proved much too popular, and have jumped too high in price. Simultaneously, other stocks, temporarily less favorably situated, have been neglected, and are too low in price.

YES, THE TRUE BULL MARKET HAS BARELY STARTED

But this is no time for indiscriminate buying. Many stocks should actually be sold at these levels—others should be held or bought regardless of interim declines in the general market.

But the real secret of profits from now on will be to take the steps that may well give your POSTWAR CAPITAL APPRECIATION PROGRAM a flying start. You are sure to gain advantages if you promptly square your present holdings with the now virtually completed Gartley Basic Postwar List, centered in the 25 industries sure to benefit from the coming peace boom. Best of all, you will avoid the current confusion of mind and moreover you will enter the postwar future with a strong, carefully considered investment program. Especially important to you are the:

STRIKE BLAMED FOR HOLDING UP SOLDIER RETURN

12 Troopships in Need of Repairs, WSA Says

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 3 (AP)—The return of troops from overseas is being delayed because of the strike of AFL and CIO machinists in the San Francisco bay area, the war shipping administration said today.

Lt. Comdr. W. C. Peet Jr., Pacific coast director of the WSA, said the strike had held up repair work on 12 troop ships with a carrying capacity of 22,290 men.

Demanding a 30 per cent pay increase, 10,000 machinists walked off their jobs Oct. 29, making some 50,000 additional workers idle.

STRIKE CALLED OFF

A strike of Southwestern Greyhound drivers, scheduled to start at midnight last night, was canceled after local union officials were advised by their national headquarters that the strike would be unauthorized. Southwestern drivers operating out of Tulsa, Okla., would work as usual tonight.

Conditions remained unchanged in Chicago's three day old Greyhound bus strike.

David O. Zimiring, attorney for local 1200, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes' union [AFL] whose 300 striking members have tied up all Greyhound buses operating east and south out of Chicago, was in Washington yesterday in an effort to renew negotiations with officials of the five Greyhound lines where the strike now is in effect.

William G. Murray, department of labor conciliator, reported "some progress" yesterday in negotiations between striking non selling employes and officials of Marshall Field & Co. after a recess had been taken in the conference for the week-end. Striking employes continued to picket loop and suburban stores of the company.

OPPOSE HIGGINS MOVE

New Orleans, La., Nov. 3 (AP)—The possibility that all AFL unions in the New Orleans area will be asked to engage in a 24 hour work stoppage highlighted union reaction today to the closing of three Higgins Industries plants here.

An offer of Andrew J. Higgins Sr. to sell the three boat and trailer plants to the unions with which he had been in dispute brought from William L. Donnels, publicity chairman of the AFL New Orleans Metal and Building Trades councils, charges of "smoke screen" tactics and a demand for a congressional or federal investigation.

"He knows we couldn't handle the plants, that we don't have the money, and wouldn't know what to do with them," Donnels said.

NAME STEEL CONCILIATOR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—The government today moved to head off a potential nation-wide steel strike by appointing a special conciliator to handle the wage dispute between United States Steel corporation and the CIO Steel Workers' union.

Labor Secretary Schwellenbach named Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the New York state mediation board, as a special conciliator in the case.

PLAN NEW AUTO TALKS

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP)—Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the CIO Automobile Workers' union, said today that wage negotiations between the union and General Motors corporation would be resumed Wednesday.

At that time, Reuther said, the corporation plans to give its answer to the union's briefs supporting its demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase.

Similar negotiations with Chrysler corporation are to be resumed Nov. 15, and with the Ford Motor company Nov. 20.

END AIRPORT STRIKE

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Some 225 CIO mechanics and maintenance workers of American Export Airlines returned to their jobs at the New York airport today, ending a strike that began Oct. 23. The workers are members of the air line mechanics department of the CIO United Auto Workers.

ASK $2 A DAY RAISE

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov 3 (AP)—Approximately 700 employes of the Proctor Electric company remained away from their jobs today in an effort to obtain a $2 a day wage increase and recognition of a union shop.

Officials of the CIO United Electric, Radio, and Machine Workers, who authorized the walkout, said if management does not meet their demands by Tuesday the union will order 1,500 employes to quit work at Proctor & Schwartz, Inc., the parent company.

Meat Output, Export Sales Make Big Gain

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON

Chicago meat production, led by pork, rose in the last two weeks to the largest tonnage in almost nine months. An increase in marketings of all classes of meat animals caused the production rise.

Federal market observers were watching production trends closely because the rise was accompanied by heavy orders for European relief. Immediate further expansion of both production and buying for export was predicted. Pork tonnage, almost double the volume of three weeks ago, was expected to lead output for several weeks as the industry moves toward full winter production.

Total Arrivals Mounting

The stock yards received about 12 per cent more cattle, hogs, sheep, and lambs than in the preceding week and 20 per cent more than three weeks ago. The total was the biggest since the middle of February. However, the supply was 23 per cent under a year ago.

The government, buying for European relief, already has substantially stepped up exports. In the last three weeks more than 12 million pounds of beef and veal were purchased, which was more than lend-lease bought in any three weeks of its existence. During the first seven months of 1945, before lend-lease was terminated, its beef and veal purchases totaled only 875,000 pounds. Current export buying of lamb and mutton has been stepped up to the biggest tonnage since January, and pork buying is heaviest since last spring.

Average Price Higher

The three principal meat animals, steers, hogs, and lambs, together averaged $15.35 a hundred pounds last week, above any corresponding November week since 1918 and second highest on record for this time of year. The average a year ago was $14.65.

Altho some classes of plainer grades of cattle declined as much as 25 to 50 cents late in the week, the six day steer average held at $17.10, equal to the highest for any week since August, 1919, and highest on record for this time of year. The hog average was unchanged from the preceding week at $14.80, but highest for early November since 1919. The lamb average declined 25 cents to $14.10, lowest in three weeks.

RECOMMEND PAY HIKE TO DRIVERS OF RY. EXPRESS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3 (AP)—A Presidential emergency board today recommended a 10 cents an hour wage increase for 7,500 AFL teamsters employed by the Railway Express agency in eight large cities. The raise would be retroactive to Aug. 20, 1945.

The board, appointed Oct. 10 to investigate the workers' demands, said failure to grant the increases would result in a work stoppage "which would interfere with the effective transition to a peace time economy."

It said the employes in New York City, Cincinnati and Cleveland, O., Newark, N. J., Philadelphia, St. Louis, Mo., San Francisco, Cal., and Chicago "have shown inequities and maladjustments" within the scope of the administration stabilization program. The report gave the present average wage for the workers involved as $1.09 an hour, with New York drivers getting $216.49 a month and Chicago drivers $210.10.

THE Japan - we occupy

By ROBERT CROMIE

JAPAN SOMETIMES SEEMS almost like an imaginary country—a product of the dreamings of some madcap creature with one foot solidly in the 20th century, and the other planted with equal firmness somewhere in medieval times.

There is nothing consistent about this island empire. Everywhere you turn two and two are far more likely to equal six or 21 than the usual total. Very often cause and effect seem entirely unrelated, which makes it difficult for a Johnny-come-lately to understand Japanese customs and Japanese thought.

Yet, perhaps just because of this curious complexity, this strange medley of old and new, Japan has a very real fascination for all but that minority who make up their minds before arriving that there would be nothing here either interesting or likable, and have seen no reason whatever to change their opinion.

Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan. It is the highest peak in the country, 12,487 feet—and is the annual object of pilgrimages by thousands of persons.

A formal garden, typical of many to be found in Japan. Often the visitor will find such samples of natural beauty alongside power plants or other evidences of Japan's modern side.

Onoe Kikugoro, Japan's leading actor, altho now past 80, still takes an active part in the theater. Here he appears as a warrior, a traditional role, but only one of many that he assumes in some plays. (Kimpei Shaba photo)

A geisha. All of the larger cities have them, and, ideally at least, they are supposed to be beautiful and talented as singers and dancers and to know well the tea serving ritual. Actually some are as old as 70.

Onoe Kikugoro again, in the role of a dancing girl. He is especially known for his dancing and his impersonations of feminine characters. Women are not permitted to take part in the traditional plays of the classical stage. (Kimpei Shaba photo)

What to Expect from Atomic Energy

This is the second instalment of a report on atomic energy originally prepared by a special committee of editors and first published in the September issues of all McGraw-Hill magazines. This instalment, like the first, is reprinted in The Tribune by permission of the McGraw-Hill Publishing company. Last Sunday's instalment told how atom splitting releases energy and how high power atoms are created and isolated, specifically discussing the process of making the new element plutonium (No. 94) from uranium and the methods of separating U-235 from U-238. This latter separation is necessary for explosive uses, such as the atomic bomb, and is probably important for future commercial use.

COSTS mean little in war, but peace time uses of U-235 and plutonium must pass the dollar test in competition with coal, fuel oil, natural gas, gasoline, and electricity.

On the basis of energy costs only, "all other things being equal," the table in columns 5 and 6 on this page shows at what price per pound U-235 would give the same energy cost as conventional energy sources selling at the indicated prices. For such comparisons it is convenient to remember that one pound of U-235 is equal (energy-wise) to about 11,400,000 kilowatt hours, also to 1,500 tons of coal, or 200,000 gallons of gasoline.

Fuel engineers understand the limitations of such oversimplified comparisons. Others should be warned that "all other things" are never equal. With this thought in mind, reconsider the uranium piles operated at Hanford to produce plutonium. These use U-235 in the cheapest form, say about $1,400 per pound, assuming purified normal uranium at $10 per pound. (140 pounds of uranium contain one pound of U-235.)

If this were the whole story, coal would have to sell for a dollar a ton to break even with U-235 as a water heater. However, the pile using normal uranium must be immense to hold its own in a chain reaction. More important, the accumulating fission products "poison" the reaction after only a small part of the U-235 has been used up. Then the uranium cylinders must be removed for plutonium recovery. Finally, it has not yet been found possible to operate the normal-uranium piles at high enough temperatures for practical power production.

If we go to the other extreme and build a small pile, using concentrated U-235, we shall run into excessive material costs, perhaps several times the $52,000 per pound set down in the table as the equivalent of 20 cent gasoline.

Something between the two extremes is likely to prove the most economical—perhaps a pile operating on a U-235 concentration between 1 and 10 per cent.

The engineer of the "atomic power age" must know the price of uranium 235 in various concentrations and the characteristics of piles suited to them. No such information is yet available. He must also watch the danger from radioactivity, the requirements for radiation shields, explosion hazards, etc.

Before discussion of possible and probable future applications of atomic energy to the arts of peace, the atomic bombs should have consideration. We may assume that these bombs contained from two to 200 pounds of either U-235 or plutonium, or both. No more precise information is available.

Details of the bomb design have been completely suppressed, but the following basic considerations are stated or implied in the Smyth report:

The explosive in a bomb must be highly concentrated U-235 or plutonium. Since slow neutrons could not produce a satisfactory explosion, the neutron retarder or moderator is minimized. This in turn requires a U-235 mass so large that the escape of neutrons without hitting nuclei will not be excessive. For every 1,000 atoms hit, the neutrons produced must split more than 1,000 new atoms, so that the reaction will proceed rapidly in an expanding chain, as shown below.

There can be little leeway in the size of the explosive charge. For a given shape there is a certain "critical" weight of material. If this is exceeded the bomb explodes instantly. If the weight of charge is less than the critical, it cannot be made to explode.

Therefore, the critical mass must be created at the moment of explosion.

Carbon slows down neutrons for easier hits on U235 nuclei. Hits on U238 start plutonium creation.
Piles using natural uranium will not operate unless many tons of material are used to reduce neutron escape.
Enriching uranium (more U235) makes smaller piles possible.

The Smyth report suggests that this can be accomplished by breaking down the charge into two or more well separated parts, each having less than the critical mass. At the appointed moment these could be brought together within the bomb to create a supercritical mass, which would then explode automatically.

Except possibly for superblasting operations, uncontroled explosive reactions cannot be permitted in the peace time use of atomic energy. This means that the quantity of U-235 assembled in any one spot must always be kept well below the critical weight to avoid spontaneous explosion.

Depending on the particular application, the most desirable concentration of U-235 may range anywhere from the 0.7 per cent in normal uranium up to 100 per cent, with the probability that many industrial applications will find the greatest economy in concentrations between 1 per cent and 15 per cent.

This matter of the degree of concentration of U-235 has received little public attention, yet nothing could be of greater practical importance. To make this point clear, consider the two extremes, 0.7 per cent of U-235 and 100 per cent of U-235 respectively.

The Hanford pile, using normal uranium (0.7 per cent of U-235) with carbon moderator, must be very large to work at all. It is inefficient in the sense that it must be shut down after a small part of the U-235 has been consumed. It cannot operate at high temperatures.

Its great advantage as a heat producer is the fact that its U-235 is bought at the lowest possible price. If purified normal uranium sells, for, say, $10 per pound, the price of 140 pounds (containing one pound of U-235) will be only $1,400. This would be a very favorable price if the pile could operate efficiently with the 0.7 per cent U-235.

Concentrating the U-235 to 100 per cent would permit a much more compact and convenient pile—perhaps little more than small pieces of U-235, encased in aluminum to ward off corrosion, and immersed in a tank of water; this should convert the water into steam at a regulated rate.

In large part the control would be inherent. The water as a moderator would keep the chain going, but if the reaction got too violent the resulting higher superheating of the steam would decrease the moderator effect and thereby hold the reaction in check. Yet even if all this comes true the cost of concentrated U-235 in the near future will be many times $10,000 per pound.

Running up the concentration only a few per cent above that in normal uranium may prove to be the way to get reasonable pile size and good efficiency without incurring exorbitant concentration costs.

When atomic energy is applied, the starting point is heat, picked up by water, air, or a special heat transfer fluid. Intermediate heat transfer fluids may be essential in certain applications (space heating and service water, for example) where people must be protected from injury by radioactivity.

The intermediate heat transfer fluid shown for the gas turbine would, of course, have to operate at temperatures up to 1,200 F.

BUT—

Note that "other things" are never equal. U-235 in normal uranium form is by far the cheapest, but involves use of excessively large and inefficient "piles." The unit cost of the U-235 in enriched mixtures increases with the degree of enrichment. Over-all cost comparisons can be made only for a specified concentration of U-235 and for apparatus suitable for that particular concentration. Possible explosion danger and need to protect personnel against radiation are other important considerations.

There seems to be no basic reason why the pile itself could not be built inside the compressed air receiver, discharging its heat directly to the compressed air.

With rather high concentration of U-235, this arrangement might be suitable for large airplane drive if excessive weight of radiation shields could be avoided.

Also, presumably, rockets and planes of the "buzz bomb" type could be powered by atomic heat delivered to the air of the jet steadily, not in puffs.

The sketches above stress direct applications of hot air, steam, and hot water to process and space heating. This emphasis is justified by the often overlooked fact that such applications of heat have many times the total energy value of all the electricity generated in the United States for all purposes.

There has been much popular speculation regarding the type of engines required for atomic power generation. The answer is simple. Present engines, steam turbines and gas turbines, can be used with little or no change. This, of course, does not rule out the possible discovery of specialized engines for atomic power, or even direct production of electricity from atomic energy.

In the long run the implications of atomic power are staggering for both war and peace. However, popular writers on the subject have undoubtedly created unreasonable hopes in the minds of readers—for example, the expectation that in

THIS is a new age—new ideas, weapons, even names in the news. So I wasn't surprised to find a new Alice Faye instead of the star who quit the screen two years ago to add to her family.

You'll see Alice soon in "Fallen Angel." Twentieth Century had quite a time getting her back before the cameras. Money wasn't an inducement. "What do you do with a star who isn't interested in more money?" asked her bosses.

The only solution was to find a story she liked. And they did, in "Fallen Angel," the 36th script they'd sent in 24 months. When they told her about the new stars coming up Alice smiled and said, "It's lovely." They sent her fan mail over. She loved to think her public still wanted her, but she still wanted her kind of story.

Alice Faye with Alice Jr. and Phyllis and proud Father Phil Harris.

I've known Alice for years. First the shy Alice Moffitt Leppert, daughter of a New York policeman, who came here 11 years ago to sing with Rudy Vallee's band in "George White's Scandals." When the star of that show, Lillian Harvey, became temperamental and walked out, the pretty blonde singer from Rudy's band stepped into her place, and came out of it a star.

Now, Alice is unchanged in one essential—she's still shy and squirms while being interviewed. That natural reluctance to discuss her pictures seems to have increased during the two years she's been away. But now she holds a bloom about her. She holds her head proudly with a new dignity. I suspect personal happiness has brought about the new look on Alice's face.

In "Fallen Angel," with Dana Andrews, Alice has the sort of role she really likes.

She's much more proud of her successful marriage and motherhood than of her screen hits. Having established that fact for herself, Alice is now ready to give her career another go—if the story's right.

I said, "You can't live entirely for those babies." (She has two—Alice Faye Jr. and Phyllis.) "You can see enough of them between pictures, Alice. Other stars do."

"It's more than the babies. Phil didn't want me to make any more pictures, you see. That kept me away at first. He wanted me home with the children——"

I started to laugh, and she joined me. "I know what you're thinking. You're thinking he didn't need to persuade me very much. Well, you're right—it was easy. I became tired of playing those big musicals. But I felt if I could make pictures I'd be proud to show my kids some day, that would be different. When I told Phil that he agreed with me.

"I began to feel I'd never find the right role, but along came June Mills in 'Fallen Angel.' She's an organist in a small town. There's the feeling of music thru it without its being a musical. I can get away from those everlasting spangles. How I hate spangles! I wear simple dresses and tailored suits, and, above all, I'm a real person—a human being—a woman with a heart—not just a painted, doll-like dummy."

"But you sing a song. How come?"

"I didn't intend to," said Alice. "I intended to keep strictly away from all the things I'd done before. One day on the set I asked Director Otto Preminger if he could get me a recording of the music from 'Laura' that was so popular. He gave me the record. On the other side was a little thing called 'Slowly.' Whenever I play a record I always have to see what is on the other side, and Otto banked on that.

"When I heard 'Slowly' (which, incidentally, is by Dave Rackin, who did the music for 'Laura') I loved it. 'That's the sort of song I like to do,' I told Otto. So he showed me where it could fit into the picture. There's a scene where Dana Andrews and I are driving along in the car. We turn on the radio, I begin to hum along with the music, and naturally take over the song. It wasn't until after I'd recorded it that they told me he'd planned it that way from the start."

It would be strange for the girl that Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, and Cole Porter have called "the greatest song plugger of them all" not to sing on the screen. Alice has been earning her living by singing since she was 13. She's sung all types of things from the livelier Berlin rhythms to dreamy, nostalgic melodies which leave her audience misty-eyed.

Oscar Hammerstein II. is at work on a musical for Alice Faye at the moment. Since she has the right to reject any picture unless it meets with her strict standard, the outcome of this hangs in the balance. Her objection to musicals lies chiefly in the story and the limited scope it permits an actress. If she can find one in which she can sing and yet play a good dramatic part that is lifelike and convincing, that's her meat.

ALICE FAYE . . . back at work on her own terms.

Up to the time Alice married Phil Harris she didn't know how to boil an egg. Now she can cook them 20 different ways. She even cooks her own lunch—and sometimes lunch for some of the cast—in her dressing room on the set. She says Phil taught her to cook during the first years of war. She had a nurse but couldn't keep a cook, so they both pitched in and made their own meals.

I wanted to know what quality Phil Harris has that attracted Alice in the first place.

"All the other men I'd known treated me like a glamor girl who would melt if exposed to daily living," she said. "Phil treated me like a human being. We both were tied up in work that kept us indoors and under electric light. So we spent our time together in sports—horseback riding, playing tennis, and swimming. Phil is no night club hound; neither am I. I'm strictly a home girl. We have those traits in common. It makes for happiness, liking the same things.

"We're together so much that Alice Jr. embarrasses me. She can't understand any woman being alone. When my girl friends drop by the house she'll say, 'Where's your man?' If they say they haven't one she'll tell them, 'My daddy will escort you just as he does Mommy and Phyllis and me.'"

Alice tells me she doesn't sing very much at home, but the children do. They sing as naturally as they talk, play their toy pianos with gusto, and make "big music" at the grand piano.

Fox is mighty glad that Alice is back at work. Her white quilted satin dressing room is one of the biggest on the lot.

She loves practical jokes. She used to sneak into Don Ameche's dressing room and tie knots in his clothes, or hang Ty Power's shoes to the catwalk while he looked all over the place for them. But now her jokes are more restrained.

Preminger has a habit of saying: "Make a good take for me, now; it's my birthday!" The first time he tried it on Alice she found out he wouldn't have a birthday for six months, and embarrassed him by giving a surprise party on the set, with ice cream and cake.

In the old days Alice Faye was never in a hurry to leave the studio. She'd sit around her dressing room chewing the fat with friends until 7 or 7:30. But now when 6 o'clock comes, no matter what gives, she's thru. Career goes on strictly during working hours; outside of them Alice Faye is very much Mrs. Phil Harris. And believe me, they both like it that way.

After All, It's Just Your First and Lost Love

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

HERE YOU WERE, going blissfully along, never worrying about where your next Friday night's date was coming from, always keeping your Friday nights open for that special boy and always having them filled. Tho nothing definite was said, it was he who took you to the proms, he who squired you to every movie you wanted to see, and he who came over on Sunday afternoons just to talk. You began to depend on your beau boy. He filled all your evenings and even monopolized some of your dream time.

But suddenly one of those Friday nights comes and goes and young Joe doesn't ask you out or call to explain why. Without any apparent reason you're left high, dry, and lonely while he goes about his business and begins dating other girls.

Or perhaps you were the boy half of one of those ever lovin' couples whose romance was there for all to see in the form of your heavy class ring on her third finger, right hand, or in the identification bracelet that circled her wrist, her name on one side, yours on the other. Or perhaps the only way others could tell was by the stars you both wore in your eyes when you were out together. You were going steady and you didn't care who knew it. But, again without explanation, she gave you back your ring or your pin with the feeble excuse, "My mother thinks I'm too young," or "I still like you, but . . ." And you're a pretty dejected young character.

So if you're moping around the house on those evenings you used to spend with your lately loved, if you sit in your room playing "your songs" over and over again and reliving all the dates you had together, if you snap back at your little sister when she asks you to tie her shoe and refuse to help your mother with the dishes, it's time you got out of that rut and into the groove.

Most high school romances aren't destined to go into the permanent home and hearthside stages anyway, so first of all put out of your mind those poignant thoughts of "the things that might have been." If you do that, things will be simpler all around. Then figure out if it was your heart or your pride that was hurt by the break-off. When you're used to talking to your friends about one particular fellow or girl and suddenly stop, they may ask embarrassing questions about who gave whom the brush-off. And you're just the character who doesn't want to tell them. If that's the case, it's your pride.

Or you've been reliving all the dates you had together, and the memories you've accumulated seem to get better every time you think about them. Very quickly you're ready to sing the blues loud and long. So analyze your feelings. Take the night of the senior prom, for instance, the evening that topped all other evenings. Was it really your date who made the night so memorable? Or did it have something to do with the mood music they played, the dim lights, and the special way the moon seemed to shine thru the trees when you were on your way home?

Going with a fellow or girl for a long time gets to be a habit, like brushing your teeth in the morning, and you're bound to miss those evenings together even if you weren't really in love. Maybe you're more lonesome for companionship than really heartbroken. If this is the situation, things aren't so difficult.

Find other ways to spend your lonely evenings. For a fellow this is easy. He can go out with the fellows and date other girls, slowly getting back into the routine. For a girl it's a little more difficult. A boy-girl party at her home, with no particular boy for each girl and a few extra fellows thrown in, is one of the quickest ways to make people realize she's back in circulation.

Have the girls over for an evening just to pass an otherwise empty week-end. Try an occasional coke at the teen canteen. Let people know you're again available. At first it will be hard, of course. You've been going to the same places, dancing the same way, listening to the same songs, and holding the same hand for so long that it's difficult to get readjusted. But you can.

Sitting around at home, moping and hoping for some one to call, is fatal for a gal. Go out and have fun, even if it's only with girls. Read extra books, learn to skate or swim or play bridge, so that you'll be more fun when you do start dating again.

But suppose this was one of those things you hoped would go on forever but didn't. Going out with other people is still one of the speediest ways to get over the brush-off. It won't be easy. You'll go to the places you used to go together and you'll feel blue. You'll hear your favorite songs without your favorite date. And you'll remember how low and soft your girl's voice was and the funny spiky way your fellow's crew cut grew in front. But little by little the memories will wear off. And it's easier to try having some sort of fun while you're forgetting, instead of sitting at home and waiting for the ache to wear away.

If you talk about it constantly your friends will be so conscious of it that they won't let you forget even when you can. So tell your best friend the sad story once—but just once—and then keep it to yourself.

And here's a mistake fellows and girls so often make when they break up: They start talking unkindly about their old loves, pretending that they never did like the fellow anyway and can't see what any one else sees in their old girl. So skip this kind of idle chatter—it won't make it easier for either of you.

These methods aren't guaranteed, of course, to make the forgetting process completely painless. It would take a June Allyson or Van Johnson date complete with all the trimmings to do that. But they do help the situation a little. So follow the rules and take it easy—this is just your first and lost love!

GLORIA AND CONSUELO O'CONNOR . . . MODELS

WHEN YOU LEAF THRU a fashion magazine and suddenly think you're seeing double, you probably are! And chances are that the lithe and lovely twins you are seeing are Gloria and Consuelo O'Connor, the Conover Cover Twins, who are making cover girl history. The twins, who attend Lodge school in Manhattan, started modeling for Harry Conover two years ago and now are filling a full schedule of photographer and fashion show appointments, working at $10 an hour.

The twins are especially in demand for fashion shows, because designers find them convenient for showing different ensemble effects. Gloria and Consuelo have all the attributes commonly associated with twins. Besides looking exactly alike, they think alike, have the same tastes and reactions to situations. Because of their identical appearance, television has recently beckoned. Production men and writers for television shows have found that the O'Connor twins are able to solve a tough production problem, as they can be used as one character, thereby making it possible to dissolve different scenes with no lapses of times.

Into their very full schedule the twins also fit voice and piano lessons at Carnegie hall. And even the teachers can't tell them apart!

WILL DAVIDSON

THE second album in CAPITOL's exciting history of jazz series is out, and it's called "The Golden Era." Its 10 sides feature two recordings by Paul Whiteman groups—one of which is the same outfit that cut his first song. The old boys grind out "Wang Wang Blues," which Pops first recorded in 1921, and it is a pretty good example of what awful things Whiteman and some others did to jazz when they started corseting it in arrangements. The other side, "San," shows Whiteman at his best in the jazz field.

Matty Malneck is again playing hot violin as he did with Whiteman about 1927, and Mike Pingitore is back strumming his banjo. Paul Geil attempts to duplicate the Bix Beiderbecke passages without missing too terribly far, and all in all it is a good counterfeit of Whiteman's best jazz.

Jack Teagarden's Chicagoans handle "Deed I Do" and "Stars Fell on Alabama" in a way designed to make you hark back to the toddling '20s. The former is a jam session, the latter a slow, simple exercise in unrehearsed ensemble work. The Duke Ellington influence in jazz is pretty well illustrated by a group working under the name Sonny Greer and the Duke's Men. Greer, Taft Jordan, Otto Hardwick, Barney Bigard, Freddie Guy, Duke Brooks, and Red Callender combine to produce the best sides in the album. They are "Mood Indigo" and "The Mooche." They explain to a large extent why the Duke stands out so magnificently in modern music.

Jack Teagarden

Red Nichols, one of the truly great jazzmen, who sometimes isn't recognized for his real worth, recreates the sort of mid-'20s hot jazz he was playing in "Royal Garden Blues" and "I'm in the Mood for Love." Then from Kansas City comes a sample of that town's special jazz form, with Jay McShann's Kansas City Stompers playing and Julia Lee, a great blues singer, featured. These are items, really. As a whole the album doesn't carry quite the excitement of the first, but it is an invaluable history of another period of music.

The next album scheduled for this month is to be "Then Came Swing."

two or three years the Detroit builders will market cars with built-in "lifetime" slugs of U-235 and "fist-sized" engines.

Yet it seems fairly safe to predict that atomic energy will find some commercial applications within the next five or 10 years, first, probably, as a premium fuel like aviation gasoline, worth a fancy price for specialized applications where low weight or some other characteristic is important.

As the cost of concentrating U-235 is reduced and application efficiencies improved, atomic energy may compete with cheaper fuels, perhaps ultimately with coal.

Important nonpower applications of atomic energy may well include the ultra-high temperature processing and fabricating of materials; also modern "alchemy," building and rebuilding atoms to create new elements and to produce old elements at lower costs.

Radioactivity obtained directly or indirectly from artificial atom splitting should find many important medical and industrial applications.

Turning back to ordinary power applications, we must avoid the temptation to overstress the economic importance of lower cost power fuel. Fuel cost is only about 17 per cent of the gross receipts of the electric utilities. Here's another way to put it: If, after allowing for transmission losses, one kilowatt hour delivered to the consumer from modern plants represents a coal consumption of 1.5 pounds, and if the coal costs $5 per ton, cancelation of the coal bill could not save more than three-eighths of a cent per kilowatt hour. And atomic fuel will certainly not be free.

Performance of the atomic bomb is a monument to the scientists who unlocked the secrets of the atom and suggested the basic technique of making plutonium and concentrating U-235.

From there on the job was at least 50 per cent engineering. The various big plants of the Manhattan project are vast assemblages of pipes, tanks, boilers, valves, instruments, and controls, installed and operated by engineers, largely designed by engineers. From now on the speed with which atomic power becomes practical will depend on the effectiveness of the engineer-scientist team.

It is possible, of course, that national controls may completely upset the entire technical and economic pattern of this discussion. For reasons of national security the government may decide to control or restrict atomic power materials, plants, and operations in ways not yet determined.

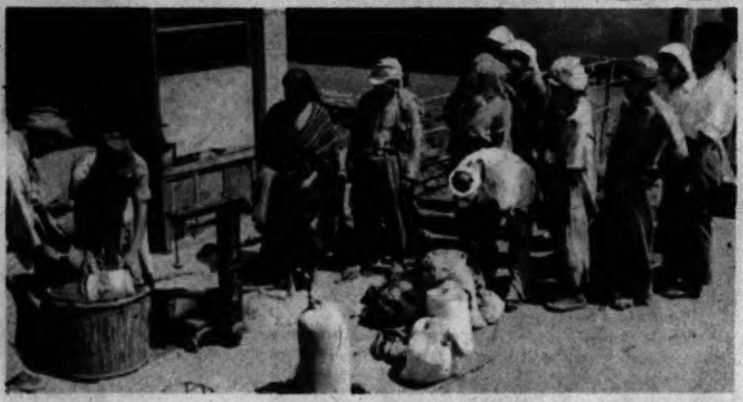
Most countries—England, France, Germany, Australia, the Philippines, for example—soon have the power to make visitors become accustomed to whatever on first glance seemed strange and unusual. Japan seems to have entirely the opposite effect. The longer one looks about, the more curious seem the customs and sights. Take Tokyo, for example.



The war-born poverty of Japan is illustrated by this line of poorly dressed Tokyo citizens waiting for ration of black beans. (Acme photo)

Tokyo, whose pre-war population was more than 6 million, is now largely destroyed by American fire bombs, which burned down not only many of the poorer sections of the city, but also managed to level many of the modern structures as well.

Yet the street cars still sway down the main streets, each car bulging with people who hang grimly to the sides and seem almost to pop from every window like overripe peas. And these street cars go clanging past sweating rickshaw men trotting briskly along with their passengers, or plodding ox carts, unchanged from before Commodore Perry put an end to Japanese isolation.

Tokyo has skyscrapers of respectable size, and swift moving subways whose doors open and close with all the smartness of the New York underground. Yet on the streets are found men and women clad in their traditional kimonos, their packages wrapped in "furoshiki"—gaily printed cloth squares—many women carrying youngsters on their backs, the doll-like children supported by cloth bands beneath their thighs and under their arms—some of them sleeping while their mothers hurry down the crowded streets.

Along the once fashionable Ginza—Tokyo's 5th av. or Regent st.—are still found a few up-to-date department stores, whose stocks are sadly depleted. Along its entire length, sidewalk merchants are selling such indispensables as razor blades, buttons, paper, souvenir dolls, incense, books, pencils, twine, and other odds and ends such as might be found in a five-and-ten store. It is not unusual to see among the thousands of persons thronging Ginza a Japanese mother seated on some debris placidly nursing her baby, quite oblivious of the frank stares of passing American soldiers and sailors.

Tokyo is a modern city, and has modern hotels, but in them the desks, tables, and washstands are too low for easy use by occidentals, while the bathtubs in the newly built Dai Ichi hotel, for example, are about the proper size for Gen. Tom Thumb to use in comfort.

Many news photographers have as a "must" on their agenda a picture of Dick Tregaskis, Saturday Evening Post writer, seated in one of these contrivances. He is 6 feet 6 or thereabouts.

In the heart of downtown Tokyo there are also such sights as a basement kept constantly filled with water from a broken pipe, in which often swim teen-age youngsters, either entirely unclad or wearing a G-string reminiscent of Gypsy Rose Lee.

In the center of Tokyo, not far from the partially burned Imperial hotel, lie the grounds of the imperial palace, guarded not only by a wide moat and towering stone walls, but also now by military police and the American 1st cavalry division. Passing Japanese for the most part remove their headgear and bow reverently in the direction of the emperor's residence, regardless of whether they are passing on foot, in street cars, or in autos.

Tokyo is a modern city, right enough, but is always like a subtle reminder that the Japanese take many cues from the past—there is the clatter of wooden shoes on concrete, the swish of silk kimonos brushing past blue serge.

The damage to Tokyo must be seen to be believed. Block after block are nothing but disorderly piles of rusted tin, melted glass, and tumbled walls, with scattered chimneys and rust reddened safes. A few concrete structures are still standing, defiant and unhurt. Mushrooming among the debris are modest homes, mostly salvaged from wreckage, which men and women are busily erecting in the race against the coming winter.

Despite the terrific blasting taken by Tokyo, Yokohama, and other cities, so far as can be learned there have been no instances of violence by Japanese troops or civilians against American troops. On the contrary, many English speaking persons approach obviously bewildered Americans on the street and offer their aid. Salutes are not uncommon. Crowds of cheering youngsters giving the V sign can be seen in many parts of town. Occasionally one sees little girls standing gravely at the curb, giving ceremonious bows as the jeeps roll past.

In country towns, however, there is still uneasiness. A few days ago, when a group stopped their jeep outside a police station—that being the best place to buy black market sake—one member of the party strolled down the crowded street, which promptly emptied ahead of him as tho he were a carrier of the plague.

This, however, was not unfriendliness, but timidity, as evidenced by the shy smiles of children caught peeking from doorways and windows at the strangers in their town.

The countryside provides further proof of the sharp cleavage between the ancient and the modern in Japan. In one place we found a huge power plant, equipped with a beautiful dam and the latest machinery, while a few miles away, next to a Buddhist temple, was a little waterwheel turning crude machinery which lifted a round piece of wood into the air and dropped it into a trough for pounding grain.

Japan's book stores are crowded, her libraries are regaining the patrons lost during the war, and her illiteracy rate is reasonably low. Yet there still persist such seemingly serious ceremonies as those held within the last 10 years in Tokyo, (a) to the souls of departed insects, (b) to the spirits of old hats, or (c) that held under the auspices of the Tokyo telephone bureau to thank the telephone for its labors.

Also, before most of them were sent flaming into ashes by the prowling B-29s—known to the Japanese, incidentally, as "Mister Enemy"—Tokyo stores sold such remedies as: monkey skulls for headaches, baked bat to make the hair grow, toasted hawk for skin ailments, sparrows' claws for coughs, baked whole sparrow for rheumatism, the ashes of an owl for throat trouble, poisonous snakes and monkey brains for madness, seaweed for baldness, and a mixture of beehives, gourds, chestnuts, goldfish, baked cicada, ox teeth, worms, and weasels or turtles for other ills. Also available was a powder made from burned lizard which has the power, when dusted on a young man and young woman, to make them fall deeply in love.

No description of Japan, of course, would be complete without some mention of such famed attractions as her natural beauties, like those found at Fujiyama, Kyoto, Osaka, and Kamakura, and some discussion of her artificial beauties—the geisha.

American sailors meet geisha in Tokyo.

Fujiyama, as every school child knows, is sacred to the Japanese. It is the highest peak in Japan—12,467 feet—and was unclimbed by foreigners until 1860. No woman was permitted to ascend its sacred slope until 80 years later. Now, however, or at least in pre-war days, some 57,000 persons climb it yearly, with the best time for such activity between July 11 and Aug. 31. Fujiyama has not erupted since 1707.

In addition to mountain climbing, pre-war Japan was a sports paradise, with swimming, skiing, baseball, tennis, golf, and hunting for wild boar, hare, and pheasant. Golf was introduced into Japan 42 years ago. In pre-war days there were dozens of fine courses thruout the country, most of which, however, are now planted to potatoes and other crops.

Points of interest in the Japanese home islands of Hokkaido, Honshu, Shikoku, and Kyushu are too numerous to mention fully, but they include the famed Daibutsu, or Great Buddha, at Kamakura, which, cast in bronze in the 13th century, has withstood all the attacks of time, including a great tidal wave in 1494 which swept away the building in which the statue was housed. The Daibutsu is 42 feet high, 97 feet across the base, and weighs 92 tons. An even larger and older Daibutsu, but inferior artistically, is at Nara, a former capital of Japan.

Either in Tokyo itself or within easy range are numerous Shinto and Buddhist shrines, memorial shrines, the mausoleum to the late Emperor Taisho, and luxurious hotels boasting the sulphur baths and other refinements once beloved of tourists. For visiting Americans with horticultural inclinations there is an abundance of tree blossoms and flowers, including more than a hundred varieties of the cherry trees that once stood as a symbol of peace loving Nippon.

Off the beaten path it is possible to find inns catering largely to the Japanese, but here visiting Americans will find it expedient to remember the "when in Rome" proverb, and do as the Japanese do. This means removing the shoes on entering the rooms, bathing in water used either before or after by other guests, and sleeping on thick quilts on the floor. The treatment accorded guests depends in part on whether they are paying for treatment as first, second, or third class patrons, or—most favored of all—special guests.

The Japanese language falls strange on western ears, altho some soldiers are managing to pick up enough to make simple wants known. One of the major pitfalls of the Nipponese tongue is, of course, the varied modes of address used when speaking to inferiors, equals, and superiors, as well as the use of the honorifics—"o-cha," for example, instead of "cha" when ordering tea. It is the only way to be considered polite.

The Japanese are a highly emotional people, despite their carefully cultivated impassivity, which serves so well when, for example, your country is occupied by enemy troops.

But a hint that the poker faces are only skin deep is given by the large number of suicides, many done in the traditional fashion of "seppuku," which is the polite term for hara-kiri. (Hara literally means abdomen, and kiri means cutting.) Many commit suicide for what seem to occidental minds like trivial or curious reasons.

A flyer killed himself for taking his plane too low over the emperor's palace, a general who lost a major battle atoned for it by death, and recently one general stabbed himself for "having failed to prevent the imperial palace from being hit by fire bombs."

Mount Mihara, a volcano on Oshima, was a favorite place for suicides. Despite a police guard, more than 1,500 persons have flung themselves into the fiery crater since the first girl set the style in 1933.

Any complete understanding of either Japan or the Japanese, of course, presupposes some knowledge of such things as "bushido," the samurai code, ancestor worship, the divinity of the emperor, and the immense popularity of plays and novels dealing with such subjects as, for instance, "The Forty-seven Ronin."

These sturdy characters died 200 years ago after first avenging the death of their young master, Lord Asano, whose suicide was ordered after he wounded Lord Kira in a dagger duel. When Asano was dead, his ronin (this word means

BEAUTY TIPS FOR TEENS

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

HERE'S to you teen-agers and your first real date which looms so importantly on your horizon! And may it be the big, big event you look forward to.

Be it a formal affair or not, you certainly will want to put your best face forward. But don't forget that as you are you have a lot of attractiveness in your youth alone to put you over in a great big way. Don't be one of the silly sisters whose ambition is to look as unlike her real self as overdone make-up and mutilated eyebrows will make her. This year especially it's the 100 per cent girl that keeps the stag line hopping.

We were discussing your teen-age grooming and other problems recently with a young woman who has come face to face with many of you. She is adviser and consultant for a well known organization interested in young beauty problems.

Due to her first-hand, face-to-face experiences with teen-agers, she agrees that what is important is the clear, glowing complexion, meticulously clean, which is not arrived at thru make-up but thru a properly balanced diet, hours of sound sleep every night, and lots of outdoor exercise.

Once out of the tub, you tie a towel around your head to protect your hair-do from grease. Then scoop up some cold cream and massage it all over the face.

As for lipstick, you're begged not to grind it on. Two curved strokes for the upper lip, one for the lower, filling in lightly, best suits your good looking purpose.

For the big date, that important one we are talking about, you are advised to start with a warm bath and an all-over scrubbing. Once out of the tub, you tie a towel around your head to protect your hair-do from grease. Then scoop up some cold cream and massage it all over the face. Work with your fingers in little up-and-out whirls. Tissue off and then rinse with warm soapy water first, then with very cold water, and spare it not. If the skin is very oily a mild freshener may be patted on. For the average skin a little film of cold cream may be used before you start the make-up rites.

The beauty adviser argues for plenty of light on the subject and suggests that vanishing cream is a good foundation for junior miss complexions. You need only the faintest touch of rouge. Try smiling as you blend it into the skin. A clear red shade gives a nice rosy tone and blends nicely.

As for lipstick, you're begged not to grind it on. Two curved strokes for the upper lip, one for the lower, filling in lightly, best suits your good looking purpose. And be sure to blot with a tissue.

Finally, dust your own skin-toned shade of powder over your face. A speck of cold cream on upper lashes and brows may help.

The towel off, your hair combed in simple style, leaving the sophisticated or sensational hair-do's to your big sister's sense of discretion; your dress donned, and the finished job should produce a joy to behold and a perfectly gorgeous evening.

The answer is YES, if you smooth on Pacquins daily. This fragrant snowy-white cream is made to give hands a softer feel, a whiter look, no matter how much daily rubbin' and scrubbin' you do.

Doctors and nurses know the damage rubbing and scrubbing can do to the skin's appearance. Their hands take that beating 30 to 40 times a day. Pacquins Hand Cream, originally formulated for their use, is super-rich in "humectant"—an ingredient compounded to help keep skin soft and supple.

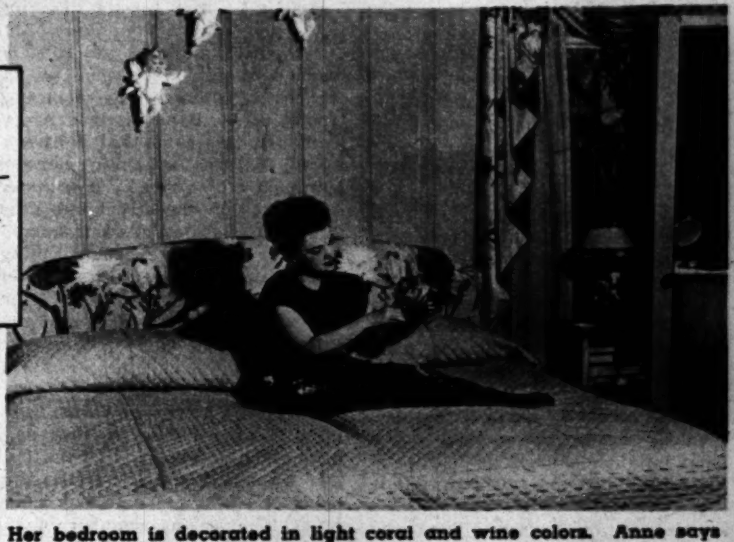
ANNE BAXTER was playing in a summer stock show in Massachusetts when talent scouts persuaded her to go to Hollywood and try out for the leading role in "Rebecca." She finally signed a long-term contract with 20th Century-Fox. For her first picture she was loaned out to another studio to make "Twenty Mule Team." Then she played a leading role with John Barrymore in "The Great Profile." After two more pictures she starred in Orson Welles' production "The Magnificent Ambersons." She is now being teamed with Fred MacMurray in 20th Century-Fox's newest picture, "Smokey."

Anne was born in Michigan City, Ind., 22 years ago. Four years later the Baxter family settled in New York. Her parents sent her to a school of drama. On her first summer vacation she started the stock career that led to Hollywood.

Anne lives alone in a comfortable six room Boston colonial house in the Hollywood hills. At least once a week she indulges in an extravagant beauty habit. She shampoos her hair in the ordinary manner, and then instead of a lemon or vinegar rinse she uses champagne. In some cases she uses red wine instead of champagne. She says it gives a nice sparkle and glow to the hair.

She practices religiously on the piano; two hours a day is the minimum. She is working on a scrapbook of all of her favorite recipes. She likes to swim, play badminton, and go for long walks.

Anne is 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 112 pounds. She has chestnut hair and hazel eyes.



Her bedroom is decorated in light coral and wine colors. Anne says five or six hours of sleep is sufficient for her.

A minimum of two hours a day practice at the piano is her self-imposed assignment. Her musical tastes range widely from classics to swing.

Does BORDERLINE ANEMIA* Say You're Older Than You Are?

HAVE you lost your "push" and "drive"—is there a slump in your spirits? Borderline Anemia can make you feel like a failure!

Borderline Anemia is a highly prevalent condition! Doctors say thousands upon thousands of men—up to one out of two women—suffer from it.

Healthy Red Blood Cells Are Needed for Energy

Many people who should enjoy life have a Borderline Anemia, resulting from a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency. Their blood cells are not red and big enough for full vigor.

Without full health in these red blood cells, which control the amount of energy you get, you can't expect to feel alert and "on your toes."

Ironized Yeast Helps Build Up Blood and Energy

If you're threatened with Borderline Anemia—if you're tired, pale, listless—you need Ironized Yeast Tablets!

Of course, your condition may come from some other cause—so it's wise to consult your doctor at regular intervals. But, if you've a Borderline Anemia* — if you need to build healthy red blood cells, to improve your energy — take Ironized Yeast. It contains the very elements that half of us don't get enough of for red blood, for fullest energy. Insist on genuine Ironized Yeast Tablets. At all drug stores.

Resulting from a ferro-nutritional blood deficiency.*

Energy-Building Blood
This is what the doctor sees in his microscope looking at blood rich in energy-elements. Note big, plentiful red cells that carry oxygen to release energy to every muscle, limb, tissue.

Borderline Anemia
Thousands have blood like this—and never know it. Note puny size and irregular shape of red cells. Blood like this can't generate the energy you need! Only sturdy blood can give you top energy.

A BEEF BIRD IN THE HAND—

By MARY MEADE.

STUFFINGS are more than meat extenders, for they add new flavor as well as variety in texture to the meat dish. One excellent stuffing and meat combination is beef birds. They're easily made by wrapping round steak around a spoonful of stuffing to form small cylindrical rolls. Since the birds may be cooked in the oven after they're browned, add scalloped potatoes and a baked dessert to the menu.

BEEF BIRDS
(Serves eight)

2 pounds beef round steak, cut ½ inch thick
Bread stuffing
Flour for dredging
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons lard or drippings

Cut round steak in pieces about 2x4 inches and place a spoonful of any well seasoned bread stuffing on each. Roll, fasten with wooden picks, and dredge in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown in hot lard or drippings, add a small amount of water, and cover. Simmer slowly on top of range or cook in a 300 degree oven until meat is done, about 45 minutes. For gravy, thicken the liquid in the pan.

Another favorite way to use stuffing is with pork chops. If the chops are thick enough, cut a pocket in each and fill with stuffing. Otherwise place the browned chops over stuffing in a casserole and bake uncovered.

The hearty beef birds and scalloped potato menu provides a perfect background for tart cranberry salads. The ones shown here are made from canned jellied cranberry sauce.

CRANBERRY SALADS
(Serves six)

1½ cups finely shredded carrot
⅔ cup crushed pineapple, well drained
Mayonnaise
1 1-pound can jellied cranberry sauce

Mix shredded carrot and crushed pineapple with mayonnaise, tossing together lightly with a fork. Cut jellied cranberry sauce in half inch slices with a sharp knife. If desired, fancy shapes may be cut by using a paper pattern or a cooky cutter. Place a spoonful of carrot-pineapple mixture on a bed of lettuce and top with cranberry slice.

These flavorful beef birds were made from beef round steak, but veal steak may also be used.

At left: Sparkling cranberry slices with grated carrot and crushed pineapple make fine fall salads.

Today's $5 Prize Recipe

LEMON DESSERT
(Serves six)

30 marshmallows
¼ cup water
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¼ cup lemon juice
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
8 graham crackers, crushed

Cook marshmallows in water in top of double boiler until melted. Add egg yolks and lemon juice, stirring constantly. Cool slightly, then fold in egg whites. Place three-fourths of the cracker crumbs on bottom of refrigerator tray, cover with lemon mixture, and sprinkle remaining crumbs on top. Chill in refrigerator until firm. AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.

This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of World War II. Subjects are heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Veranck.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

THAT high ranking officers remain far behind the fighting lines, out of danger of shot and shell, is a belief that was proved definitely erroneous in World War II. As the records show, many of our army and marine colonels and generals were in the thickest of the fighting.

One of these was Brig. Gen. William H. Wilbur of Highland Park, Ill., who in January, 1943, was decorated with the medal of honor (congressional medal) at Casablanca, French Morocco, by President Roosevelt for his gallant part in the American landings in North Africa. The citation by General Eisenhower which accompanied the award read in part:

"He prepared the plan for contacting the French in Casablanca and securing an armistice to prevent unnecessary bloodshed. He landed at Fedala with the leading assault waves . . . He proceeded in total darkness thru 16 miles of enemy-occupied country, intermittently subjected to heavy bursts of fire, and accomplished his mission. Returning toward his command, Wilbur detected a hostile battery firing effectively on our troops. He took charge of a platoon of American tanks and personally led them in an attack and captured the battery."

General Wilbur was born in Palmer, Mass., in 1888 and was graduated from West Point in 1912. In 1920 he was graduated from the Ecole Speciale Militaire, St. Cyr, France, and in 1924 from the Ecole Superieure de Guerre, Paris. In 1932 he completed a course at the command and general staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., and in 1935 he was graduated from the army war college in Washington. He moved to Highland Park in 1938 on his appointment as general staff officer of the 6th corps area (now the 6th service command) and became area chief of staff in 1940. During the war he served overseas with a brilliant record, being elevated from colonel to brigadier general in December, 1942. He is stationed now at the Presidio in San Francisco, Cal.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

New students gather outside the auditorium following first convocation presided over by Minnesota's new president.

Minneapolis

By ELEANOR NANGLE

WITH a 24 per cent increase in enrollment this semester over last year, the University of Minnesota begins to look more like its old gigantic self. There are 10,127 students on hand this fall, which brings the enrollment figure much closer to the pre-war figure of 15,000.

But here, as everywhere, the return to normal is not without complications of a new and peculiar kind. Because it has so many more women students than ever before, the university is grappling now with a really critical housing shortage. Never overly supplied with dormitory space, its students now find it more than ever difficult to find off-campus accommodations at reasonable cost, since war workers or folk newly come to the big city are swarming all over Minneapolis and St. Paul. The students are yowling—and some left in impatience—and the university authorities are praying that low-cost emergency housing will materialize some way.

Of the 10,000 students some 700 are ex-service men. This fall at opening convocation in Cyrus Northrop Memorial auditorium the enormous freshman class was welcomed to the university by its new president, Dr. James Lewis Morrill, who came here this year from the University of Wyoming. The freshmen marched in from the plaza in what seemed like an endless procession up the broad, high flight of steps into the auditorium—and it was probably the most unusual class in one way that a president has ever addressed. It was largely women, but the hundreds of men were particularly interesting. There was the usual sprinkling of boys fresh from high school, but there was an amazing number of young lieutenants and captains hung with campaign ribbons. You'd be surprised at how many officers are utilizing their terminal leaves, not even waiting for a discharge, to get a head start on the college work that war has delayed for, in some cases, as long as four years. Many of the men, of course, have acquired wives during the war years, and their housing problem is particularly acute in a crowded city.

Women students still have the edge here. Every dormitory and sorority house is full to overflowing. Rush week, shortly after school opened, was hectic, with a thousand girls going thru the social ritual.

JAPAN

masterless warriors) dissembled their feelings in order to throw Lord Kira off guard. They then attacked his mansion, slew him, and cut off his head. They themselves were ordered to commit seppuku, which they did.

The perpetrators of this somewhat dubious deed are now highly honored thruout Japan. Their graves, near Sengakuji temple, are still decorated in memory of their "heroism."

There is sharp divergence between the forty-seven ronin and the subject of geisha, but both are typically Japanese. Tokyo, Kyoto, Osaka, and other large cities boast large numbers of geisha, whose talents—ideally, at least—include singing, dancing, and the ability to pour tea according to the best tradition — the "cha no yu," or Japanese tea cult.

Actually, while originally the geisha were virtually respectable and often married into high families, they now far more closely resemble prostitutes, altho the higher class ones still retain some vestiges of respectability. The average geisha house in Tokyo, however, now has an M. P. on guard and a long line of soldiers awaiting admittance.

Here is a brief excerpt from a book titled "Geisha Girl," written a few years ago by Aisaburo Akiyama:

"Whether it is right or not, geisha girls are extensively said to constitute one of the three chief attractions for tourists to this country, in company with Mount Fuji and the cherry blossoms. Why! What a nonsense! That is too absurd and ironical a combination, yet it would immensely delight geisha admirers, because there is contained a grain of grim truth in it. Gracious! Who is responsible for inventing such a silly trio?——Of course, the difference between angels and geisha girls is as wide as the poles asunder.——To be frank, the beauty of geisha girls who are of low birth and education, if not all of them, invariably lacks a stateliness and grace peculiar to well bred ladies as witnessed in every country.——Let us remember, however, that no woman of high standard and education would voluntarily become a geisha unless her mental condition is out of the normal path."

As an interesting sidelight it might be added that, according to Akiyama, some geisha "girls" in Kyoto are as old as 70 years.

However, the geisha are far easier to understand by the visiting Americans than the sharp contrast between the fanatical resistance put up by the Jap soldiers in the field and the complete submission offered the occupation forces by military and civilian alike.

This perhaps more than any one thing shows the tremendous power wielded by Emperor Hirohito. He ordered Japan to quit: she quit. He ordered the terms of the Potsdam ultimatum to be carried out: this is being done. He ordered all Japanese to coöperate with the occupying forces: they are doing it.

As an example of the swift change of opinion, we met a young woman the other night at the home of a spinster Japanese music teacher. There were several American newsmen present. Thru an interpreter named George (public school No. 14, Brooklyn, N. Y.) we asked the girl what she would have done if the Americans had come as invaders instead of with the acquiescence of the emperor. Her answer was short and not exactly sweet: "I would have tried to kill you."

Perhaps the foregoing will give American readers at least a faint hint of what it is like—this Japan where a couple of hundred thousand Americans will spend some months of their time.

All that occurs is interesting, and still unrecorded is the unimportant fact that the most terrific ack-ack batteries in all Tokyo were located in a big ball park, and the related fact that a history professor we met said he was against the war, and was very grave on learning that Lou Gehrig was dead. The professor was a pretty good country first baseman in his day, too.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

The pointer is a stylish hunting breed with a big following among sportsmen and dog fanciers interested in shows. This dog, named Parlay, a field trialer owned by P. T. Bechtol, Orrville, O., was photographed on a point during a trial.

A LARGE majority of the dog fanciers who own dogs such as the Boston terrier, wire-haired, cocker spaniel, Welsh, Kerry blue, and others which are primarily companion dogs can't get excited about the popular sport of running hunting dogs in field trials. On the other hand, we have seen quite a few people at field trials who did not own sporting breeds. These owners like to watch such tests of dog training and intelligence because they always learn something at a trial, and because the way the competing dogs handle game birds is interesting.

During the fall field trials, enthusiasts are in their element. Starting in October, their open air events for spaniels, retrievers, setters, and pointers attract hundreds of competing dogs and thousands of spectators. Behind the scenes at the trials, however, there are several schools of thought as to how the dogs should be tested. The arguments you hear about spaniel and retriever trials strike at factors that are in some respects even more important than the judging. As sportsmen complain to us, the trials have been getting away from the practical and today retrievers especially are being tested on land under conditions so easy that they make some trials a farce.

The retriever is the cover-smashing "tank" of the dog world. He was bred to work in water and mud and in cover that is as tough as it comes in our sloughs and marshes. We have used retrievers for years in pheasant hunting in bottomlands that were filled with tall grass, weeds, and hummocks. That's the stuff the pheasant likes. That's the cover for which the retriever was designed, and that's the cover in which such dogs should be tested.

Today most any old stubble field with short grass seems to be all right for some of our retriever trials. Big, powerful Chesapeakes, Labradors, and goldens that can buck the line beautifully in a rugged marsh are sent skimming over almost open fields where the cover is so thin that a pheasant won't even stay in it. Sportsmen who know dogs and the old-time field trials naturally are upset about the trend toward soft land retrieving conditions for the big dogs. And they are right in their stand that the retrievers should be tested for steadiness, marking ability, nose, control, and other qualities in rough cover.

Posing expertly for his portrait, this good looking German shepherd is the champion Lump v. Piastendamm, owned by J. L. Sinykin, La Salle Kennels, Minneapolis, Minn.

After seeing some of the tests that retrievers are given in field trials the spectator may wonder if breeders are trying to put some greyhound blood in the dogs, or if the idea is to see how fast a retriever can run for 150 yards before searching for a bird. Speed is a flashy thing to spectators, and it's an asset in any dog. Nobody wants a slow, pottering spaniel or retriever. But on a pheasant hunt in the middle west how many times do you call on a retriever to race 150 yards thru an open field on a retrieve when most pheasants are shot at 25 to 40 yards? That distance in real cover is the practical everyday test of a retriever or spaniel.

The spaniel also is a cover dog. It's not supposed to be an alfalfa field skimmer. It must have the courage to hunt in thick vegetation such as hundreds of thousands of hunters in the middle west face every fall to get their pheasant shooting. The vegetation in which the crafty pheasant hides may be thick weeds along a ditch, a grassy slough around a lake or marsh, or similar spots which offer a ringneck many opportunities for eluding the hunter.

Day after day during the open season a spaniel works for his master to find birds in such cover, not in thin stands of stubble, grass, or alfalfa.

Field trials and the handlers and breeders who support them have done much to accentuate and perpetuate some of the best qualities in sporting breeds. When dogs compete in the type of cover for which their breed was designed the spectators are taught the proper use of these dogs and the animals develop the qualities which they should have.

CAMAY
THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Just One Cake of Camay— and your Skin is Softer, Smoother!

For romance, win a softer, smoother complexion. You can—with your very first cake of Camay—when you change from careless cleansing to the Camay Mild-Soap Diet. Doctors tested Camay's daring beauty promise under exact clinical conditions—on scores and scores of complexions. And the doctors reported that woman after woman—using just one cake of Camay—had fresher, clearer, softer skin. Even younger-looking skin!

MRS. MORTENSON'S STORY

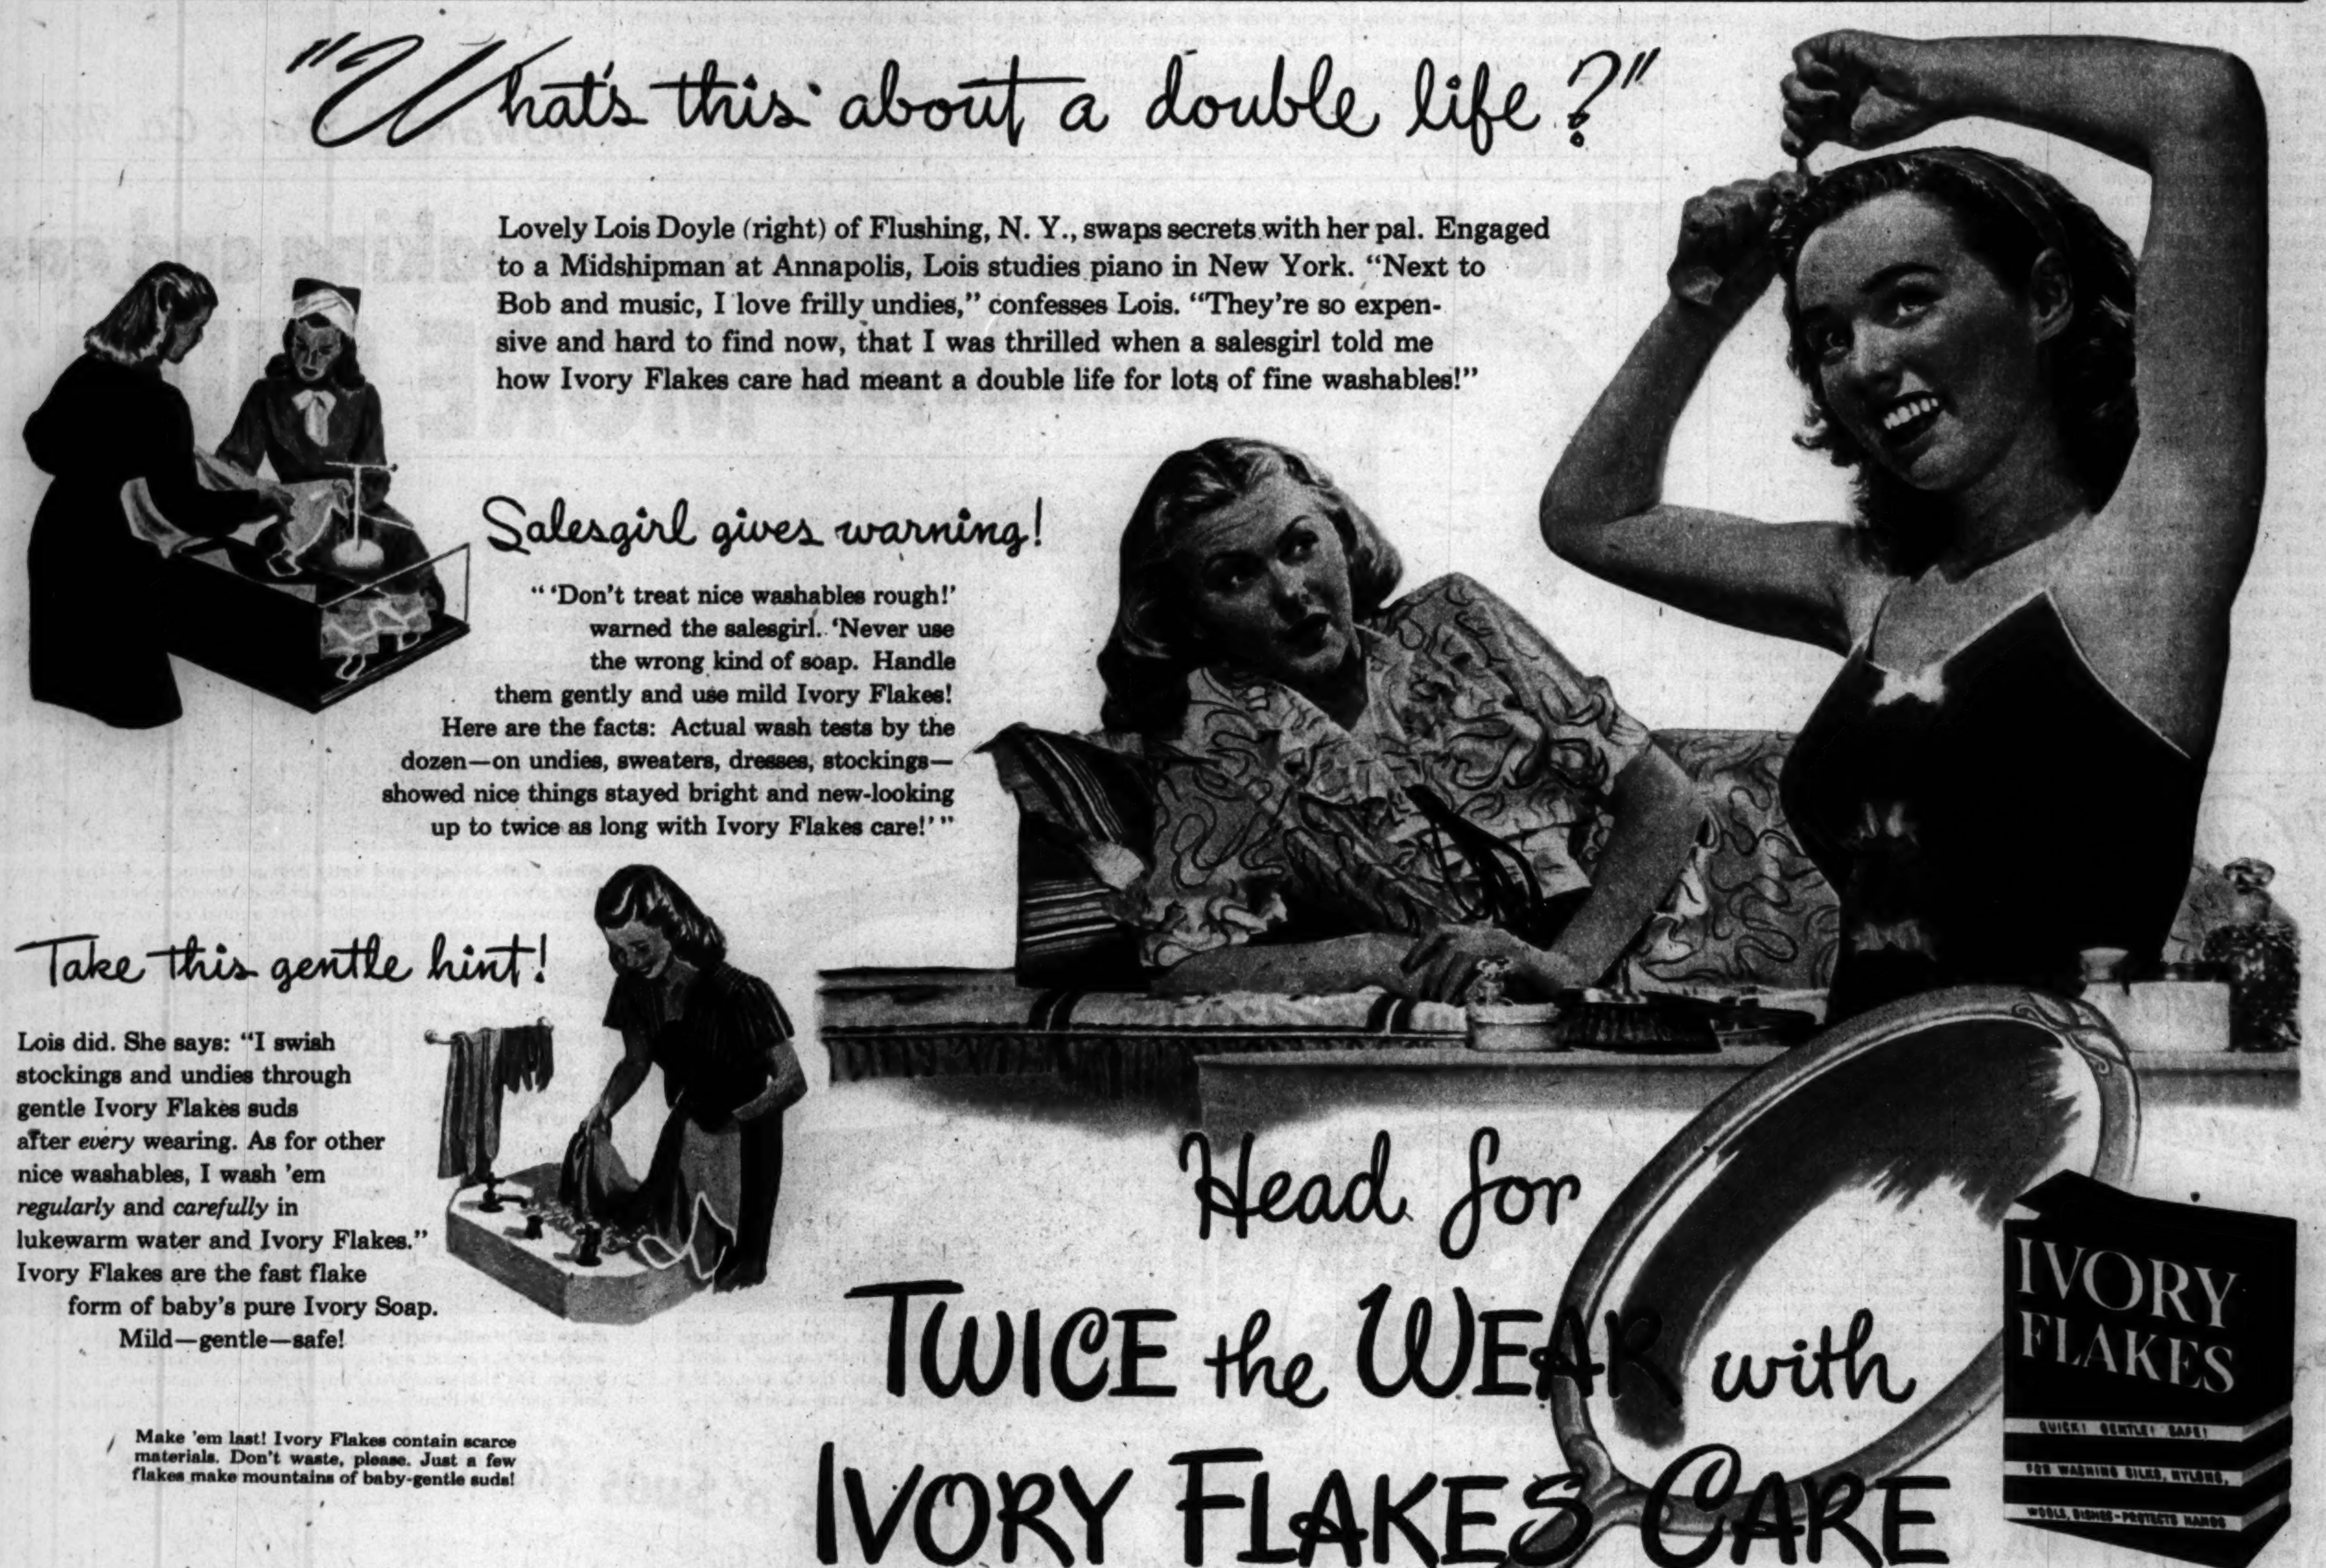
Rocking chair romance. Engaged, the happy light in Helen's eyes is matched by the glow of her complexion—clear, smooth, radiant. "My skin responds to Camay care," says Helen. "Really, my very first cake of Camay brought the livelier sparkle that a girl wants in her complexion."

—the former Helen Ann McManus
Mrs. Robert Mortenson
Newark, New Jersey

"I'm forever telling friends," Helen adds, "that the Camay Mild-Soap Diet really works wonders!" Try it. Simply pat mild Camay over your face—over and over—each night and morning. Rinse warm. Finish with a cold splash if skin is oily. Doctors proved just one cake of Camay—so mild it cleanses without irritation—can bring softer, smoother skin.

Singin' in the snow—planning a "honeymoon holiday" every winter. "Bob and I want to stay young," confides Helen. "I like to hear his compliments—and to keep them coming, my complexion stays on the Camay Mild-Soap Diet."

Be saving—with everything! Make your Camay last—it's made from precious war materials.



"What's this about a double life?"

Lovely Lois Doyle (right) of Flushing, N. Y., swaps secrets with her pal. Engaged to a Midshipman at Annapolis, Lois studies piano in New York. "Next to Bob and music, I love frilly undies," confesses Lois. "They're so expensive and hard to find now, that I was thrilled when a salesgirl told me how Ivory Flakes care had meant a double life for lots of fine washables!"

Salesgirl gives warning!

"'Don't treat nice washables rough!' warned the salesgirl. 'Never use the wrong kind of soap. Handle them gently and use mild Ivory Flakes! Here are the facts: Actual wash tests by the dozen—on undies, sweaters, dresses, stockings—showed nice things stayed bright and new-looking up to twice as long with Ivory Flakes care!'"

Take this gentle hint!

Lois did. She says: "I swish stockings and undies through gentle Ivory Flakes suds after every wearing. As for other nice washables, I wash 'em regularly and carefully in lukewarm water and Ivory Flakes." Ivory Flakes are the fast flake form of baby's pure Ivory Soap. Mild—gentle—safe!

Make 'em last! Ivory Flakes contain scarce materials. Don't waste, please. Just a few flakes make mountains of baby-gentle suds!

A Masterpiece of the Piano Maker's Art

NOW on exhibition at The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company—world's leading dealer in fine musical instruments—is one of the most beautiful pianos ever shown in America.

It is an exquisitely carved Mason & Hamlin Reproducing Grand representing a matchless example of Italian Renaissance art. All carved work was executed in Meda, Italy, by the Salda—a famed guild of wood sculptors which originated in the days of the Medici. The result is a beauty of design and a harmony of form matching the superlative musical quality of the instrument itself.

The entire piece in fine old Italian Walnut is, according to one eminent authority, worthy of a place in the Metropolitan Museum. Wurlitzer is proud of the honor of being chosen to exhibit it.

The piano, together with bench and a handsome music roll cabinet, is for sale at an unusually attractive price. Interested persons are invited to come in for further information.

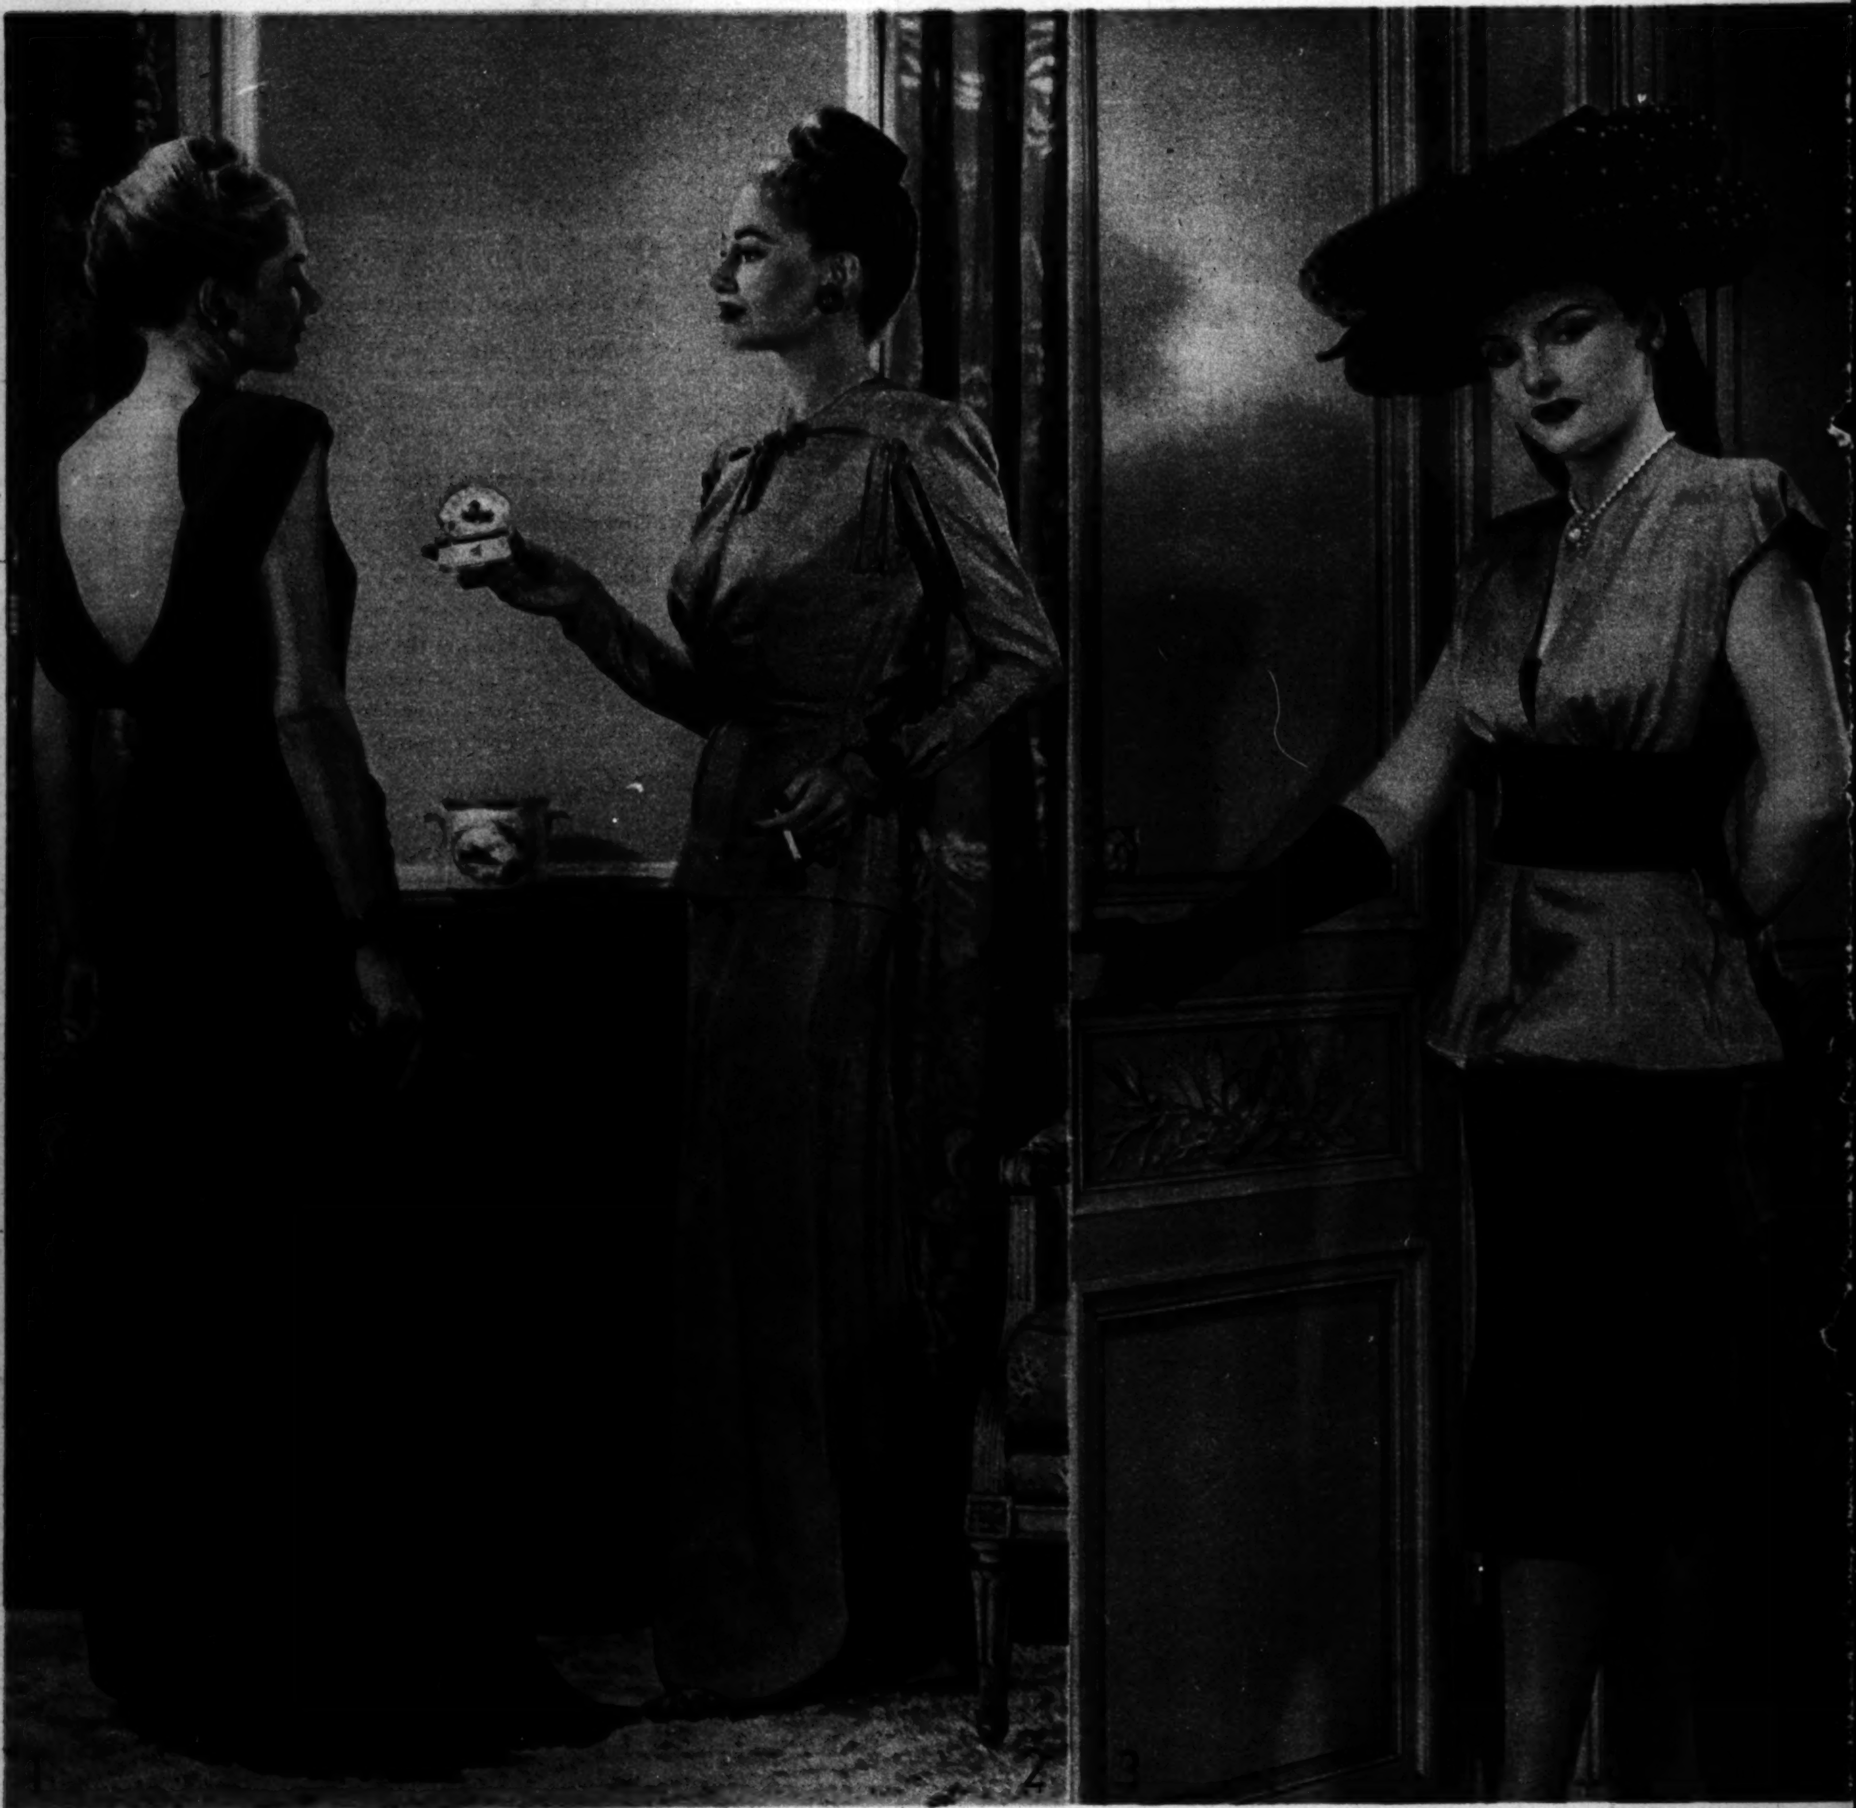
American Fashions

Modeled in the shows concluding
The Tribune's 6th annual contest



1. The straight line of this gown of vibrant red crepe is broken at the hips by a deep swathed band of material which falls in the back in a wide sash. This draping is repeated at the neckline, where it forms a high cowl in front and a deep decolletage in the back. The designer is Helene Litrides of 131 Phoenix ter., Springfield, Mass.

2. Richness and beauty of material combine with classic simplicity of cut in this ever-useful dinner suit, which is of metal moire in palest chartreuse. The severity of the fitted jacket is relieved by ties of self-material which appear at the neck and finish the unusual open slots which are placed high across the front. The slim skirt is slit in front to insure ease of movement. The designer, Donald Young of Winslow, Ariz.

3. A dress definitely oriental in silhouette and richness of color. Heavy satin in a glorious shade of Chinese gold is used for the jumper top, which is cut quite short and is caught in at the hem with a suggestion of the harem drape. The pencil-slim skirt is of inky black crepe, as is also the wide inset waist belt. Yards of black tulle, dotted with gold, go to make the fabulous hat. The designer is Richard Grant Eoff of 9730 W. Outer dr., Detroit, Mich.

4. Ideal for the south, this dress is of heavy petunia silk with an interesting rough weave. Of absolute simplicity as to cut, it has as its only decoration appliqued flower motifs in various shades of the petunia blossom, with the delicate green of the leaves for contrast. These motifs are placed on the shoulder and—quite a new note—they also decorate the casual gloves of matching silk. The designer, Lola H. Brooks of 851 Ocean dr., Miami, Fla.

5. Simple, sophisticated and very "1945," this suit can be worn on many occasions. The jacket is of fine white crepe, the deep-set armholes outlined with delicate hand embroidery of jet and sequins. The skirt of heavy black crepe is cut straight and slim. A bewitching feather hat and gloves and handbag of black satin carry out the black and white color scheme. The designer is Miss Poppy Pappas of 221 45th st., Union City, N. J.

SPRATT'S DOG BISCUIT FOODS

Looks Good? THAT'S ONLY THE HALF OF IT!

Of course you like foods that look good to eat. But that's only part of the story.

You want, also, to be sure of fine flavors—of vitamins and other nutritional values.

How can you be sure that these precious qualities aren't "cooked away" before foods reach your table? Or that some of these values haven't been lost in storage or transit?

Modern food authorities* say: Trust canned foods . . . and the pictures below explain why.

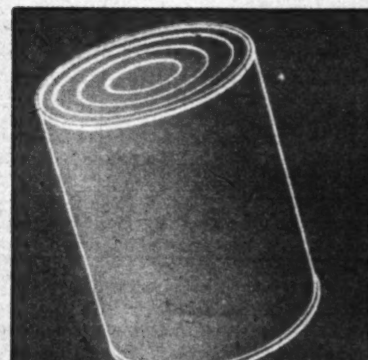
*For example see Aug. 10, 1944 "Journal of Nutrition"

What an appetizing array of good things to eat . . . ox-tail soup, salmon, peas, escalloped tomatoes, pumpkin for pie, coffee . . . "and they all came out of a can!"

"THE KITCHEN DRAIN is the best-fed mouth in many an American home"—say modern food scientists. And here's the reason why: "home-cooked" vegetables, for instance, are often overcooked, or cooked uncovered, or cooked in too much water—which is then drained off, thereby wasting precious vitamins, minerals, flavors.

YOU KNOW, when you open a can, that the wholesomeness, the flavor, the nutritional values of the food inside have been protected from farm to table. For, modern canning practices, plus the dependable steel-and-tin can, preserve what nature puts in the food. Serve canned foods proudly, and thank the modern can for the safety, the convenience, and the economy that it brings into life today.

AT THE CANNERY, fresh foods are received at the moment of perfection—and are then generally cooked by the "pressure" method right in the can, with a minimum of water, and all air excluded. In fact, each individual can is really a miniature "pressure cooker." Processed canned foods often reach your table actually higher in food and health values than foods bought in market and home cooked.



CANNED FOODS ARE

SAFE from dirt, germs, odors

SAFE from air, light, moisture

SAFE even after the can is opened—because, in the canning process, both the can and its contents are sterilized. Simply cover the top and place in the refrigerator.

"NESCAFÉ IS HERE AGAIN!"

...chuckled the Chief Justice

ROASTER-FRESH COFFEE MADE RIGHT IN THE CUP

Roaster-fresh because in Nescafé all the fresh flavor of newly-roasted coffee is sealed in by added carbohydrates.

"YIPPE-E-E!" yelled the Chief Justice . . . "once more I can get the roaster-fresh cup of coffee that I pronounce perfect! Nescafé is here again!"

That's real news for you, too. For Nescafé offers you the peak in coffee enjoyment . . . because Nestlé's knows the way to give you all the flavor—all the lift—of really fine coffee! First, we make an extract from choice coffees fresh from the roaster—then instantly seal in the wonderful flavor! You release this locked-in freshness by just adding hot water.

So easy to prepare . . . no coffee maker to get ready or clean up . . . no grounds to dispose of. A teaspoonful of Nescafé makes a cup—for only about 1¢. No waste . . . you make exactly the amount you need—and just the strength you like.

Ask your grocer for Nescafé today—if he doesn't have it now, ask him to set aside a jar for you when his supply arrives. He will have it soon—and . . . it's worth waiting for. It's the sure way to coffee enjoyment.

OK . . . said Uncle Sam!
. . . and proved it by buying—for our Armed Forces—more Nescafé than all other brands combined! And—the only Army-Navy "E" award in the soluble coffee field is held by the Nestlé's plant at Sunbury, Ohio!

OK . . . said our fighting men!
. . . they wrote thousands of letters saying how well they liked it! Liked it so well that in PX's and Commissaries —where they had their own choice— the sales of Nescafé were sensational!

NESCAFÉ (PRONOUNCED NES-CAFAY) IS NESTLÉ'S SOLUBLE COFFEE PRODUCT COMPOSED OF EQUAL PARTS OF SKILLFULLY BREWED SOLUBLE COFFEE AND ADDED CARBOHYDRATES (DEXTRINS, MALTOSE AND DEXTROSE) ADDED SOLELY TO PROTECT THE FLAVOR

I FELT SO "Dowdy" IN MY FUR COAT

You'd have thought I'd been washing the dishes in it! It was rain-spotted, matted, dull—I was actually ashamed to wear it on the street!

UNTIL I HAD IT HOLLANDERIZED

My favorite store told me about Hollanderizing—how it treats each individual fur as a special cleaning problem, using the very methods Hollander has found best for the original pelts. My coat came back for all the world like new again, in far less time than I'd believed possible. Doesn't it look wonderful? (Your furrier, department store or specialty shop can quickly have your fur coat Hollanderized. Even the linings will be shimmeringly lovely.)

Hollanderizing

COSTS NO MORE THAN ORDINARY FUR CLEANING

Unless you see this tag sealed on your coat, it has NOT been Hollanderized

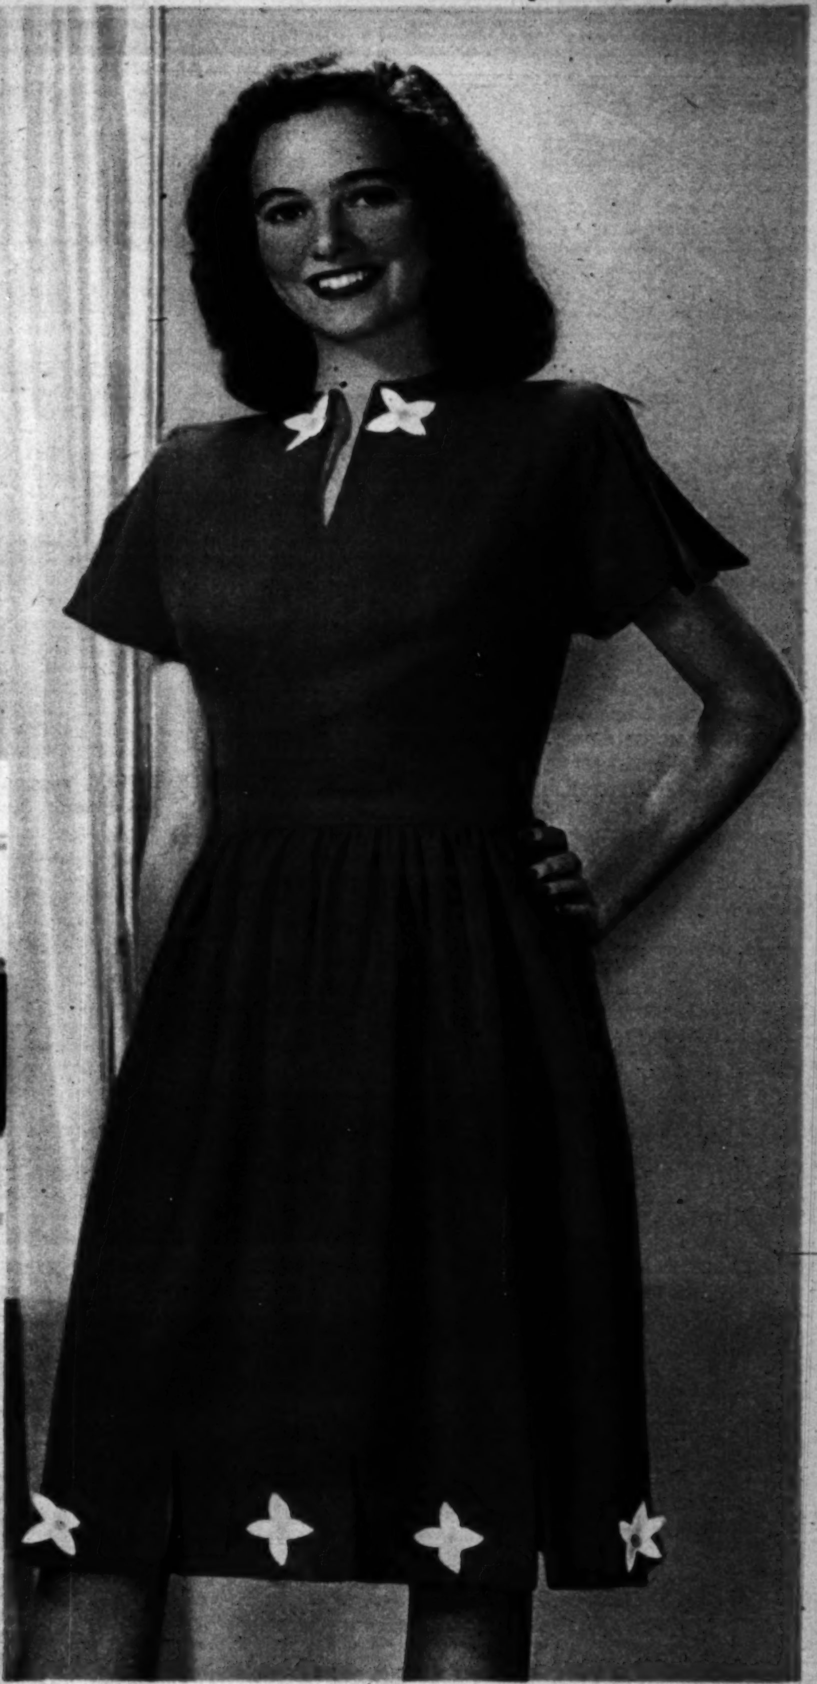
Teen Age Designs Modeled at The Tribune's 6th Annual Show



A daytime dress in a heaven-blue soft wool, made quite simply, has as its unusual trim a row of white felt daisies, which are appliqued on the square scalloped hem and at the high neck line. The designer is Martha C. Mason of 16794 Westbrook av., Detroit, Mich.

She uses Pond's!

HER RING

MARY ANNE BRASWELL will wed Edwin P. Cushman, U. S. Army Officer. She is the daughter of the well-known Mr. & Mrs. Earl Braswell of Athens, Ga.

The day that Mary Anne arrived in London to take up her work at the American Embassy she met her officer fiancé-to-be!

She's another girl with that winsome "soft-smooth" Pond's look!

"I surely do depend on Pond's Cold Cream," Mary Anne says. "It has the nicest way of making your face feel especially soft and clean."

Twice every single day Mary Anne uses her Pond's Cold Cream—like this . . .

She smooths the silky-soft cream over her face and throat, pats to soften and release dirt and make-up. Tissues off.

She rinses with more Pond's Cold Cream, plying her white-covered fingertips round her face in quick little circles. This is "extra-care," she says, for extra cleansing, extra softening.

Why don't you use Pond's Cold Cream her way? Every morning, every evening and for in-between time clean-ups! It's no accident so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price.

Get a big luxury jar that lets you dip in with both hands! Get it today!

A few of the many Pond's Society Beauties:
Mrs. Nicholas R. du Pont · The Lady Morris · Mrs. Ernest L. Biddle
Lady Louis Mountbatten · Mrs. George J. Gould, Jr. · Princess Xenia

SHE'S DELIGHTFULLY POISED . . . WITH GLINTY-CHESTNUT HAIR, ALABASTER-SMOOTH SKIN

AFTER A YEAR AT OUR LONDON EMBASSY, Mary Anne Braswell shares a "reunion-cake" back in the U. S. A. with three British airmen. Soon after graduating from the University of Georgia she received her Diplomatic Corps assignment. Her work at the American Embassy was largely a military secret—"fascinating and exacting" she says. Air raids, celebrities, robot bombs—and "getting engaged" to an American officer from Boston were all part of her London adventure.

A PORCH EATER

ALL of the Teenie Weenies except the Cook and the Sailor had gone to the Teenie Weenie town hall, where the Doctor and the General were debating on whether frog leather or catfish skin made the better Teenie Weenie shoes. The Cook and the Sailor had stayed home to enjoy a quiet game of Teenie Weenie chess, but they had hardly started the game before they were disturbed by a cracking noise back of the Teenie Weenie kitchen. The two little men peered out of the living room window, and to their horror, they saw an animal bigger than the Teenie Weenie shoe house.

It was gnawing one of the planks which had been ripped from the kitchen porch.

"That's a porcupine," said the Cook.

"Well, why is it eating our porch?" asked the Sailor.

"Porcupines like to eat wood, especially salty wood," answered the Cook. "The Dunce and Gogo made ice cream here on the porch and some of the salty water must have run out."

"We ought to stop him before he eats the porch up," suggested the Sailor, "but we'll have to be careful that he doesn't shoot his quills into us."

"Shucks!" laughed the Cook. "Porcupines can't shoot their quills. They switch their tails back and forth and slap with them when an enemy gets too close. That's why some people think porcupines shoot their quills."

"Hadn't I better run over to the hall and get some help?" asked the Sailor. "We'll need every single Teenie Weenie to get rid of that big beast."

"We can chase the pest off without spoiling the debate," said the Cook. "We'll give Old Porky a dose of ammonia and you'll see that porcupine get out of here in a hurry."

The Cook led the way to the kitchen where he filled a cherry seed bowl half full of ammonia. He handed the bowl to the Sailor and said, "Just open the porch door and toss this in the porcupine's face. I will fill another bowl, just in case you might miss the porcupine."

The Sailor cautiously opened the door and threw the bowl of ammonia into the porcupine's face. The beast let out a great grunt and vanished into the night. The porch was badly wrecked but a few planks from a berry basket would repair the damage in the morning, and so the Sailor and the Cook went back to their chess game, while the debate continued peacefully in the town hall.

ONCE UPON A TIME
2 LUGANS LOVED
CUTIE...

They loved her with an ardor that Burned up the Begonias, as George Ade used to say.

Gus had a little trouble adding Two-and-Two but was the Campus Dream Boy and the Star Halfback, with muscles like $28.00 worth of stove bolts. Gus believed that all he had to do to Mow down a New Mamma was to permit her to see him in a Varsity Sweater and let her feel the Stove Bolts, and Cupid would throw away His Quiver: It took an Adding Machine to count up his Conquests.

Not so George. Socially, he was the Campus Cluck, but as a student, he had All the Answers. George had just enough muscles to get him to class where the Master Minds said he would Get Ahead. His only claim to good looks was a big, warm, friendly smile, and he knew it! So—shrewd Apple that he was—he kept using Listerine Tooth Paste.

Came at last, the championship game between Hohokus and Notre Dame, at the end of which Cutie must decide between Gus and George.

While Gus was down on the field crashing the line for Dear Old Hohokus, and losing two teeth at every Crash, George was up in the Bleachers with Cutie, turning loose his Thousand Watt smile and slipping her a Lamb Chop or two, meanwhile mentioning marriage and the Big Job awaiting him in June.

After the game Cutie faced the Big Decision: Whether to take Gus, now minus his Ivories, and put up with forty years of Stove Bolts and Doubtful Security, or to cast her lot with George and his Money-making Smile, his generous Nature, and a Bright Future in the Undertaking Business.

Cutie Caught on Quick! She grabbed George, with his winning Listerine-Tooth-Paste smile, and they lived happily Ever After. Gus got a new set of teeth but lost them the following year to Ohio State.

Betty Crocker promises: Finer cakes in ½ the mixing time!

...with GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" ENRICHED FLOUR!

THIS NEW METHOD IS SO EASY! Just sift dry ingredients together into a bowl, add shortening, liquid and flavoring, beat or mix for 2 minutes. Then add eggs; continue beating for 2 more minutes. That's all!

Yet you get a cake that is lighter, finer-textured, more delicious than even the superb Gold Medal cakes you've known before! Try this New Betty Crocker Method—right away!

WARNING! Flours differ. Recipe given specifies Gold Medal Flour, and it's specially "tailored" to suit Gold Medal's characteristics. So don't use another flour with it! Gold Medal is the same, bakes the same with old recipes. But don't try to adapt this New Betty Crocker Method to old recipes! SUGAR-SAVING KITCHENETTE CAKE

Low in shortening. Takes only 1 egg. Made by the New Betty Crocker Method . . . Use only Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Enriched Flour

Have all ingredients room temperature (70°-75°). (Shortening should be soft, not melted.) Pre-heat oven to 350° (mod.). Grease and dust with flour one 8" square pan (2½" deep). Sift GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Enriched Flour before measuring. Measure all ingredients accurately (level) before mixing.

Sift together into bowl..
- 1¼ cups plus 2 tbsp. sifted GOLD MEDAL Enriched Flour
- *1 cup sugar (see below)
- 2 tsp. double-action baking powder
- ½ tsp. salt

Add...... ⅓ cup high grade vegetable shortening

Add.......... 1 tsp. flavoring; ⅔ cup milk

Beat vigorously with spoon for 2 min. by clock (about 150 strokes per min.). You may rest a moment when beating by hand; just count actual beating time or strokes. OR MIX with electric mixer on slow to medium speed for 2 min. Scrape sides and bottom of bowl frequently.

Add......... ¼ to ⅓ cup unbeaten egg (1 large)

Continue beating 2 more min., scraping bowl frequently. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake 30 to 35 minutes in mod. oven (350°). Finish with Broiled Honey Icing (recipe below).

(See folders in sacks for adjustments for Gold Medal Self-Rising Flour.)

It's a honey! See sugarless icing below!

BROILED HONEY ICING. Mix together 2 tbsp. butter, 3 tbsp. honey, 1 tbsp. top milk, ½ cup coconut or chopped nuts, dash of salt. Spread on warm cake. Broil slowly until icing bubbles and browns but does not burn.

TO SAVE SUGAR: Use ½ cup sugar and ½ cup white corn syrup. Reduce milk to ½ cup plus 1 tbsp. Add syrup with milk to dry ingredients.

CITY HALL BIDS FOR EVANSTON DUE SATURDAY

Deadline Is Placed at 11 A.M.

Construction plans formulated during war time by the Evanston city council and public buildings committee have received fresh impetus with acceptance of working drawings and specifications for a new Municipal building, and fire and police station.

Bids for work on the Municipal building will be accepted until 11 a. m. Saturday. Specifications are now on file in the city hall office of Joseph L. Rose, commissioner of public works. Bids will be opened Nov. 17 in the city hall.

Reconstruct in Modern Style

Plans call for reconstruction, in modern style, of the country club building at 1501 Oak av., which was purchased under foreclosure for $86,000 in 1942.

When erected in 1924, the two story brick building was valued at $225,000 exclusive of the 1¾ acres comprising the club grounds, which are valued at approximately $75,000.

Remodeling cost is estimated at $100,000 with work scheduled to begin in January. The building will be ready for occupancy in July.

Scientifically planned, the city hall will have on the first floor the city clerk's office, city collector's office, city treasurer's office, building and water departments, and the civil service commission.

A city council chamber, with seating capacity for 400, will be housed on the second floor. Off the chambers are four committee rooms, with one large enough to seat all aldermen in committee of the whole meetings.

Mayor on Second Floor

The mayor's office and those of the commissioner of public works, corporation council, city engineer, and purchasing department also will be on the second floor. A gallery floor with balcony overlooking the council chamber will be included.

The basement will be given over to vault space, three times larger than the present facilities.

Fronting the edifice and running diagonally from it is a 100 by 210 foot tract which will be converted into a memorial rose garden honoring the late Ald. Clinton Merrick. Merrick, who served 20 years in the city council and as chairman of the judiciary committee, collected rare rosebushes from all sections of the country and abroad. Many of these will be transplanted to the memorial area.

Station Plans Accepted

Moving day for the police and fire departments may come some time next year. Plans already have been accepted for a two story structure to be erected on the northwest corner of Lake st. and Elmwood av. Maher and McGrew are the architects.

On the street level will be garages for fire trucks and police emergency cars. The Municipal court, offices for judges, court clerks, attorneys, doctor, and the police record bureau also will be housed on the first floor.

A separate Juvenile hourt, headquarters for the chief of police, fire chief, men's dormitories, locker rooms, recreation rooms, and a handball court are on the second floor.

Ald. Eddy S. Brandt, chairman of the public buildings committee, stated that popular support for the bond issue financing the police and fire station will be sought in the spring elections.

PAIR OF OLD TIMERS ASKS, 'WHY THE FUSS ON GOLDEN WEDDING?'

"Young" couples who make much of their golden weddings bring indulgent smiles to Mr. and Mrs. Herman A. Dreiske, Ravinia. This fall the Dreiskes observed their 65th wedding and expect to celebrate many more.

Mrs. Dreiske

Herman Dreiske

"Our wedding day, Oct. 21, 1880, seems like yesterday except when I look at our 17 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren," declared Mrs. Dreiske, whose clear voice and excellent hearing belie her 83 years.

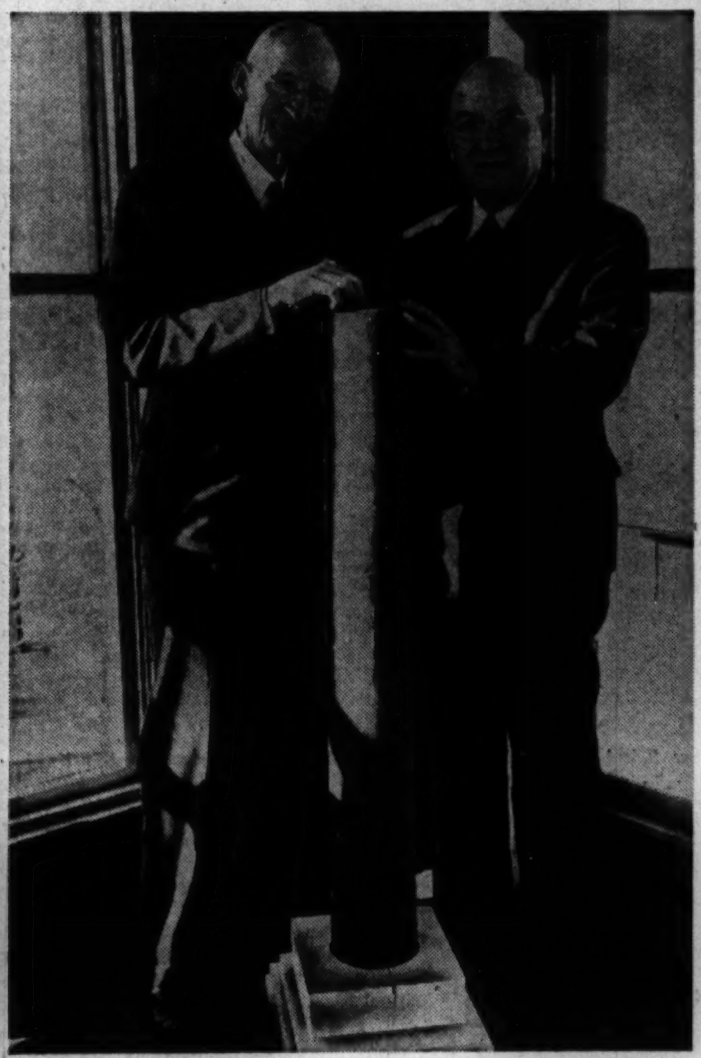
Tho the couple declined to give rules for maintaining a successful marriage, they attributed their happiness in part to church membership. A member of United Evangelical church, Highland Park, Mrs. Dreiske said, "We've always been church goers and we brought up our children the same way."

Telegrams, telephone calls, flowers, and an open house for friends and relatives marked the anniversary. The couple has lived in Ravinia since 1903 when Mr. Dreiske retired from the coal business. Eleven of their 12 sons and three daughters are living. Mrs. Dreiske is a native of Bristol, Wis., where they were married. Mr. Dreiske was born in 1856 in Chicago.

Tread of Countless Feet Makes Impression on Old College, First N. U. Building

More revealing than any written records are these steps leading to the lower level of Old College, first Northwestern university building, which will be 90 years old tomorrow. Placing their feet on the traditional stairway to learning today's students, majoring in the school of education, receive instruction in time hallowed classrooms. Carved on the stairwell are initials and dates of epoch making days in the lives of early Northwestern students.

More than just the whisper of the trailing skirts echoed in Old College halls that fall of 1870 when women were admitted to Northwestern as students. Attired in costumes of the era are (left to right): Steven Meyer, June Austin, and Jean Erdoss, students in the school of speech. First woman registrant at the university was Sarah P. Roland of Freeport, Ill. When she was graduated in 1874 Northwestern was entrenched as a co-educational institution.



But one of the traditions which was established at the university came on Founder's day, 1928, when Walter Dill Scott (left), then president, touched a flame to the giant candle on which his hand rests inaugurating candle lighting service. This ritual was proposed by Charles Ward, present alumni association director. When made it was estimated the candle would serve 100 years, now candle makers believe it will last 200 years.

When the dream which was to be Northwestern university became reality with the opening of Old College, Nov. 5, 1855, Philo Judson served as business agent. Harry B. Judson, 912 Ridge av., Evanston, 80 year old grandson of Philo Judson, with his daughter, Mrs. Helen Judson James (right), watches as Shirley James, great-great-granddaughter of the founder, places memorial wreath on steps of Old College. Mrs. Helen James was graduated from the university in 1918, and Shirley in 1945.

90 YEARS ECHO IN HALLS OF OLD COLLEGE AT N. U.

Soil for Seed of Learning Sees the Flowering

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN

An inanimate gray structure, with rounded façade and cupola: Thus present thought invests Old College, which stands on Northwestern university campus in Evanston.

But haunting the high ceilinged halls, the balustraded stairwell, are voices and footfalls of the past, for this first of the university buildings is 90 years old tomorrow.

The three story building, its shoulders squared to the wind of the prairie and then facing Lake Michigan, opened its doors that Nov. 5, 1855, to four students who hailed from four different states. The faculty was comprised of two professors, Henry S. Noyes and William D. Godman, who weren't sure from whence their salaries were coming.

Janitor Gets $71.75

Or were the founders—Dr. John Evans, for whom the community of 40 houses had been named, Orrington Lunt, Grant Goodrich, and Philo Judson—too sure about finances. They mulled over the year's financial statement in the business office of the new college unhappily. It looked as tho the janitor was commandeering the greater percentage of the income.

Tho the enrollment at the conclusion of that first year had mounted to 10, the college had collected but $176 including room rent from the four students who slept in the cupola, sharing their quarters with the college bell. Of this $71.75 cents was paid the janitor.

Only two students paid tuition, which was $45 a year plus a $3 library fee, and $6 janitor service and incidentals tax. The remainder were on scholarships, which the university had much difficulty obtaining.

Rides Marshes for Funds

Before the school had opened that November. Noyes had ridden on horseback thru the marshes west of Chicago and Evanston to collect scholarship funds, which had been promised. Even then there was not enough to meet his salary of $1,500.

Despite their scholastic propensities, the students—all male until the admission of women in 1870—were not too straight laced. The cupola dwellers, hanging student caps on the bell rungs, chided one another about young ladies in attendance at the near-by Female college in Evanston.

An attempt to thwart this interest was made by William Jones, principal, who forbade his feminine charges to have male escorts when returning from services on a Sunday evening.

Youths Vent Displeasure

Then the walls of the new Northwestern college buzzed with intrigue. Jones was to discover the youth's displeasure one Monday morning when he found the wooden arch to his institution of learning decorated in black paint with "Nunnery of St. Jones." An effigy of himself dangled from an improvised gallows. So it was that the village constable visited Old College to arrest three students who later were released for lack of evidence.

In April, 1864, the young men raised their voices in more serious talk. The Great Emancipator was visiting in Evanston. Because Lincoln did not have time to come to the thriving new institution, the students crossed the fields to Church st. and Ridge av., where they assembled in front of Julius White's home and serenaded until Lincoln appeared and made a brief speech.

The Female Invasion!

The following year, there was much ado among the gentlemen. Sarah P. Roland had come from Freeport and had been admitted to the university. She was the first whose skirts swished over the steps leading to the chapel on the second floor. When she was graduated in 1874, Northwestern was firmly intrenched as co-educational.

In the meantime the faculty had been increased to include Robert Kennicott, who founded and became curator of a zoölogical and botanical musueum, first housed in Old College, in 1857. Kennicott, together with Henry M. Bannister, who was to become curator of University Museum from 1868-74, explored Alaska in 1865-'66. Reports of this adventure provided Secretary of State William H. Seward with knowledge of the natural wealth of Alaska, which influenced the United States' purchase in 1867 of the territory from Russia.

Walls Echo to T. R.

The oratorical words of Theodore Roosevelt ricochetted against the weathered walls of Old College when, in 1903, he spoke to students gathered in the quadrangle where the building stands.

Walter Dill Scott, then president, climbed the time smoothed steps to the cupola in 1928 and lighted the candle which established candle lighting services for Founders day.

This same cupola served as a weather observatory in 1874 under the war department.

Survives Student Threats

Tho the building has been moved twice, in 1871 and in 1897, its present site on south campus seems secure. Time has been, however, when exuberant students returning from football games have threatened to set it afire, but have been deterred by alumni. During most of its life it was regarded as a temporary structure. As early as 1868 officials referred to it in reports as "Old College."

Blazoned across its weather beaten arch still is the legend, "Old College," but the building now is known as the Education building and houses classrooms, workshops, and offices of the school of education.

De Paul Offers a Midsemester Term for Vets

With the inauguration of a midsemester term, De Paul university will offer service men and women who were released too late for the fall term a chance to begin studies immediately.

"Hundreds of men and women have been discharged since September," said Beryl D. Cornell, administrator of veterans affairs, in announcing the new plan. "For them, it is a serious waste of time to have to await a February term."

Thus, De Paul outlined a program of subjects carried by regular full time students. These will be given veterans registering Wednesday thru this Saturday, in double class hours each week. The abbreviated term will conclude Jan. 25 when the regular semester ends.

About one-half the usual number of subjects offered in the regular semester will be available to veterans on this schedule, including English, business management, history, philosophy, and logic.

Present enrollment of veterans is 400.

CHURCH TO BUILD PARISH HOUSE AS VETS' MEMORIAL

Construction Expected to Begin in Spring

A two story stone parish house will be erected by the Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth, in honor of its 110 men who served in World War II. Ten of the men, all aviators, lost their lives in service.

While the whole building will be a memorial, families also may sponsor individual rooms, halls, and other units. The Rev. Leland Hobart Danforth, pastor, said a building fund, goal of which is $80,000, already totals more than $50,000. Construction will begin in the spring if materials and labor are available.

Will Have 33 Rooms

The structure will be connected to the east side of the church and be used for church school, office, and social work. Its 33 rooms will include 16 church school rooms, offices, a choir room, kitchen, and janitor's space.

Facilities will be available to all community residents, regardless of church affiliation, said Father Danforth. Horace B. Pearson, building committee chairman, is assisted by Elton F. Hascall Jr., Harry J. Hurlbut, Harold B. Kraft, Kenneth D. Miller, Conger Reynolds, Jesse D. Trump, Norvin Vaughan, and Lawrence T. Knott.

Chimes Tell of Births

The Kenilworth church also plays a lullaby on its tower chimes to herald the birth of every baby in Kenilworth, Wilmette, and Winnetka.

Each year more than 15,000 persons visit the Eugene Field close, burial place of the poet, between the church and rectory. In the rectory garden, visitors find pleasure in starting to flow rivers and streams of a colored relief map of the Holy Land in which are imbedded stones from cities of Palestine.

THREE OCTOBER BRIDES MARK 50TH WEDDINGS

Children, Friends Join in Celebrations

Stefan Lichter

Mrs. Lichter

Brides who prefer October to June as a wedding month aren't as unusual as they may think. The preference isn't a fad; it's a custom at least half a century old and perhaps even older. Witness, for example, three north side couples who marked their golden weddings last month.

Mr. and Mrs. August Bitter, 4406 N. Paulina st., natives of Germany and Lake View residents since their marriage, celebrated with an open house for 85 guests in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Louis Soelter, 4519 N. Mozart st.

S. H. Lichters Celebrate

Present also were six grandchildren; three sons, Hubert, 5414 N. Paulina st.; Walter, 6529 N. Talman av., and George, Moline, Ill., and two other daughters, Mrs. Dewey Wright, 4136 Washington blvd., and Mrs. Ed Mayer, Detroit, Mich.

A dinner given by their four sons and four daughters in the Edgewater Beach hotel marked the day for Mr. and Mrs. Stefan H. Lichter, 1023 Argyle st., who have lived in Chicago since 1907. Friends and 17 grandchildren also attended. A son, Dr. Martin H., and a daughter, Mrs. Ann Felzer, both of Honolulu, visited their parents recently but were unable to be present for the celebration.

T. C. Fetrows Attend Reception

Those attending were Mrs. Pauline Lippman, 6822 Sheridan rd.; Mrs. Betty Horowitz, 6651 Newgard av.; Mrs. Dorothy Raskin, Oklahoma City, Okla.; William H., 5023 N. Harding av.; Sgt. Emil W., 5240 Sheridan rd., now stationed with the army air forces in Harvard, Neb., and Nathan, New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold T. Ames, Kenilworth, entertained 200 guests at a reception for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom C. Fetrow, 5555 Sheridan rd., who were married in 1895 in Des Moines, Ia., and moved to Chicago soon afterward.

Service Club Will Hold Membership Luncheon

The Jessie Werthamer Service club will hold a membership luncheon Tuesday in the Belmont hotel. Dr. Ed Levine of Michael Reese hospital will talk on "Chest Disorders Caused by Allergies." Rosetta Alk will give a book review.

DE PAUL DRAMA SCHOOL TO OPEN PLAY BY WILDER

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" will be presented tonight thru Saturday by the drama school of De Paul university at the Little theater, 64 E. Lake st.

Gerald McGonagill, 1203 N. State st., Stephen St. John, 22 W. Elm st., and Dorothy Boerger, 6422 N. Rockwell st., will appear in leading roles.

John Itkin, dean, is director.

Ravenswood PTA

Mothers and fathers will participate in a quiz program at a Parents' night meeting of Ravenswood PTA at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. Mothers of 8th grade pupils will be hostesses.

PEOPLE TO LIVE IN PROVERBIAL 'GLASS HOUSES'

Interior Walls Will Be Easy to Shift

BY LOUISE BARGELT

We are going to see an increasing use of interior glass block partitions in new houses. They offer an interesting flexibility in room arrangement for glass block partitions may be built so they can be dismantled and put together again in a new location.

Another advantage is interior partitions of glass block will let light thru, but will block sound.

Clear Glass in Vogue

We also are going to see an increasing use of clear glass with perhaps an entire garden side of a living-dining room of clear glass. Such a wall of glass can furnish an attractive view, whether it is of trees and gardens and water in summer, or of swirling blizzards and snow covered lawns in winter.

As a protection against condensation on a window wall home owners now can have a single glazing material which is actually two sheets of glass with a dehydrated air space between them. This moisture-proofed air space is permanently sealed.

May Rival Stone Some Day

The advances made in hollow glass blocks in the last few years have been great. Just about everything can be done with these hollow glass blocks except to use them as house foundations. And as a matter of fact glass block is said to be strong enough for this, tho there have been other reasons to prevent its use as a bearing wall.

It looks as if glass may take its place some day with masonry, wood, stone, concrete, and steel as one of the basic building materials. In the meantime it looks as if builders of new homes and remodelers of old ones will be asking for more and more glass.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 5

It is not generally realized that roses can be planted successfully in autumn, and yet fall planting saves much time. It can be done while weather conditions are suitable.

In spring, continuous rains, such as were experienced this year, may prevent planting almost until hot weather arrives.

Never permit the root system to be exposed to the air for any extended period or the roots will dry out. Make the holes sufficiently large to accommodate the roots, spread them out, and plant slightly deeper than they were planted in the field.

Tuesday, Nov. 6

Bulb planting should be completed by this time. Protect with a layer of material to prevent heaving and injury in the spring. Pot up some paper white narcissi for Christmas flowers. This may be done as late as Nov. 14 if good conditions prevail, otherwise it may take a little longer. The yellow variety also is excellent.

Hardy chrysanthemum tops may be cut to within four inches off the ground, altho they may remain to help hold leaves, straw, or other protective material in place.

Wednesday, Nov. 7

Rake all leaves from rose beds, delphiniums, and peonies to remove any lurking disease that the leaves harbor.

Hardy ferns still can be planted and they are suitable for shady places. Lily of the valley and vinca minor also will do well in such a place.

Thursday, Nov. 8

Fall grown pansy plants that can be protected with boards and covered with a hotbed sash will bloom much earlier than when given no protection. Leaves may be placed among the plants under the sash for additional protection.

Hence, they should be planted as early as the ground can be worked. They revel in cool weather conditions. They flower longer when in partial shade.

Place wire netting around young fruit trees to keep the rabbits from injuring the tender bark. During periods of deep snow when food is scarce rabbits will eat anything, and it is extremely difficult to prevent injury.

Friday, Nov. 9

Protect the strawberry bed after the ground freezes slightly. The protecting material may consist of straw, peat moss, marsh hay, or anything that contains no weed seeds. Unless some protection is applied, the plants are likely to be heaved from the ground in spring.

Cut the lawn to about 3 inches, for if it grows any higher it may pack and kill patches which will need rejuvenation later on. A good lawn is one of the most effective features of any yard. Unless good soil conditions are provided it is difficult to obtain. The soil, therefore, must be given first consideration and the best time to prepare it is before the seed is sown.

Saturday, Nov. 10

Dormant cuttings of some shrubs, such as goldenbell and mock orange, will root in spring if they are buried in soil or sand and placed in a coldframe during winter.

Clean every section of the yard to remove any infested materials. Save the hardwood leaves for the compost heap and if one of the recommended materials is used decomposition will be hastened.

Water late planted stock and evergreens to prevent their entering winter in dry soil. See that all house plants are not injured by insects; keep the soil moist by daily attention.

APPARENTLY IT'S HERE TO STAY—WE MEAN RADIO

Broadcasting Completes First 25 Years

BY LARRY WOLTERS

It's just 25 years ago this week that radio had its opening night. Of course, sound was transmitted thru the air for many years prior to Nov. 2, 1920 [there were even several stations on the air more or less regularly with programs of entertainment then] but the transmission of the Harding-Cox election returns on that November night by station KDKA, Pittsburgh, is widely accepted as the start of modern broadcasting.

Prior to KDKA's pioneer broadcast Dr. Frank Conrad, an engineer of Westinghouse, which owned the station, had been putting records on the air by way of his own station house in his garage.

Nation's Favorite Recreation

A month later the station was sending out programs regularly tho there were probably fewer than 5,000 receivers in the country. Now there are 60 million [or were before the war]. This week some 950 standard stations and 61 FM and television stations and the entire radio and broadcasting industry will be retelling the story of the first 25 years of radio.

What was in 1920 minuscule magic has become the favorite recreation of the nation, as well as an important medium of information and education. The average set is turned on some four hours a day.

In the beginning radio was mainly music and talk, and announcers were the first celebrities—Graham McNamee, Sen Kaney, and Quin Ryan among them. Novelty kept radio going for a year or two and then something had to be done about developing special programs. Now we've had more than two decades of imagination, ingenuity, imitation, and enormous expenditure going into radio. The result: 18 and more hours a day of jokes and jackpots, singing mice and commercials, advice and admonition, soap operas, and studio audiences, but also the finest in music and drama, news as it happens and the great variety shows that regularly command audiences each week of upwards of 40 million Americans.

Minstrel an Early Hit

Fifteen years ago the four figure per show era was ushered in. Today many top entertainers are in the five figure bracket and several variety shows cost around a million a year exclusive of air time. It wasn't that way in the beginning. Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, who were to become Sam and Henry on W-G-N and later Amos and Andy, literally sang for their supper for a Chicago hotel when they started out as radio minstrel men. When W-G-N introduced them as San and Henry two decades ago they caused a revolution by going on the air every week-day evening for 15 minutes with a continued story. They became the forerunners of the serial drama.

W-G-N blazed many a radio trail. Painted Dreams was one of the first, if not the very first, day time serial. In 1924 W-G-N was the first Chicago station to broadcast a political convention; it became the first station to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis auto races. It put in lines at Dayton, Tenn., to broadcast the Scopes evolution trial. Back in 1926 Floyd Gibbons, Chicago Tribune reporter, became perhaps the nation's first news commentator. In 1929 W-G-N outfitted Chicago police squad cars with receivers at a cost of $40,000, broadcast all police calls and proved the efficacy of radio in combatting crime.

Five years ago W-G-N introduced the Chicago Theater of the Air, one of radio's most elaborate and popular programs, with a cast of 100 playing to a studio audience of 4,500.

New Favorites Every Year

Every year of radio has brought its new favorites. Wendell Hall, Harry Horlick, Jones and Harry, Pick and Pat, Cheerio, Vincent Lopez are some of the earlier ones that come to mind.

A little later came Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Joe Penner, Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Jack Pearl, Doc Rockwell. The depression years [no depression for radio] saw Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, and Eddie Cantor start reaping their big harvest.

It's a Rehearsal

Dorothy Hubert gives vocal setting up exercises to one of the canary stars of the American Radio Warblers show to be aired over W-G-N-Mutual at noon today.

MISS MAC DONALD SUNDAY EVENING HOUR SOLOIST

Jeanette MacDonald will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Miss MacDonald's offerings will include the "Waltz Song" from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and Friml's "Indian Love Call."

Jeanette MacDonald

Karl Krueger will direct the orchestra in the "Polovetsian Dance" from Borodin's "Prine Igor" and the Irish melody, "Londonderry Air."

'TOSCA' IS NEXT OPERA ON W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Puccini's opera "La Tosca," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday with Marion Claire singing the title role, Richard Tucker will sing Cavaradossi, and Bruce Foote, Scarpia.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Henry Weber will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The opera will be presented in English. Jack LaFrandre is the producer.

IT TAKES A COMPLETE CLEANSER—to meet these 3 pot-cleaning problems

PROBLEM NUMBER ONE is that old enemy, dullness. Quick, reach for S.O.S.! It's the complete cleanser — that cleans, scours and polishes in one simple operation. No other cleanser quite like S.O.S. — and no other cleansers needed. Try S.O.S. yourself, and see!

PROBLEM NUMBER TWO is the pan that's black with burned-on food. The pot you "can't get clean." Lady, with S.O.S., there's no such word as "can't"! Scientifically constructed, this magic cleanser whisks off stains and scorches—leaves aluminum shiny-bright with just a dip, rub, and rinse!

PROBLEM NUMBER THREE is grease—sticky, stubborn, clinging in corners. Again, that's where handy, oval-shaped S.O.S. shines—for S.O.S. is the ideal combination of grease-cutting and scouring materials that makes sink work faster and easier than you'd dream possible.

FREE "Favorite cleanser" for their pots and pans — that's what women everywhere call S. O. S. For free trial package—write The S. O. S. Company, 6251 W. 65th Street, Chicago 38, Illinois.

DISTRICT PARKS TO GIVE PUBLIC VIEW OF WORK

Hold Open Houses This Week

Gymnastic demonstrations, craft and artcraft exhibits, and social dancing are but a few of the activities planned by south side parks as part of their open house programs to be presented this week. The annual program is designed to acquaint parents and friends with the leisure time schedule at their neighborhood park.

Calumet park, 95th st. and the lake, will hold open house at 8 p. m. Thursday and Friday. Charles Mustard, supervisor, has announced the program will stress physical activities for men and women as well as for children at Calumet. There will be gym demonstrations by both boys and girls, a display of artcraft, and the junior canteen for youngsters up to 15, will be open for dancing and cokes. The branch library in the fieldhouse will put on a special exhibit.

Will Greet Parents

On hand to meet the parents will be Mustard, Miss Andrea Fritz, women's physical instructor; Robert Bruno, men's physical instructor; Mrs. Adymae Hathaway, artcraft instructor, and Miss Adele LePre, librarian.

Ernest Rea, supervisor at Grand Crossing park, 76th st. and Ingleside av., has announced an open house at 2 p. m. tomorrow and Tuesday. No special programs have been planned, he said. Monday afternoons there are tap and ballet lessons for the girls and gym classes for the boys. An Infant Welfare clinic also will be in session. In the evening there are a business girls' and married women's gym class, and a business men's gym class. Members of the newly formed Chess and Checker club will be on hand, as well as members of the civil air patrol unit.

Tell Tuesday Program

Tuesday there will be recreational games for boys and girls in the afternoon, and symphony orchestra rehearsal and a meeting of the Roosevelt Philatelic society in the evening. All groups will welcome visitors. Miss Vivienne Anderson, girl's gym instructor, and Frank Swierkos, boys' gym instructor, will be on hand with Rea to meet parents.

Open house at Madden park, 3800 Rhodes av., will open at 8 p. m. tomorrow and run all week. The dramatic group at the park will put on "Hansel and Gretel" under direction of Miss Lureline Cotton. Members of the tap dancing class will also perform. Tuesday night an athletic show is scheduled with stunts, boxing, and wrestling by boys in the junior and intermediate classes. Wednesday afternoon high school girls will model clothes they have made in sewing classes. There also will be an artcraft exhibit.

Mann Park Tells Plans

Movies are on the schedule for Wednesday night. Co-recreational games, such as volleyball, will be played before an audience Thursday evening, and the program will end Friday night with a dance. K. A. Bristol, supervisor, and Henry Hammond, boys' physical instructor, will be on hand to greet visitors.

The two day program at Mann park, 130th st. and Exchange av., will be held at 4 p. m. Thursday and Friday. There will be gymnastic demonstrations by the boys and girls, artcraft exhibits, and a rather unusual display of Indian relics collected by Supervisor Thomas Craven's brother. Regular classes will meet and visitors may see the park as it normally is.

Grid Battle Scheduled

A football game between junior varsity teams will open the program at Washington park at 4 p. m. Friday. In the evening parents have been invited to see gymnastic and artcraft exhibitions and participate in a community sing. John Day is supervisor. He will be assisted by Sol Butler, boys' physical instructor, May Dunklin, girls' physical instructor, and Tessie Edward, artcraft instructor.

At Bessemer park, 89th st. and Muskegon av., parents are being urged to bring their youngsters to the programs at 2 p. m. on Wednesday and Thursday. A new toy center will be opened and George Feld, supervisor, has promised a wide variety of playthings will be there.

Gameroom Planned

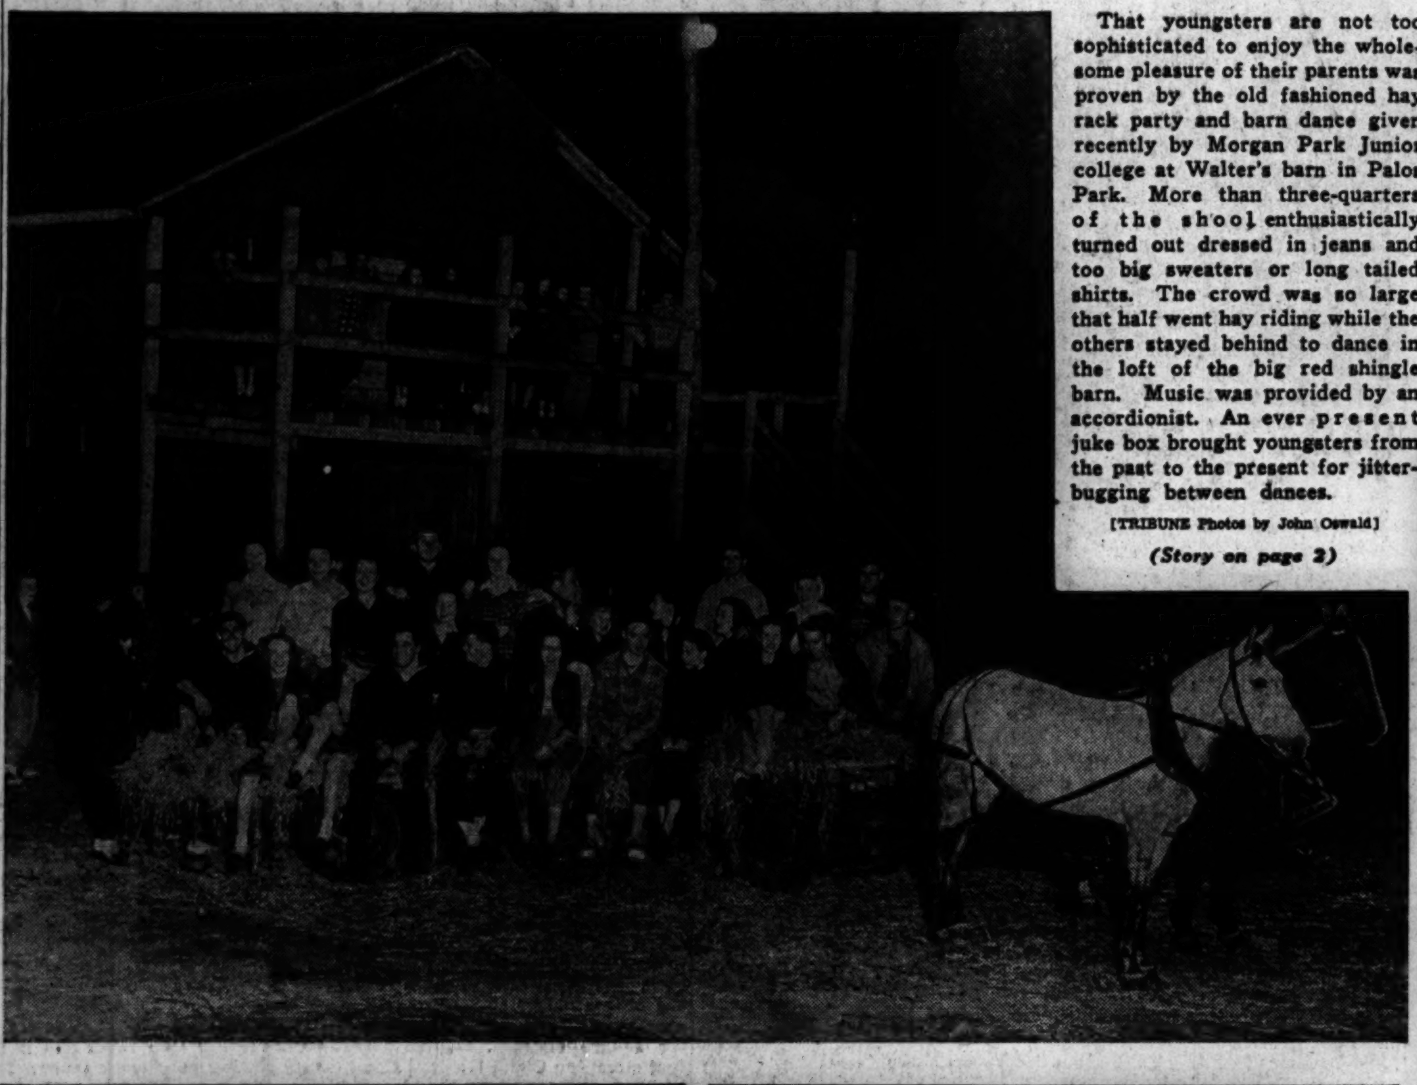
A special gameroom will be set up for the occasion with games for adults and youngsters. There will be gym demonstrations and artcraft and craft exhibits. Assisting Feld will be Bill Hayes, boys' physical instructor; Marion Vanek, girls' physical instructor, and John Stesans, artcraft and craft instructor. Dancing will climax Wednesday evening's program.

John Morris, supervisor at Tuley park, 90th st. and St. Lawrence av., has announced open house programs for 8 p. m. Thursday and Friday. There will be wrestling, tumbling, and gym demonstrations as well as volleyball games. Adults have been especially invited Friday night to view the obedience training class for dogs. There also will be craft and artcraft exhibits. Adolph Cozzie, men's gym instructor; Miss Ruth Feaman, girls' gym instructor, and William Sands, artcraft instructor, will assist Morris.

Atom Bomb Defense

The Rev. Paul Macy will speak before the Sunday Evening discussion group of United Church of Hyde Park, 53d st., and Blackstone av., at 7:45 p. m. today on "Defense Against the Atom Bomb."

Youth Sheds Sophistication as Moon Pours Its Light Upon Merry Hay Rack Party



That youngsters are not too sophisticated to enjoy the wholesome pleasure of their parents was proven by the old fashioned hay rack party and barn dance given recently by Morgan Park Junior college at Walter's barn in Palos Park. More than three-quarters of the shool enthusiastically turned out dressed in jeans and too big sweaters or long tailed shirts. The crowd was so large that half went hay riding while the others stayed behind to dance in the loft of the big red shingle barn. Music was provided by an accordionist. An ever present juke box brought youngsters from the past to the present for jitterbugging between dances.

Many youngsters never had square danced before, but all caught on quickly. One of the favorites was the Virginia reel. Every one semed to enjoy it just as much (from left) as Galen Everett, 1713 W. 102d st.; Dale Magnuson, 4641½ Lake Park av.; Barbara Fink, 1248 W. 103d st., and Alice Brownlow, 10421 Christiana av.

Chaperons insist they had as good a time as the youngsters for they took part in the dances as well as kept the party running smooth. Taking time to eat refreshments that included cider and man sized ham or cheese sandwiches were (from left) Col. Sanford Sellers, new superintendent of the junior college and Morgan Park Military academy; Mrs. Katherine Parks, college registrant; Mrs. Chrissie Newman, director of student activities; Dean Albert C. Dodd, and Mrs. Sellers.

Coming down the hay loft stairs for their turn on the hay rack were (left to right) Samuel Walling, 9821 Hamilton av.; Dorothea Johnson, 8046 Eberhart av.; Jean Morrow, 7108 Normal av., and Roland Olson, 7727 Evans av. Horses pulling the racks were garnished with sleigh bells that could be heard a long way in accompaniment with the singing of the youngsters.

Just as they do at regular dances couples decided occasionally to sit this one out. The moonlit night was warm and hazy, and couples filled the small stoop-like porches outside the loft, or sat on the stairs leading to the ground. If brave they perched on the porch railing like Corinne Lazer, 7947 Essex av., and Marshall (Mush) Feinstein, 2120 E. 73d st.

Barn dancing and hay rack riding make youngsters hungry, but there were ample refreshments for all. Helping make sure there would be no leftovers to cart home were (left to right) Warren Babbitt, 12001 Gregory av., Blue Island, Ill.; Barbie Hamel, 7729 Sangamon av.; Audrey Hollander, 7946 Crandon av., and Fred Hagreen, 8409 Euclid av.

S. SIDE'S WATER MADE 99.9 PCT. BACTERIA FREE

79th St. Filter Plant Cuts Impurities

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER

Altho only two of the three processes that eventually will be employed at the city's 24 million dollar filtration plant at 79th st. and the lake are in operation at present, impurities formerly found in south side water have been virtually eliminated, John R. Baylis, city water purification engineer, has reported to Public Works Commissioner Hewitt.

The two processes now in use are sedimentation and coagulation, which it was estimated would remove 70 per cent of the impurities formerly found in the water. Tests made in the city laboratory show that at least 88 per cent of the former objectionable qualities of the water are gone and 99.9 per cent of coliform bacteria.

Further Improvement Due

The third process, the actual filtration of the water, will not be started for at least another year because the scarcity of both labor and material has delayed construction. The addition of this will make south side water as clear and sparkling as that sold in bottles in the city's drug stores, Hewitt said.

A table compiled by Baylis showed that during the week of Oct. 14 to Oct. 20, coliform bacteria found in samples of raw water taken from the lake near the Dunne and 68th st. cribs averaged 316 per 100 cubic centimeters of liquid. After treatment at the plant water tested showed no trace of the impurity except on one day and then 0.4 per 100 cubic centimeters was found.

In other tests all other forms of bacteria were found to be reduced from an average of 399 per cubic centimeter in raw water to 1.6 in treated water. Algae and microscopic organisms were reduced from an average of 1,617 per cubic centimeter of raw water to 194 in treated water and an 88 per cent decrease in water turbidity was noted.

Construction Started in 1938

The week in which the tests were made was actually only the second week of continuous operation of the plant altho it was dedicated by Mayor Kelly on Sept. 20 in an impressive ceremony that had been long awaited by south side and south suburban residents. The plant services 115 square miles in the city and suburbs south of 39th st.

Construction work on the huge plant was started in October, 1938, and it was scheduled for completion early in 1942. Work was held up because of the lack of priorities. Numerous trips to Washington were made by both the mayor and Hewitt to warn federal officials of the danger to Chicago's south side water supply because of the proximity of northern Indiana towns and industries which dump live sewage into the lake. As a result of the warnings, priorities finally were granted.

OPEN ST. XAVIER CELEBRATION TO MARK 100 YEARS

Receive 1946 Class Into Alumnae Group

With the reception recently of the 1946 graduating class into the St. Xavier Academy Alumnae association, the academy launched a series of celebrations marking its 100th birthday.

Bishop Quarter, first Chicago prelate, in 1846 invited the Sisters of Mercy to found a Catholic girls' school. Sept. 23, 1846, five Sisters of Mercy, four of them under 21, and the superior, 24, arrived here, and on Oct. 12 opened the doors of a small frame building on Madison st. and Michigan av. to about 50 pupils. The building had been St. Mary's church, and had been moved from the south side of Lake st. near State st.

Nuns Made Equipment

The first folder on the new school read: "Select School for Young Ladies," and offered instruction in "reading, writing, arithmetic, composition, English grammar, geography, use of the globes, history, French, music, drawing, and plain and ornamental needle work."

Attendance was from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. with a generous interim of two hours for lunch.

The early students learned about the world from educational equipment made by the nuns. They fashioned the world globes by hand, drew the geography maps on parchment sent by the Mercy Sisters of Ireland, and equipped the classrooms with blackboards made of square pieces of timber. The school was chartered on Feb. 27, 1847, under the name of the Saint Francis Xavier Female Academy of Chicago, Illinois.

Establish College in 1915

In the same year the sisters moved into a new two story brick building next to Chicago's first cathedral. The academy was moved to the left of the cathedral at Madison st. and Wabash av., where it remained until destroyed by the fire in 1871.

The next site of the academy was at 29th st. and Wabash av., occupied from 1873 until September, 1901, when the present building at 4900 Cottage Grove av. was dedicated. In 1915 St. Xavier college was established.

From the 50 pupils who applied for admission in 1846, the enrollment has grown to about 800 students from first grade thru senior college class.

1896 Graduates Attend Tea

Sister Mary Paula, principal, said that daughters and granddaughters of some of the early students also have been graduates of the academy. In the present class, she said, there are six daughters of graduates: Barbara Beech, 5400 Ridgewood ct.; Jamie Fox, 5200 University av.; Lenoir Gary, 6817 Euclid av.; Becky Leech, 8210 Rhodes av.; Marjorie Pahls, 5429 East View pkwy., and Kathryn Whalen, 6520 University av.

Among the graduates of 1896 who attended the centennial tea recently were Mrs. Frank J. A. Wall, 7336 Clyde av.; Mrs. William J. Corbett, 1430 Lake Shore dr.; Miss Sara M. Maher, 6723 East End av., and Sister Mary Angele, who now is professor of philosophy and psychology at the college. Sister Mary Evangelist, who taught the graduates of 50 years ago, also attended the reunion. She is now receptionist at the provincial house, 620 Belmont av.

Alumnae Launch St. Xavier Centennial Celebration

Dressed in the costume of half a century ago Kathryn Whalen, 6520 University av., member of the centennial graduating class at St. Xavier academy, lights the candles on the golden jubilee table. Members of the graduating class of 50 years ago gathered at a tea at this table recently when the academy launched the school's centennial celebration.

Daughters of previous graduates served as hostesses at decorative tables depicting the Victorian era when former students came to homecoming by cable car and carriage. The silver and golden tables honored graduates of 25 and 50 years ago. Seated at the silver tea table is Lenoir Gary, 6817 Euclid av., surrounded (left to right) by her mother, Mrs. Lee J. Gary, chairman of the day; Elizabeth Ann Leech, 8210 Rhodes av., and Barbara Beech, 5400 Ridgewood ct.

HAY SCENT RISES THRU MOONLIGHT SPUN BY FAIRIES

BY JANET PECK

The night was perfect for a hay ride. So mild and moonlit was the world it seemed touched with an indefinable something that was almost fey. Even the horses, to which hayrack parties are routine stuff, seemed to feel the enchantment as they pricked their ears at the laughing youngsters, and stomped their feet, impatient to be off.

The occasion was an old fashioned hay ride and barn dance, sponsored by Morgan Park Junior college, at Walter's barn in Palos Park. The youngsters turned out in enthusiastic droves, and tho it usually takes more than Mother Nature to awe Joe College, even they seemed under her mystic spell. Perhaps it was the haze, or the bright full moon or the lush aroma of hay.,

The Sophisticate Vanishes

In any event, there was something that seemed to reach thru that youthful veneer of pseudo-sophistication, releasing that capacity for wholesome enjoyment of simpler pleasures that supposedly passed out as the machine age came in.

Scene of the party was a spacious barnyard and a red shingle barn, the loft of which had been made suitable for dancing. Four or five dogs wandered amiably about, eager to be friendly with every one, particularly if they were eating. Refreshments were apple cider and man sized ham or cheese sandwiches with plenty of relish.

Jeans and Slacks

Traditional garb for youngsters on such a night is baggy jeans and loose fitting sweaters, or long tailed shirts. In some instances, where boy and girl were "going" together, they wore identical slacks and wool plaid shirts. Some of the girls wore pigtails.

Once on its way, the party divided. Half went riding, amid much horseplay, giggling, and singing, while the others animatedly conversed in groups, or grabbed their partners for square dancing. Handclapping, foot stomping Claud [Pappy] Cheshire was caller, and under his guidance noses grew shiny and faces flushed as they whirled around the floor.

Dance Calling Is Work

At the end of the dance he pulled out a large red bandanna, mopped his brow, and mumbled something about being tuckered out. The youngsters, however, promptly plugged in the juke box for a little restful jitterbugging. Some of the girls came stag, and boys milled around changing partners. One group of girls, with boy friends in service, dropped in a corner and made lonely overtures to the friendly dogs.

Somewhere in the middle of the party the first group of riders returned, and another group clambered aboard and gayly left the barnyard. Brushing straw from their clothes, they went upstairs for their share of barn dancing, eating, and jitterbugging. The party ended about midnight, by which time not only was the caller near collapse, but the chaperons, the dancers, and the horses.

Only the dogs wagged their tails until the last car left, as energetic at the end as they had been when they first barked friendly greeting.

Our Lady of Peace Society Will Hold Annual Party

Our Lady of Peace Sanctuary society will hold its annual fall party at 8:30 p. m. Friday in the school auditorium, 79th st. and Jeffery av. Mrs. James W. McCarthy and Mrs. Harold Preston are general chairmen. Committee chairmen assisting include Mrs. William J. Leagy, Mrs. W. H. Coulsen, Mrs. Frank Ross, Mrs. W. V. McDonnell, Mrs. Robert Covert, Mrs. Joseph McGovern, Mrs. J. Homer Andreas, Mrs. Joseph Darlington, and Mrs. G. F. Klein.

Former Slave Counts Joys with 105 Years

One of Father Time's favorites, Mrs. Kate Patterson, celebrated her 105th birthday last week. At the party held in her honor she informed friends she felt just as good as she did when younger, "'Cept I can't work like I used to."

Mrs. Kate Patterson

Where work is concerned, Mrs. Patterson should be rated as an expert. As a young girl she was taken from her parents and sold on a slave block at Hallsville, Ky. The experience is still vivid in her mind. She recalled that her new master gave his girl slaves sticks of red candy.

Shortly thereafter she was put to work in the fields, "and I tell my children," she nodded, "they never have seen trouble like mine. We received one pair of shoes each year and my bed was made of grass and hay covered with old pieces of carpet. I've seen plenty of trouble," she repeated, "but I'm happy."

Tells of Day of Freedom

Mrs. Patterson declared the happiest day in her life was the day she was freed, after the Civil war ended. She then married Richard Patterson, a farmer, and shortly after moved with him to a farm in Indiana, where she spent the next 25 years until his death. Tho she attended school for only about two months, at the age of 15, or "just long enough to learn to spell," she tried to make up for this by her knowledge of cooking and sewing.

Asked to what she attributed her longevity, she replied she had no idea, "unless it was the hard work." Until 10 years ago she smoked a pipe and chewed tobacco, but thinks cigaret smoking women are a disgrace. The same goes for women who wear short skirts.

Rises at 6 A. M.

Seldom ill, the centenarian still cares for her own room and keeps busy sewing patchwork quilts. She rises at 6 a. m., retires equally early and, added her daughter, Mrs. Rose Adkins of 504 E. 38th st., with whom she lives, she eats just as much as she always did.

Mrs. Patterson is a member of the Gideon Baptist church, 41st st. and Prairie av., where she attended regularly until a year ago. She has had 13 children, five of whom are living. There are 15 grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

DEPICT LINCOLN ON FRONT PORCH SHOOTING DUCKS

Slept Here, Too, Claims South Side Family

Formidable matrons who can glance with pride at a worn bedstead and boast, "George Washington slept here," have nothing on the C. M. Matter family of 4008 Lake Park av. Legend has it that Abraham Lincoln not only slept in their house, but shot ducks from the front porch.

Tho this saga never has been verified by the Historical society, residents of the neighborhood are satisfied with it. They assume it's true and proudly do a bit of modest bragging to newcomers in the neighborhod.

Owned by Trumbull

At the time this historical lore was supposedly in the making, the house was owned by Sen. Lyman Trumbull, then at the peak of his career. He was a good friend of Lincoln. Reputedly the President stayed with the senator whenever he visited Chicago. In fact, say the present owners, the famous visitor slept in the "little gray room" at the back of the house.

Between this house and the adjoining one there was a pond. Here is where Lincoln allegedly showed himself to be a sportsman and shot ducks from the side of the front porch. Tho the original front porch has been removed the hallowed part he trod upon is still there.

It is a certainty, however, that many famous persons visited the house during and after the Civil war. There was Grant. William Jennings Bryan was another. Bryan had been a student in Trumbull's law office in Chicago following the senator's last term in Washington in 1873.

House Bears Plaque

It is believed the house was built sometime in the 1850s and that it was subsequently altered and enlarged. Sen. Trumbull acquired it in 1864, and it often has been called an unpretentious looking house for a senator. Of gray stucco over brick, it has 14 rooms. The Matters have outfitted each with period furniture of Trumbull's era.

A bronze marker has been placed on the front of the house by the Chicago Charter Jubilee committee which reads, "Lyman Trumbull. Friend of Lincoln, senator from Illinois; supported Lincoln; secured passage of the 14th amendment; was one of the Republicans who voted against the impeachment of Andrew Johnson."

HYDE PARK HIGH IN COMMERCIAL TRAINING EXHIBIT

Parents to Visit Classes on Friday Night

South siders often hear of the high academic standards of Hyde Park High school, 6220 Stony Island av., with its prize taking, scholarship winning students in mathematics, science, and the languages. Seldom do they hear of its careful training for potential business wizards.

Remedying this will be the program presented by the PTA and the commercial department of the school at 7:30 p. m. Friday in Loomis hall. Tho it has been planned primarily as parents night, business men, civic leaders, clubwomen, and members of the board of education have been invited. Frank Williamson and Mrs. Laura Brown of the business faculty are in charge of the show.

Band Will Play

Opening the performance will be selections by the band conducted by Capt. Joseph Fagan, after which Joseph F. Gonnelly, principal, will deliver the opening address. "Victory for Business" is the theme of the program and eight youngsters forming a V on stage will step forth individually to give a short talk on some phase of their training.

Groups then will be taken on a tour of the commercial departments where students will give a demonstration of office practice and other business department set-ups. They will see demonstrations of calculating, bookkeeping, duplicating, dictating, and wax stenciling machines.

Many to Participate

Students taking part will include: Rolf Stein, 2218 E. 70th st.; Estelle Levine, 4631 Drexel av.; Lillie Meyers, 5638 Lake Park av.; Elza Lazar, 6554 Kimbark av.; Jacqueline Wren, 654 E. 89th st.; Nadine and Beverly Leussen, 5005 Blackstone av.; Joyce Ingler, 6849 Clyde av.; Ella Racard, 6554 Kimbark av.; Lillian Hintz, 7250 Yates av.; Mary Huggins, 6401 University av.

Now with its modern equipment, such as the dictating machine used by Ruth Racine, 6201 Dorchester av., it is becoming known for its commercial studies as well. A demonstration of an office practice class will be given at 7:30 p. m. Friday for PTA, business men, civic leaders, and club women. [TRIBUNE Photo]

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 5

It is not generally realized that roses can be planted successfully in autumn, and yet fall planting saves much time. It can be done while weather conditions are suitable.

In spring, continuous rains, such as were experienced this year, may prevent planting almost until hot weather arrives.

Never permit the root system to be exposed to the air for any extended period or the roots will dry out. Make the holes sufficiently large to accommodate the roots, spread them out, and plant slightly deeper than they were planted in the field.

Tuesday, Nov. 6

Bulb planting should be completed by this time. Protect with a layer of material to prevent heaving and injury in the spring. Pot up some paper white narcissi for Christmas flowers. This may be done as late as Nov. 14 if good conditions prevail, otherwise it may take a little longer. The yellow variety also is excellent.

Hardy chrysanthemum tops may be cut to within four inches off the ground, altho they may remain to help hold leaves, straw, or other protective material in place.

Wednesday, Nov. 7

Rake all leaves from rose beds, delphiniums, and peonies to remove any lurking disease that the leaves harbor.

Hardy ferns still can be planted and they are suitable for shady places. Lily of the valley and vinca minor also will do well in such a place.

Thursday, Nov. 8

Fall grown pansy plants that can be protected with boards and covered with a hotbed sash will bloom much earlier than when given no protection. Leaves may be placed among the plants under the sash for additional protection.

Hence, they should be planted as early as the ground can be worked. They revel in cool weather conditions. They flower longer when in partial shade.

Place wire netting around young fruit trees to keep the rabbits from injuring the tender bark. During periods of deep snow when food is scarce rabbits will eat anything, and it is extremely difficult to prevent injury.

Friday, Nov. 9

Protect the strawberry bed after the ground freezes slightly. The protecting material may consist of straw, peat moss, marsh hay, or anything that contains no weed seeds. Unless some protection is applied, the plants are likely to be heaved from the ground in spring.

Cut the lawn to about 3 inches, for if it grows any higher it may pack and kill patches which will need rejuvenation later on. A good lawn is one of the most effective features of any yard. Unless good soil conditions are provided it is difficult to obtain. The soil, therefore, must be given first consideration and the best time to prepare it is before the seed is sown.

Saturday, Nov. 10

Dormant cuttings of some shrubs, such as goldenbell and mock orange, will root in spring if they are buried in soil or sand and placed in a coldframe during winter.

Clean every section of the yard to remove any infested materials. Save the hardwood leaves for the compost heap and if one of the recommended materials is used decomposition will be hastened.

Water late planted stock and evergreens to prevent their entering winter in dry soil. See that all house plants are not injured by insects; keep the soil moist by daily attention.

PEOPLE TO LIVE IN PROVERBIAL 'GLASS HOUSES'

BY LOUISE BARGELT

We are going to see an increasing use of interior glass block partitions in new houses. They offer an interesting flexibility in room arrangement for glass block partitions may be built so they can be dismantled and put together again in a new location.

Another advantage is interior partitions of glass block will let light thru, but will block sound.

Clear Glass in Vogue

We also are going to see an increasing use of clear glass with perhaps an entire garden side of a living-dining room of clear glass. Such a wall of glass can furnish an attractive view, whether it is of trees and gardens and water in summer, or of swirling blizzards and snow covered lawns in winter.

As a protection against condensation on a window wall home owners now can have a single glazing material which is actually two sheets of glass with a dehydrated air space between them. This moisture-proofed air space is permanently sealed.

May Rival Stone Some Day

The advances made in hollow glass blocks in the last few years have been great. Just about everything can be done with these hollow glass blocks except to use them as house foundations. And as a matter of fact glass block is said to be strong enough for this, tho there have been other reasons to prevent its use as a bearing wall.

It looks as if glass may take its place some day with masonry, wood, stone, concrete, and steel as one of the basic building materials. In the meantime it looks as if builders of new homes and remodelers of old ones will be asking for more and more glass.

APPARENTLY IT'S HERE TO STAY—WE MEAN RADIO

BY LARRY WOLTERS

It's just 25 years ago this week that radio had its opening night. Of course, sound was transmitted thru the air for many years prior to Nov. 2, 1920 [there were even several stations on the air more or less regularly with programs of entertainment then] but the transmission of the Harding-Cox election returns on that November night by station KDKA, Pittsburgh, is widely accepted as the start of modern broadcasting.

Prior to KDKA's pioneer broadcast Dr. Frank Conrad, an engineer of Westinghouse, which owned the station, had been putting records on the air by way of his own station house in his garage. It attracted so much attention that his associates talked him into expanding his activities on the company station.

Nation's Favorite Recreation

A month later the station was sending out programs regularly tho there were probably fewer than 5,000 receivers in the country. Now there are 60 million [or were before the war]. This week some 950 standard stations and 61 FM and television stations and the entire radio and broadcasting industry will be retelling the story of the first 25 years of radio.

What was in 1920 minuscule magic has become the favorite recreation of the nation, as well as an important medium of information and education. The average set is turned on some four hours a day.

In the beginning radio was mainly music and talk, and announcers were the first celebrities—Graham McNamee, Sen Kaney, and Quin Ryan among them. Novelty kept radio going for a year or two and then something had to be done about developing special programs. Now we've had more than two decades of imagination, ingenuity, imitation, and enormous expenditure going into radio. The result: 18 and more hours a day of jokes and jackpots, singing mice and commercials, advice and admonition, soap operas, and studio audiences, but also the finest in music and drama, news as it happens and the great variety shows that regularly command audiences each week of upwards of 40 million Americans.

Minstrel an Early Hit

Fifteen years ago the four figure per show era was ushered in. Today many top entertainers are in the five figure bracket and several variety shows cost around a million a year exclusive of air time. It wasn't that way in the beginning. Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, who were to become Sam and Henry on W-G-N and later Amos and Andy, literally sang for their supper for a Chicago hotel when they started out as radio minstrel men. When W-G-N introduced them as San and Henry two decades ago they caused a revolution by going on the air every week-day evening for 15 minutes with a continued story. They became the forerunners of the serial drama. And they were the first to learn what an enormous consumer of material radio could be.

W-G-N blazed many a radio trail. Painted Dreams was one of the first, if not the very first, day time serial. In 1924 W-G-N was the first Chicago station to broadcast a political convention; it became the first station to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis auto races. It put in lines at Dayton, Tenn., to broadcast the Scopes evolution trial. Back in 1926 Floyd Gibbons, Chicago Tribune reporter, became perhaps the nation's first news commentator. In 1929 W-G-N outfitted Chicago police squad cars with receivers at a cost of $40,000, broadcast all police calls and proved the efficacy of radio in combatting crime. Soon the Chicago police department and those of other cities adopted radio.

Five years ago W-G-N introduced the Chicago Theater of the Air, one of radio's most elaborate and popular programs, with a cast of 100 playing to a studio audience of 4,500.

New Favorites Every Year

Every year of radio has brought its new favorites. Wendell Hall, Harry Horlick, Jones and Harry, Pick and Pat, Cheerio, Vincent Lopez are some of the earlier ones that come to mind.

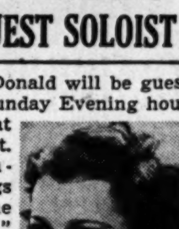
A little later came Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Joe Penner, Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Jack Pearl, Doc Rockwell. The depression years [no depression for radio] saw Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, and Eddie Cantor start reaping their big harvest.

Shortly thereafter the era of the big variety show really began to blossom. Then radio discovered Hollywood and movie stars. But in recent years movie stars have been eclipsed by radio developed personalities—Fibber McGee and Molly, Bob Hope, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Ed [Archie] Gardner, Kay Kyser, and a host of others who have learned the trick of doing a good characterization and earning themselves $1,000 a week or more thereby. Many a radio favorite is as real to the listener as his best friend.

One might draw many philosophic conclusions out of this melange of sound and fury of 25 years. We will only say that radio apparently is here to stay. And television is just peeping around the corner.

JEANETTE M'DONALD IS SUNDAY EVENING HOUR GUEST SOLOIST

Jeanette MacDonald will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Miss MacDonald's offerings will include the "Waltz Song" from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and Friml's "Indian Love Call."



Jeanette MacDonald

Karl Krueger will direct the orchestra in the "Polovetsian Dance" from Borodin's "Prine Igor" and the Irish melody, "Londonderry Air." Miss MacDonald, the chorus, and audience will join the orchestra in Giardini's hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King."

BONDS OR BALONEY

It's bonded whiskey we're selling—not baloney. We've been one of the few stores in Chicago able to offer bonded whiskey to our customers consistently and we intend to continue to do so. But—and this is no baloney—we must have your help in maintaining a balanced inventory.

Next time you buy your favorite bond at L-N pick up a bottle or so of the other fine merchandise we carry. It won't be difficult because L-N prices on wines, rums, liquors, etc. are often at cost or below just as many of our listings in today's ad.

VOTE WESTERN SPRINGS ISSUE OF PARK BONDS

4 Areas Optioned in $90,000 Project

By a vote of 461 to 187, a $90,000 bond issue has been approved for the purchase and improvement of park properties in Western Springs.

As a result of the balloting, the bond issue will make available to the park board sufficient money to purchase land for four parks. The board already holds options on the land except for three parcels. At present the village has only Spring Rock park. Plans call for the development of new areas to supplement Spring Rock park after various village organizations have expressed their views.

Back in the 1920s, a survey on playground needs was made for Western Springs, La Grange, and La Grange Park. No action was taken in Western Springs and since then some of the suggested areas have been built on.

Locate New Park Sites

A planning commission was formed, however, and the park board has had its coöperation in locating the new parks as follows:

Field park—The entire two block section along Hillgrove av. between Clausen and Ellington avs. and between Hillgrove av. and 43d st.

Forest Hills—The entire block bounded by Central and Fair Elm av. and by 50th and 51st sts.

Old Town—That portion of the block bounded by Hampton and Forest avs. and by Maple and Chestnut sts. not now occupied by houses.

Ridge Acres—A portion along the east side of Harvey av. between 46th and 47th sts. not now occupied by houses.

Need for More Funds

The long range program of the park board, of which Duncan Wiedemann is president, is the development of the neighborhood parks with recreational facilities. Most of the money from the bond issue, however, will go for the purchase of land and immediate improvements must necessarily be limited to available funds.

Because Western Springs is a fast growing suburb it was felt, planners said, the time was at hand when something must be done about park sites if it was to be done at all.

Hold Mass Meeting

Previous to the vote on the bond issue, a mass meeting was sponsored by the Citizens Committee for Parks, of which Rex. E. Hieronymous was chairman. Speakers included Wiedemann and C. S. Hill, architect.

In reviewing the plans for each park site, Hill explained that each site when fully developed would have a shelter house, a game area, an open grass area, and skating rinks in at least two of the parks.

It was estimated park areas planned would be sufficient when the village population had doubled.

MRS. W. F. ELMS TO HEAD DU PAGE HEALTH MEETING

Mrs. Willard F. Elms of Bloomingdale recently was appointed general chairman for the 1945 annual meeting of the Du Page County Family Service association. The meeting will be held Dec. 8 in the Medinah Country club.

The public is invited but attendance will be limited and all reservations to the 6:45 o'clock dinner will be sold in advance, Mrs. Elms said.

Mrs. Elms, one of the association's 31 directors, said Bloomingdale would contribute 100 per cent of its quota to the associations financial needs next year. She is treasurer of the Du Page County Health council, a member of the County League of Women Voters, and general chairman and fund raising chairman for the American Red Cross in the Bloomingdale area.

BERWYNITE PUTS ON HER BRIDAL DRESS FOR 50TH WEDDING PARTY

With a family dinner in the afternoon and a theater party at night, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Hynous of Berwyn recently celebrated their golden wedding. Mrs. Hynous wore the dress in which she had been married 50 years ago.

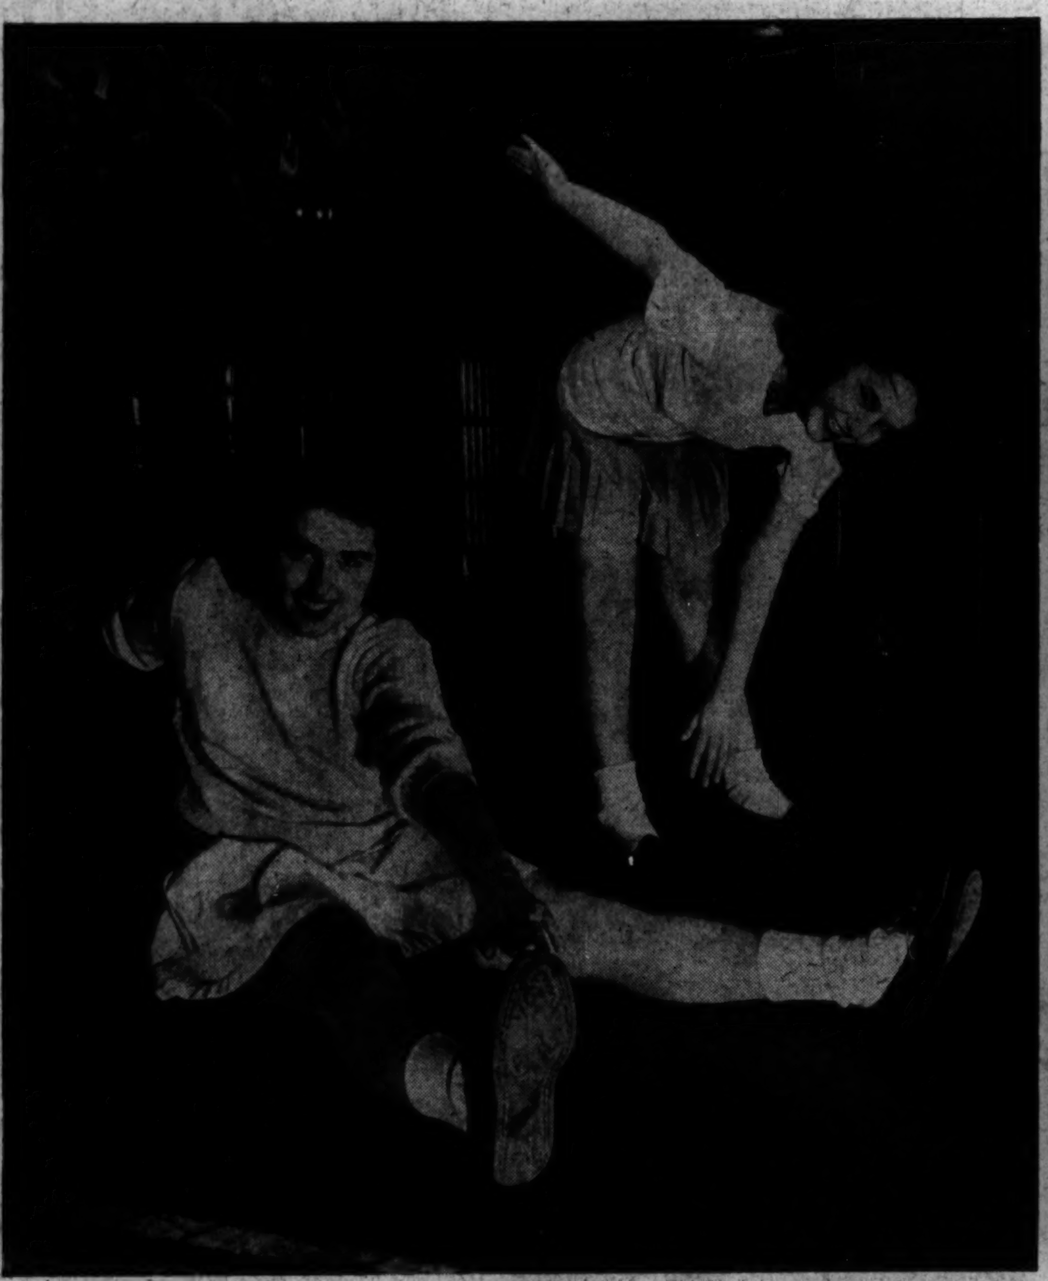
Mrs. Hynous

Frank S. Hynous

Hynous was born in Prairie Du Chien, Wis., in 1872 and came to Chicago when he was 11. Mrs. Hynous, the former Anna J. Schwartz, was born in Chicago in 1875 in a house on Kramer st., near which the Chicago fire started.

Sons and daughters of the couple, all residents of Berwyn, are Dr. Frank R. Hynous, John Hynous, Sgt. Victor Hynous, and Mrs. Blanche Svec. There are three grandchildren. Among those attending the celebration were Mr. and Mrs. James Benda. Mrs. Benda, a sister of Hynous, was a bridesmaid at the long ago wedding.

Playground School Demonstrates to Girls That Charm May Be Attained by All



Stretching for glamor are Colleen Roache, 16 (left), 851 Washington blvd., Oak Park, and Charlotte Casurella, 15, 1016 Thomas st., Oak Park. The girls are two of the 85 members enrolled in charm courses for teen-agers given under auspices of Oak Park playgrounds.

Striving for perfect posture, Nancilee Boyd, 13, 205 N. Humphrey av., balances a book on her head as Joy Lord, 14 (center), 1220 N. Oak Park av., and Mary Clinton, 14, 205 S. Cuyler av., await their turns. The charm classes, which meet weekly at Stevenson and Barrie playgrounds, have met with enthusiastic response from the coke crowd.

Swathed in towels, Kathryn Ann Evenson, 14, 1213 Hayes av., pats on cold cream, following methods suggested in classes on care of the skin. Studying her technique are Ruth Belisle, 13, 106 S. Humphrey av., and Frances McCullough, 11, 346 N. Austin blvd. Meanwhile correct methods of hair grooming are demonstrated by playground staff members. Agnes Richmond, 1023 S. Lombard av., shows proper hair brushing procedure. Acting as her subject is Shirley Cooley, 237 S. Oak Park av.

For benefit of fellow students two bobby soxers demonstrate how absorption in conversation can lead to ungraceful posture. Barbara Nesbitt, 13 (left), 5945 Midway Park, acts as model with Doris Moline, 15, 312 S. Kenilworth av.

Correct and incorrect methods of dressing are demonstrated by June Wright, 14, 126 N. Lombard av. Poised and assured in her trimly tailored yellow wool suit, she pauses at the fieldhouse door. In the other picture she shows how too much jewelry, badly fitting sweater, hanging slip, and slouching posture can detract from appearance.

"Every girl wants to have beautiful hands," says June Puddicombe (left), Stevenson playground staff member, as she shows Sally Jean Collett, 14, 639 Forest av., how to give herself a professional manicure. Charm school classes will culminate with a style show in the spring.

CHARM SCHOOLS THREATEN REIGN OF BOBBY SOCKS

BY AGNES LYNCH

Bobby socks, pigtails, and babushkas spell comfort but not glamor. And even the most ardent devotees of loafers, tattersal plaids, and dungarees sometimes think wishfully of becoming slick chicks, usually with an eye to winning the attention of some youth of high school or college age.

To help the coke crowd make the transition from slacks and shirt tails to "smooth" attire and manner, charm schools for bobby soxers have been opened at two Oak Park playgrounds.

Hair Styling First Course

Approximately 85 girls have enrolled for the courses, one of which is conducted at 7:30 p. m. Wednesdays at Stevenson playground, Lake st. and Taylor av. A second class meets at 7:15 p. m. Thursdays at Barrie playground, Lombard and Garfield sts.

Much interest has been shown in the first unit of the course dealing with hair styling.

"Care of the hair seems to interest the girls most," Miss Josephine Blackstock, playgrounds director, said. "Above all, they want to have long, glossy manes of beautifully brushed hair. They're interested in fashion trends, too, and we hear a lot of questions about whether page boy cuts are in or out this season, or whether a pompadour or bangs would suit their features."

Career Women to Talk

Classes also will be given in skin care, costume design, posture, and weight control. A final phase of the course will deal with careers. Leaders from the fields of nursing, advertising, teaching, modeling, and others open to women will give the girls first hand information about their work.

Charm school classes are light hearted sessions, often punctuated with giggles and crescendos of laughter. But the gaiety masks an undercurrent of earnestness.

"A girl certainly has a lot of competition these days," said one teenager, looking a little ruefully at her dungaree and shirt tailed silhouette in the mirror. "You have to be a smooth jill if you want the jacksons to date you, and I guess a charm course is what a lot of us need. I know I do."

Will Give Style Show

"My special problem is weight," said another. "I guess every one has heard enough about diets, but it's hard to go thru with one, especially when chocolate malteds and sodas are so tempting. But maybe if a lot of us try to cut excess sweets out of our menus we can give each other moral support."

Climax of the course will be a style show next spring. The girls will demonstrate what they have learned about posture and grooming, the relation of dress to personality, and types of clothing suitable for various occasions.

Miss Blackstock is in general charge of the charm courses. Instructors at Stevenson playground are Miss June Puddicombe and Miss Agnes Richmond. Miss Bertha Malas is instructor at Barrie. Miss Maebelle Foley is hair stylist and consultant for courses at both playgrounds.

DEAD, CAPTURED NAZIS TESTIFY TO YANK'S COURAGE

Leads Fight Which Drives Enemy from Hill

Gallantry in action on the 5th army front in Italy merited a silver star for Lt. Bernard F. Lynch, son of William Lynch, River Forest. He served with the 349th infantry Blue Devil division.

When counter-attacking enemy soldiers approached his company's positions Lt. Lynch reorganized a group of 15 men and led them against the Nazis. In the face of intense fire he personally killed three, and with his men drove the enemy force from the hill. During the engagement 15 Nazis were killed and five surrendered.

Ambushed by Enemy

Another west side recipient of the silver star is Corp. Alex P. Satin, 4302 14th st., who distinguished himself in action last April in Germany. When his convoy was ambushed, he remained to destroy the vehicle and its gasoline.

Heroic action in Germany also merited the medal for Corp. Alvin Cooper, son of Mrs. Mollie Cooper, 3355 Ogden av. When his platoon was attacked unexpectedly, immediate cries for assistance arose.

First Aid to Wounded

Unmindful of personal danger, Corp. Cooper administered first aid and pulled the wounded to cover. Time after time he repeated the performance until all wounded were cared for.

Disregard for his own safety during combat won the silver star medal for Pvt. Elmer G. Wessel, son of Mrs. Elmer Wessel, 2707 S. Kostner av. A member of the 412th field artillery, 20th division, he served in the reconnaissance section. In addition to the silver star, he wears the European theater ribbon with one battle star and the good conduct medal.

A former student of Marshall and Austin High schools, Sgt. Wilens entered service in May, 1941.

Lt. Matthew Mihina Jr., 2002 S. Racine av., has reported for duty at Gulfport [Miss.] army air field. He is a radar observer aboard a Super Fortress.

In ceremonies at Key West, Fla., the bronze star was awarded to Lt. Frank O'Dowd, River Forest, for meritorious service while on submarine duty in the Southwest Pacific. His ship sank 14,000 tons of enemy shipping.

Harold G. Nagel, 707 S. Marshfield av., boatswain 2d class, recently received his discharge at the naval separation center, Toledo, O. Veteran of the North African invasion, he also served in the Pacific theater, meriting six battle stars. APPARENTLY IT'S HERE TO STAY—WE MEAN RADIO

BY LARRY WOLTERS

It's just 25 years ago this week that radio had its opening night. Of course, sound was transmitted thru the air for many years prior to Nov. 2, 1920 [there were even several stations on the air more or less regularly with programs of entertainment then] but the transmission of the Harding-Cox election returns on that November night by station KDKA, Pittsburgh, is widely accepted as the start of modern broadcasting.

Prior to KDKA's pioneer broadcast Dr. Frank Conrad, an engineer of Westinghouse, which owned the station, had been putting records on the air by way of his own station house in his garage. It attracted so much attention that his associates talked him into expanding his activities on the company station.

Nation's Favorite Recreation

A month later the station was sending out programs regularly tho there were probably fewer than 5,000 receivers in the country. Now there are 60 million [or were before the war]. This week some 950 standard stations and 61 FM and television stations and the entire radio and broadcasting industry will be retelling the story of the first 25 years of radio.

What was in 1920 minuscule magic has become the favorite recreation of the nation, as well as an important medium of information and education. The average set is turned on some four hours a day.

In the beginning radio was mainly music and talk, and announcers were the first celebrities—Graham McNamee, Sen Kaney, and Quin Ryan among them. Novelty kept radio going for a year or two and then something had to be done about developing special programs. Now we've had more than two decades of imagination, ingenuity, imitation, and enormous expenditure going into radio. The result: 18 and more hours a day of jokes and jackpots, singing mice and commercials, advice and admonition, soap operas, and studio audiences, but also the finest in music and drama, news as it happens and the great variety shows that regularly command audiences each week of upwards of 40 million Americans.

Minstrel an Early Hit

Fifteen years ago the four figure per show era was ushered in. Today many top entertainers are in the five figure bracket and several variety shows cost around a million a year exclusive of air time. It wasn't that way in the beginning. Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, who were to become Sam and Henry on W-G-N and later Amos and Andy, literally sang for their supper for a Chicago hotel when they started out as radio minstrel men. When W-G-N introduced them as San and Henry two decades ago they caused a revolution by going on the air every week-day evening for 15 minutes with a continued story. They became the forerunners of the serial drama. And they were the first to learn what an enormous consumer of material radio could be.

W-G-N blazed many a radio trail. Painted Dreams was one of the first, if not the very first, day time serial. In 1924 W-G-N was the first Chicago station to broadcast a political convention; it became the first station to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis auto races. It put in lines at Dayton, Tenn., to broadcast the Scopes evolution trial. Back in 1926 Floyd Gibbons, Chicago Tribune reporter, became perhaps the nation's first news commentator. In 1929 W-G-N outfitted Chicago police squad cars with receivers at a cost of $40,000, broadcast all police calls and proved the efficacy of radio in combatting crime. Soon the Chicago police department and those of other cities adopted radio.

Five years ago W-G-N introduced the Chicago Theater of the Air, one of radio's most elaborate and popular programs, with a cast of 100 playing to a studio audience of 4,500.

New Favorites Every Year

Every year of radio has brought its new favorites. Wendell Hall, Harry Horlick, Jones and Harry, Pick and Pat, Cheerio, Vincent Lopez are some of the earlier ones that come to mind. Some of the earliest have lasted well thru the whole radio era.

A little later came Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Joe Penner, Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Jack Pearl, Doc Rockwell. The depression years [no depression for radio] saw Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, and Eddie Cantor start reaping their big harvest.

Shortly thereafter the era of the big variety show really began to blossom. Then radio discovered Hollywood and movie stars. But in recent years movie stars have been eclipsed by radio developed personalities—Fibber McGee and Molly, Bob Hope, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Ed [Archie] Gardner, Kay Kyser, and a host of others who have learned the trick of doing a good characterization and earning themselves $1,000 a week or more thereby. Many a radio favorite is as real to the listener as his best friend.

One might draw many philosophic conclusions out of this melange of sound and fury of 25 years. We will only say that radio apparently is here to stay. And television is just peeping around the corner.

JEANETTE M'DONALD IS SUNDAY EVENING HOUR GUEST SOLOIST

Jeanette MacDonald

Jeanette MacDonald will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Miss MacDonald's offerings will include the "Waltz Song" from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and Friml's "Indian Love Call."

Karl Krueger will direct the orchestra in the "Polovetsian Dance" from Borodin's "Prine Igor" and the Irish melody, "Londonderry Air." Miss MacDonald, the chorus, and audience will join the orchestra in Giardini's hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King."

COWHEY TELLS HOW SUPERWAY WILL AID AREA

Avondale Av. Route Gains Support

Population growth on the northwest side of the city and in its near-by suburbs, expansion of business and residential areas, ability to drive to work in the loop—these gains were seen by Ald. Cowhey [41st] as results that will accrue upon completion of the northwest super-highway.

The new expressway will serve as a traffic link between the city air terminal, to be built on the Douglas site, and the loop.

The population increase will be a natural outcome, he said, since the prime consideration in choosing a home is the nearness of an express route to a man's job or business. As the newcomers move into the area, so must business institutions follow to serve their needs, he pointed out.

Present Driving Hindered

Without such a road autoists have little advantage in driving to work. The diagonal streets which theoretically would provide fast transportation are actually slow, for there are more traffic light changes to observe than on the north-south and east-west streets. With the expressway, however, an increasing number of car owners will drive to work, he said, with the additional benefit that congestion will be relieved on the public transportation facilities.

Since the super-highway has reached the advanced planning stage, residents in the northwest area are taking an increased interest in its site. Most popular choice is the Avondale av. route which parallels the North Western railway right of way, he said. In the 41st ward 32 civic organizations have submitted petitions to him requesting the choice.

Others Favor Avandale Plan

Further evidence of the popularity of the Avondale site for the highway was presented by George J. Trinkaus, chairman of the executive committee of the Northwest Federation of Improvement club.

"We've been campaigning for the express highway more than 15 years, and have made thoro study of the possible sites with the realization that many engineering problems are involved. If these problems can be solved without too great difficulty on the Avandale site, we believe it is the best possible location," he said.

Reasons advanced by the federation for the Avondale site, said Trinkaus are the direct line of the already cleared area and the service it would provide to the heavy population growth already along the line.

Put Cost at 52 Millions

For the 13.8 miles of the new highway the cost has been estimated at $52,127,000, Cowhey said. This figure will provide for an eight lane roadway with ramps permitting access at suitable points.

Financing and construction will be shared by state, county, and city governments, with the allotment of each group to be agreed upon before engineering work is begun.

As the state's share, Gov. Green has promised complete coöperation. The highway will be eligible for aid under federal grants of 23 million dollars a year. George A. Quinlen, county highway superintendent, has indicated his next move will be to get funds for the county's alloted cost. The city council's help in acquiring and developing the super-highway was promised by Ald. Kells [28th], chairman of the traffic committee.

LIVE NEAR-BY ALL THEIR LIVES, THEN MEET, WED

In contrast to the small-world-after-all department, Navy Ensign George Lutsch Jr. and his bride, the former Miss Jeanette Elliott, can advance proof that it's a pretty big world when children grow up in the same two block neighborhood without ever meeting.

Ensign Lutsch lived with his family at 4742 Kewanee av., attended St. Constance High school, and as the war years advanced planned to enter the naval air corps. Jeanette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Elliott, 4757 Keystone av., lived two blocks away and attended Roosevelt High school. Not until 2½ years ago did they meet.

The couple was married recently and now lives in San Diego, Cal., where he is stationed at the naval air base as a pilot. He previously was at Norfolk, W. Va.

ERIE'S 75 YEARS AS CENTER WILL PASS IN REVIEW

Pageant Friday to Tell of Community Role

Seventy-five years of progress by an institution in a neighborhood where it has administered physical and recreational needs to more than a dozen nationalities is the story which will be reënacted Friday night in Erie Neighborhood house, 1347 Erie st.

In dramatic form the story of the settlement house since its founding in 1870 will be portrayed in 12 scenes by children who attended the house's activities. Parents [and, in several cases, grandparents] of many of the children have attended the house since grammar school days. The Rev. Douglas Cedarleaf, pastor of Erie Chapel Presbyterian church, will be the interlocutor.

A dinner, preceding the pageant, will be served by the Erie Neighborhood House women's board, of which Mrs. Stanley Pluta is president, and the senior guild directed by Mrs. John J. Vittacco. A demonstration of some of the 103 activities offered weekly by Erie will follow the pageant.

Dutch Church First Sponsor

The institution that is now Erie Neighborhood House was started as a branch of the Holland Presbyterian church in 1870 in a neighborhood predominant with Dutch immigrants. In 1882 it became the Noble Street mission of the Third Presbyterian church, located first at Erie and Noble sts., and later in a temperance hall at Ohio and Noble sts.

By 1886 the mission had become too small to accommodate the neighborhood, which by now had added Scandinavians and Germans to its population. That year a two room building was constructed on the present site of the house. For several years the Sunday school of Erie chapel had an enrollment of 1,500 children and was the largest in the city, Miss Florence H. Towne, head resident, said. Later, a third room was added.

As the racial character of the neighborhood changed, some of the Protestant churches moved to the vicinity of Humboldt park. Erie chapel remained.

On week days the Sunday school room became the center of neighborhood activity. It was used by mothers for club meetings, as a gameroom for children during the day, as a community center at night.

Long Hours of Worry

Miss Towne recalls, "We had few funds. When bills for telephone and coal couldn't be met, we stayed up until 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning trying to figure a way to pay them. We had many problems. Often we couldn't afford graham crackers and milk for the kindergarten children. Rats overran the place. The budget usually ran around $6,000 a year."

An energetic woman whose gray hair belies her youthful face, Miss Towne likes to compare those years at Erie with today. The staff now has 21 members. Contributions from individuals, churches, and charitable organizations last year totaled $34,000.

See Dreams Realized

In 1935 Erie's dream of a new building was realized thru the will of Hannah Templeton. The building that had served the neighborhood for 50 years was torn down. The settlement house was located temporarily in three empty store buildings. A year later the three story brick structure with its 25 rooms was completed.

Today more than 17,000 children of Armenian, Italian, Swedish, Norwegian, German, Dutch, Polish, Russian, Greek, Japanese, and Irish descent attend activities at Erie monthly.

URBAN LEAGUE'S W. AREA BOARD TO HEAR REPORT

The advisory board of the West Side Urban league will meet at 1 p. m. Wednesday in the league's office, 2200 Warren blvd., to hear a report on race relations in the area bounded by Chicago and North avs. and La Salle st. and Damen av.

William Brueckner, director of Emerson House and chairman of the committee investigating the area, will present the report. A discussion of race relations among children of school age by the Rev. Douglas Cedarleaf of Erie Neighborhood house also will be heard.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 5

It is not generally realized that roses can be planted successfully in autumn, and yet fall planting saves much time. It can be done while weather conditions are suitable.

In spring, continuous rains, such as were experienced this year, may prevent planting almost until hot weather arrives.

Never permit the root system to be exposed to the air for any extended period or the roots will dry out. Make the holes sufficiently large to accommodate the roots, spread them out, and plant slightly deeper than they were planted in the field.

Tuesday, Nov. 6

Bulb planting should be completed by this time. Protect with a layer of material to prevent heaving and injury in the spring. Pot up some paper white narcissi for Christmas flowers. This may be done as late as Nov. 14 if good conditions prevail, otherwise it may take a little longer. The yellow variety also is excellent.

Hardy chrysanthemum tops may be cut to within four inches off the ground, altho they may remain to help hold leaves, straw, or other protective material in place.

Wednesday, Nov. 7

Rake all leaves from rose beds, delphiniums, and peonies to remove any lurking disease that the leaves harbor.

Hardy ferns still can be planted and they are suitable for shady places. Lily of the valley and vinca minor also will do well in such a place.

Thursday, Nov. 8

Fall grown pansy plants that can be protected with boards and covered with a hotbed sash will bloom much earlier than when given no protection. Leaves may be placed among the plants under the sash for additional protection.

Hence, they should be planted as early as the ground can be worked. They revel in cool weather conditions. They flower longer when in partial shade.

Place wire netting around young fruit trees to keep the rabbits from injuring the tender bark. During periods of deep snow when food is scarce rabbits will eat anything, and it is extremely difficult to prevent injury.

Friday, Nov. 9

Protect the strawberry bed after the ground freezes slightly. The protecting material may consist of straw, peat moss, marsh hay, or anything that contains no weed seeds. Unless some protection is applied, the plants are likely to be heaved from the ground in spring.

Cut the lawn to about 3 inches, for if it grows any higher it may pack and kill patches which will need rejuvenation later on. A good lawn is one of the most effective features of any yard. Unless good soil conditions are provided it is difficult to obtain. The soil, therefore, must be given first consideration and the best time to prepare it is before the seed is sown.

Saturday, Nov. 10

Dormant cuttings of some shrubs, such as goldenbell and mock orange, will root in spring if they are buried in soil or sand and placed in a coldframe during winter.

Clean every section of the yard to remove any infested materials. Save the hardwood leaves for the compost heap and if one of the recommended materials is used decomposition will be hastened.

Water late planted stock and evergreens to prevent their entering winter in dry soil. See that all house plants are not injured by insects; keep the soil moist by daily attention.

Leyden Women

Mrs. C. F. Austin, war service chairman of the 7th district of Illinois clubs, will address the Leyden Woman's club at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday at 3019 N. Central av. Mrs. Frieda Seheibe will be in charge.

Benefit Party

A benefit party for Christmas charities will be given at 8:30 p. m. Friday by the Father O'Connor Ladies of Isabella council at the Wilson park fieldhouse.

APPARENTLY IT'S HERE TO STAY—WE MEAN RADIO

Broadcasting Completes First 25 Years

BY LARRY WOLTERS

It's just 25 years ago this week that radio had its opening night. Of course, sound was transmitted thru the air for many years prior to Nov. 2, 1920 [there were even several stations on the air more or less regularly with programs of entertainment then] but the transmission of the Harding-Cox election returns on that November night by station KDKA, Pittsburgh, is widely accepted as the start of modern broadcasting.

Prior to KDKA's pioneer broadcast Dr. Frank Conrad, an engineer of Westinghouse, which owned the station, had been putting records on the air by way of his own station house in his garage. It attracted so much attention that his associates talked him into expanding his activities on the company station.

Nation's Favorite Recreation

A month later the station was sending out programs regularly tho there were probably fewer than 5,000 receivers in the country. Now there are 60 million [or were before the war]. This week some 950 standard stations and 61 FM and television stations and the entire radio and broadcasting industry will be retelling the story of the first 25 years of radio.

What was in 1920 minuscule magic has become the favorite recreation of the nation, as well as an important medium of information and education. The average set is turned on some four hours a day.

In the beginning radio was mainly music and talk, and announcers were the first celebrities—Graham McNamee, Sen Kaney, and Quin Ryan among them. Novelty kept radio going for a year or two and then something had to be done about developing special programs. Now we've had more than two decades of imagination, ingenuity, imitation, and enormous expenditure going into radio. The result: 18 and more hours a day of jokes and jackpots, singing mice and commercials, advice and admonition, soap operas, and studio audiences, but also the finest in music and drama, news as it happens and the great variety shows that regularly command audiences each week of upwards of 40 million Americans.

Minstrel an Early Hit

Fifteen years ago the four figure per show era was ushered in. Today many top entertainers are in the five figure bracket and several variety shows cost around a million a year exclusive of air time. It wasn't that way in the beginning. Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, who were to become Sam and Henry on W-G-N and later Amos and Andy, literally sang for their supper for a Chicago hotel when they started out as radio minstrel men. When W-G-N introduced them as San and Henry two decades ago they caused a revolution by going on the air every week-day evening for 15 minutes with a continued story. They became the forerunners of the serial drama.

W-G-N blazed many a radio trail. Painted Dreams was one of the first, if not the very first, day time serial. In 1924 W-G-N was the first Chicago station to broadcast a political convention; it became the first station to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis auto races. It put in lines at Dayton, Tenn., to broadcast the Scopes evolution trial. Back in 1926 Floyd Gibbons, Chicago Tribune reporter, became perhaps the nation's first news commentator. In 1929 W-G-N outfitted Chicago police squad cars with receivers at a cost of $40,000, broadcast all police calls and proved the efficacy of radio in combatting crime.

Five years ago W-G-N introduced the Chicago Theater of the Air, one of radio's most elaborate and popular programs, with a cast of 100 playing to a studio audience of 4,500.

New Favorites Every Year

Every year of radio has brought its new favorites. Wendell Hall, Harry Horlick, Jones and Harry, Pick and Pat, Cheerio, Vincent Lopez are some of the earlier ones that come to mind.

A little later came Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Joe Penner, Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Jack Pearl, Doc Rockwell. The depression years [no depression for radio] saw Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, and Eddie Cantor start reaping their big harvest.

ALUMNAE OPEN CENTURY YEAR AT ST. XAVIER

Launch Celebration at Costume Tea

With the reception recently of the 1946 graduating class into the St. Xavier Academy Alumnae association, the academy launched a series of celebrations marking its 100th birthday.

Bishop Quarter, first Chicago prelate, in 1846 invited the Sisters of Mercy to found a Catholic girls' school. Sept. 23, 1846, five Sisters of Mercy, four of them under 21, and the superior, 24, arrived here, and on Oct. 12 opened the doors of a small frame building on Madison st. and Michigan av. to about 50 pupils. The building had been St. Mary's church, and had been moved from the south side of Lake st. near State st.

Nuns Made Equipment

The first folder on the new school read: "Select School for Young Ladies," and offered instruction in "reading, writing, arithmetic, composition, English grammar, geography, use of the globes, history, French, music, drawing, and plain and ornamental needle work."

Attendance was from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. with a generous interim of two hours for lunch.

The early students learned about the world from educational equipment made by the nuns. They fashioned the world globes by hand, drew the geography maps on parchment sent by the Mercy Sisters of Ireland, and equipped the classrooms with blackboards made of square pieces of timber. The school was chartered on Feb. 27, 1847, under the name of the Saint Francis Xavier Female Academy of Chicago, Illinois.

Establish College in 1915

In the same year the sisters moved into a new two story brick building next to Chicago's first cathedral. The academy was moved to the left of the cathedral at Madison st. and Wabash av., where it remained until destroyed by the fire in 1871.

The next site of the academy was at 29th st. and Wabash av., occupied from 1873 until September, 1901, when the present building at 4900 Cottage Grove av. was dedicated. In 1915 St. Xavier college was established.

From the 50 pupils who applied for admission in 1846, the enrollment has grown to about 800 students from first grade thru senior college class.

1896 Graduates Attend Tea

Sister Mary Paula, principal, said that daughters and granddaughters of some of the early students also have been graduates of the academy. In the present class, she said, there are six daughters of graduates: Barbara Beech, 5400 Ridgewood ct.; Jamie Fox, 5200 University av.; Lenoir Gary, 6817 Euclid av.; Becky Leech, 8210 Rhodes av.; Marjorie Pahls, 5429 East View pkwy., and Kathryn Whalen, 6520 University av.

Among the graduates of 1896 who attended the centennial tea recently were Mrs. Frank J. A. Wall, 7336 Clyde av.; Mrs. William J. Corbett, 1430 Lake Shore dr.; Miss Sara M. Maher, 6723 East End av., and Sister Mary Angele, who now is professor of philosophy and psychology at the college. Sister Mary Evangelist, who taught the gradutes of 50 years ago, also attended the reunion. She is now receptionist at the provincial house, 620 Belmont av.

SURVEY JUNIOR COLLEGE NEED IN BLUE ISLAND

Possibility of a junior college in Blue Island, with courses to begin in about two months, was revealed when Maj. Harold L. Richards, superintendent of Community High school, announced he had been authorized by the board to make a survey of the district to determine the need for such a college.

If the need is indicated in the survey which he is now conducting, Maj. Richards said the courses will be taught in late afternoon and evenings in the high school. In the event need for a full junior college curriculum is not indicated, he said, only those courses demanded will be offered.

Richards also disclosed the board is discussing plans to build a unit to the high school on the athletic field at Sacramento av. and 127th st. to house manual training classes. The courses, he said, would be planned to aid returning veterans. Altho no estimate of the cost has been made or a date set for presenting the proposal to the voters, he said he hoped the unit would be constructed within a year.

LEGION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS IN 3D DISTRICT

Frank E. Cull, 8234 Ingleside av., has been elected commander of the 3d district council of the American Legion. Others chosen are Leo N. McGlinn, 8532 Blackstone av., and Lowell E. Roberts, 8147 Evans av., vice commanders; John J. Hayes, 10522 Avenue F, and John I. Smith, 8418 Ingleside av., adjutants; W. Ray Cosbey, 6945 Dante av., finance officer; Arthur Lehmann, 7234 Merrill av., chaplain; John F. O'Brien, 7829 Vernon av., judge advocate; Dr. Matthew E. Creighton, 8045 Paxton av., medical officer; Charles E. Farrell, 6420 Ingleside av., and Warren Roush, 8404 Vernon av., sergeants at arms.

Youth Sheds Sophistication as Moon Pours Its Light Upon Merry Hay Rack Party

That youngsters are not too sophisticated to enjoy the wholesome pleasure of their parents was proven by the old fashioned hay rack party and barn dance given recently by Morgan Park Junior college at Walter's barn in Palos Park. More than three-quarters of the shool enthusiastically turned out dressed in jeans and too big sweaters or long tailed shirts. The crowd was so large that half went hay riding while the others stayed behind to dance in the loft of the big red shingle barn. Music was provided by an accordionist. An ever present juke box brought youngsters from the past to the present for jitterbugging between dances.

Many youngsters never had square danced before, but all caught on quickly. One of the favorites was the Virginia reel. Every one semed to enjoy it just as much (from left) as Galen Everett, 1713 W. 102d st.; Dale Magnuson, 4641½ Lake Park av.; Barbara Fink, 1248 W. 103d st., and Alice Brownlow, 10421 Christiana av.

Chaperons insist they had as good a time as the youngsters for they took part in the dances as well as kept the party running smooth. Taking time to eat refreshments that included cider and man sized ham or cheese sandwiches were (from left) Col. Sanford Sellers, new superintendent of the junior college and Morgan Park Military academy; Mrs. Katherine Parks, college registrant; Mrs. Chrissie Newman, director of student activities; Dean Albert C. Dodd, and Mrs. Sellers.

Just as they do at regular dances, couples decide occasionally to sit this one out. The moonlit night was warm and hazy, and couples filled the small stoop-like porches outside the loft, or sat on the stairs leading to the ground. If brave, they perched on the porch railing like Mr. and Mrs. John Ruzic, 1042A W. 87th st.

Coming down the hay loft stairs for their turn on the hay rack were (left to right) Samuel Walling, 9821 Hamilton av.; Dorothea Johnson, 8046 Eberhart av.; Jean Morrow, 7108 Normal av., and Roland Olson, 7727 Evans av. Horses pulling the racks were garnished with sleigh bells that could be heard a long way in accompaniment with the singing of the youngsters.

Barn dancing and hay rack riding make youngsters hungry, but there were ample refreshments for all. Helping make sure there would be no leftovers to cart home were (left to right) Warren Babbitt, 12001 Gregory av., Blue Island, Ill.; Barbie Hamel, 7729 Sangamon av.; Audrey Hollander, 7946 Crandon av., and Fred Hagreen, 8409 Euclid av.

WATCH WOODEN PULLMAN CARS TURN TO STEEL

Service Records of 2 Total 111 Years

Two men who watched the advancement of railroad car building from wooden coaches to the all-steel streamlined productions of today recently retired from the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing company with a combined total of 111 years and 3 months of service.

They are Matthew P. Howles, 10113 State st., with 56 years and 2 months of service, and Harry Groustra, 23 W. 119th st., with 55 years and 1 month. Both were employes of the accounting department.

Receive Medallions, Gifts

The men were honored recently at a testimonial dinner given by their fellow workers. Gold medallions inscribed with their names and employment records were presented them. Howles also received a watch, and Groustra, who was a key member of the war bond section of the accounting department, received bonds. They also will be guests Nov. 16 at the Pullman 20 year service club meeting.

Howles started with the company in the storeroom and worked thru the ranks as office boy, helper, and clerk to the accounting department, where he has been chief timekeeper since 1918.

Second Generation at Plant

Groustra started in the glass department, advancing thru office boy, clerk, and leader in the shop before going to the accounting department.

Groustra is the second generation from his family to work for the company. His father, Peter Groustra, helped build the plant and later became a car builder, retiring on a pension in 1916. Groustra has two brothers, Eddie and Cornelius, also working for the company.

LIKE LITTLE TOY DOG CHRISTMAS TREE WAITS AND–

Mother Awaits Son's Trip Home

A two foot Christmas tree, complete with the candles that decorated his first Christmas tree 23 years ago, is on its way to Edward O. Kreutz Jr., pharmacist's mate 2d class, now stationed on Kyushu, Japan.

A larger model, put up last Christmas, still keeps a hopeful vigil in the bay window of his home at 6130 Carpenter st., in case he, or his brother-in-law, Martin A. Griffin, pharmacist's mate 2d class, should get a furlough soon.

Tree Droops Slightly

The tree at home is a little wilted, and now and then an ornament slips off the drooping branches, but the manger and the electric train and worn old teddy bear Kreutz had as a boy look the same as they did when they were placed beneath the tree on Christmas eve in 1944.

His mother said that Edward has had a tree every year of his life, including the three Christmases he's been in service. She kept the 1943 Christmas tree up until he came home in June, 1944. He was on Saipan last year when his tree arrived.

Nail Polish Adds Color

The tree that is on its way to him now is an artificial green one, decorated with colored macaroni, tinsel, and Christmas seals, and two silver stars on the top. The red fingernail polish on the candles was put there by his sister, Mrs. Marifrances Griffin, to simulate flame.

The decorating finished, Mrs. Kreutz folded the branches and packed the tree carefully in tissue paper in an overseas box. It was the request of her son that she send him the tree, she said.

Edward is a graduate of Englewood High school, and attended Wilson Junior college, and has been in service 28 months.

S. SIDE'S WATER MADE 99.9 PCT. BACTERIA FREE

79th St. Filter Plant Cuts Impurities

Altho only two of the three processes that eventually will be employed at the city's 24 million dollar filtration plant at 79th st. and the lake are in operation at present, impurities formerly found in south side water have been virtually eliminated, John R. Baylis, city water purification engineer, has reported to Public Works Commissioner Hewitt.

The two processes now in use are sedimentation and coagulation, which it was estimated would remove 70 per cent of the impurities formerly found in the water. Tests made in the city laboratory show that at least 88 per cent of the former objectionable qualities of the water are gone and 99.9 per cent of coliform bacteria.

Further Improvement Due

The third process, the actual filtration of the water, will not be started for at least another year because the scarcity of both labor and material has delayed construction. The addition of this will make south side water as clear and sparkling as that sold in bottles in the city's drug stores, Hewitt said.

A table compiled by Baylis showed that during the week of Oct. 14 to Oct. 20, coliform bacteria found in samples of raw water taken from the lake near the Dunne and 68th st. cribs averaged 316 per 100 cubic centimeters of liquid. After treatment at the plant water tested showed no trace of the impurity except on one day and then 0.4 per 100 cubic centimeters was found.

In other tests all other forms of bacteria were found to be reduced from an average of 399 per cubic centimeter in raw water to 1.6 in treated water. Algae and microscopic organisms were reduced from an average of 1,617 per cubic centimeter of raw water to 194 in treated water and an 88 per cent decrease in water turbidity was noted.

The week in which the tests were made was actually only the second week of continuous operation of the plant altho it was dedicated by Mayor Kelly on Sept. 20 in an impressive ceremony that had been long awaited by south side and south suburban residents. The plant services 115 square miles in the city and suburbs south of 39th st.

Construction work on the huge plant was started in October, 1938, and it was scheduled for completion early in 1942. Work was held up because of the lack of priorities. Numerous trips to Washington were made by both the mayor and Hewitt to warn federal officials of the danger to Chicago's south side water supply because of the proximity of northern Indiana towns and industries which dump live sewage into the lake. As a result of the warnings, priorities finally were granted.

Young Artist Has Park Show

Arlene Sherlock, 11, whose paintings will be exhibited this week at Chicago Lawn library, 6234 S. Kedzie av., has painted more than 50 pictures in her 3½ year career as an artist. Her paintings range in size from a 6x12 inch oil of a Scotty, to the 35x42 inch winter scene of Marquette park, her favorite picture, which she holds. Her only teacher is Mrs. Hazel Bruhn, who lives next door at 5532 Homan av.

S. W. COMMUNITY TELLS PROGRESS ON PLAYGROUND

Complete Basement of Fieldhouse

Completion of the basement and laying of the first floor of the brick shelter house for Chicago Heights' unnamed playground at 16th and Arnold sts., was announced recently by Arthur Bonvouloir, president of the park board. The building will be ready for use in the spring, he said.

The building will be a one story lodge type house similar to the fieldhouse on Euclid playground, measuring 45 by 22 feet, Bonvouloir said. It will have a large playroom, an attendant's room, and a fireplace. Cost is estimated at $7,800.

The park site, which was acquired several years ago, already has been laid out with two ball diamonds, tennis and badminton courts, and a section for swings and slides.

"We hope the new playground will relieve some of the crowded conditions at other parks," Bonvouloir said.

Public dedication ceremonies will take place when the building is completed. The park will be named at that time, he said.

SAY HIGH MASS FOR WAR DEAD NEXT SUNDAY

A high mass will be offered at 8 a. m. next Sunday at the Blessed Agnes of Bohemia church, Central Park av. and 27th st., in memory of the 26 members of the parish Holy Name society chapter who died in World War II.

Society members will assemble in Blessed Agnes hall at 7:45 a. m. to march in procession to the church, led by the Boy Scouts, gold star families, service men, and discharged veterans. A total of 550 members entered service.

The mass will be offered by the Rev. Martin A. Krizka, pastor, assisted by the Rev. George W. Krippner as deacon, and the Rev. Richard J. Tlapa, subdeacon. The Gregorian "Mass of the Angels" will be sung by the parish St. Cecelia choir, directed by Sister M. Majella.

Outdoor Club

The Englewood Outdoor club will hold its monthly business meeting at 8:15 p. m. Friday at the Ogden park fieldhouse, 65th st. and Racine av.

ARTIST, 11, GIVES EXHIBIT OF 50 OF HER FINEST

Arlene Sherlock, 11 year old artist, who recently held the first exhibition of her paintings in her home, 5534 Homan av., will hold a second exhibition this week at Chicago Lawn library, 6234 S. Kedzie av. The exhibit will include most of the 50 pictures she has painted in her three and a half year career as an artist.

A seventh grade pupil at Tonti school, 58th st. and Homan av., Arlene began her artistic efforts in earnest at the age of 7½, when she joined a hobby class at the home of her neighbor, Mrs. Hazel Bruhn, 5532 Homan av., and took her first art lesson. Mrs. Bruhn has been her only art teacher.

Likes Works in Oils

Since that time Arlene has painted with chalk, water color, and oil. The latter is her favorite because of the extensive color possibilities. Her paintings range in size from a 6 by 12 inch oil of a Scotty, to a 36 by 42 inch winter scene.

Items in the home exhibit were her first completed chalk painting, of bananas and apples, and her first oil, a still life of wild roses. Also displayed prominently was her own favorite painting, a scene in Marquette park, where she frequently goes to sketch. She prefers this painting to the others because she says, "it is all her own," with no corrections or suggestions from others.

Bill Likes Bombers

Bill, her younger brother, disagrees with her choice, favoring a painting of a B-17 flying over water. Arlene says she painted it as a memorial to her uncle, Lt. Richard Kerston of Berwyn, who failed to return from his sixth mission over Germany in December, 1943.

Arlene has three hobbies, painting, playing the piano, and riding. The latter two, she admits, suffer because of her painting.

What career she wishes to follow in the future is far from clear in Arlene's mind. She leans heavily toward commercial art, but thinks she would like to go into dress designing.

BONDS OR BALONEY

It's bonded whiskey we're selling—not baloney. We've been one of the few stores in Chicago able to offer bonded whiskey to our customers consistently and we intend to continue to do so. But — and this is no baloney — we must have your help in maintaining a balanced inventory.

Next time you buy your favorite bond at L-N pick up a bottle or so of the other fine merchandise we carry. It won't be difficult because L-N prices on wines, rums, liquors, etc. are often at cost or below just as many of our listings in today's ad.

APPARENTLY IT'S HERE TO STAY—WE MEAN RADIO

BY LARRY WOLTERS

It's just 25 years ago this week that radio had its opening night. Of course, sound was transmitted thru the air for many years prior to Nov. 2, 1920 [there were even several stations on the air more or less regularly with programs of entertainment then] but the transmission of the Harding-Cox election returns on that November night by station KDKA, Pittsburgh, is widely accepted as the start of modern broadcasting.

Prior to KDKA's pioneer broadcast Dr. Frank Conrad, an engineer of Westinghouse, which owned the station, had been putting records on the air by way of his own station house in his garage. It attracted so much attention that his associates talked him into expanding his activities on the company station.

Nation's Favorite Recreation

A month later the station was sending out programs regularly tho there were probably fewer than 5,000 receivers in the country. Now there are 60 million [or were before the war]. This week some 950 standard stations and 61 FM and television stations and the entire radio and broadcasting industry will be retelling the story of the first 25 years of radio.

What was in 1920 minuscule magic has become the favorite recreation of the nation, as well as an important medium of information and education. The average set is turned on some four hours a day.

In the beginning radio was mainly music and talk, and announcers were the first celebrities—Graham McNamee, Sen Kaney, and Quin Ryan among them. Novelty kept radio going for a year or two and then something had to be done about developing special programs. Now we've had more than two decades of imagination, ingenuity, imitation, and enormous expenditure going into radio. The result: 18 and more hours a day of jokes and jackpots, singing mice and commercials, advice and admonition, soap operas, and studio audiences, but also the finest in music and drama, news as it happens and the great variety shows that regularly command audiences each week of upwards of 40 million Americans.

Minstrel an Early Hit

Fifteen years ago the four figure per show era was ushered in. Today many top entertainers are in the five figure bracket and several variety shows cost around a million a year exclusive of air time. It wasn't that way in the beginning. Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden, who were to become Sam and Henry on W-G-N and later Amos and Andy, literally sang for their supper for a Chicago hotel when they started out as radio minstrel men. When W-G-N introduced them as San and Henry two decades ago they caused a revolution by going on the air every week-day evening for 15 minutes with a continued story. They became the forerunners of the serial drama. And they were the first to learn what an enormous consumer of material radio could be.

W-G-N blazed many a radio trail. Painted Dreams was one of the first, if not the very first, day time serial. In 1924 W-G-N was the first Chicago station to broadcast a political convention; it became the first station to broadcast the Kentucky Derby and the Indianapolis auto races. It put in lines at Dayton, Tenn., to broadcast the Scopes evolution trial. Back in 1926 Floyd Gibbons, Chicago Tribune reporter, became perhaps the nation's first news commentator. In 1929 W-G-N outfitted Chicago police squad cars with receivers at a cost of $40,000, broadcast all police calls and proved the efficacy of radio in combatting crime. Soon the Chicago police department and those of other cities adopted radio.

Five years ago W-G-N introduced the Chicago Theater of the Air, one of radio's most elaborate and popular programs, with a cast of 100 playing to a studio audience of 4,500.

New Favorites Every Year

Every year of radio has brought its new favorites. Wendell Hall, Harry Horlick, Jones and Harry, Pick and Pat, Cheerio, Vincent Lopez are some of the earlier ones that come to mind.

A little later came Rudy Vallee, Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Joe Penner, Kate Smith, Bing Crosby, Jack Pearl, Doc Rockwell. The depression years [no depression for radio] saw Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Ed Wynn, Burns and Allen, and Eddie Cantor start reaping their big harvest.

JEANETTE M'DONALD IS SUNDAY EVENING HOUR GUEST SOLOIST

Jeanette MacDonald will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Miss MacDonald's offerings will include the "Waltz Song" from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet," the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream," and Friml's "Indian Love Call."

Karl Krueger will direct the orchestra in the "Polovetsian Dance" from Borodin's "Prine Igor" and the Irish melody, "Londonderry Air." Miss MacDonald, the chorus, and audience will join the orchestra in Giardini's hymn, "Come Thou Almighty King."

'TOSCA' IS NEXT OPERA ON W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Puccini's opera "La Tosca," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday with Marion Claire singing the title role. Richard Tucker will sing Cavaradossi, and Bruce Foote, Scarpia.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Henry Weber will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The opera will be presented in English. Jack LaFrandre is the producer.

HAY SCENT RISES THRU MOONLIGHT SPUN BY FAIRIES

Youth Dreams and Lives in Magic Amalgam

BY JANET PECK

The night was perfect for a hay ride. So mild and moonlit was the world it seemed touched with an indefinable something that was almost fey. Even the horses, to which hayrack parties are routine stuff, seemed to feel the enchantment as they pricked their ears at the laughing youngsters, and stomped their feet, impatient to be off.

The occasion was an old fashioned hay ride and barn dance, sponsored by Morgan Park Junior college, at Walter's barn in Palos Park. The youngsters turned out in enthusiastic droves, and tho it usually takes more than Mother Nature to awe Joe College, even they seemed under her mystic spell. Perhaps it was the haze, or the bright full moon or the lush aroma of hay.

The Sophisticate Vanishes

In any event, there was something that seemed to reach thru that youthful veneer of pseudo-sophistication, releasing that capacity for wholesome enjoyment of simpler pleasures that supposedly passed out as the machine age came in.

Scene of the party was a spacious barnyard and a red shingle barn, the loft of which had been made suitable for dancing. Four or five dogs wandered amiably about, eager to be friendly with every one, particularly if they were eating. Refreshments were apple cider and man sized ham or cheese sandwiches with plenty of relish.

Jeans and Slacks

Traditional garb for youngsters on such a night is baggy jeans and loose fitting sweaters, or long tailed shirts. In some instances, where boy and girl were "going" together, they wore identical slacks and wool plaid shirts. Some of the girls wore pigtails.

Once on its way, the party divided. Half went riding, amid much horseplay, giggling, and singing, while the others animatedly conversed in groups, or grabbed their partners for square dancing. Handclapping, foot stomping Claud [Pappy] Cheshire was caller, and under his guidance noses grew shiny and faces flushed as they whirled around the floor.

Dance Calling Is Work

At the end of the dance he pulled out a large red bandanna, mopped his brow, and mumbled something about being tuckered out. The youngsters, however, promptly plugged in the juke box for a little restful jitterbugging. Some of the girls came stag, and boys milled around changing partners. One group of girls, with boy friends in service, dropped in a corner and made lonely overtures to the friendly dogs.

Somewhere in the middle of the party the first group of riders returned, and another group clambered aboard and gayly left the barnyard. Brushing straw from their clothes, they went upstairs for their share of barn dancing, eating, and jitterbugging. The party ended about midnight, by which time not only was the caller near collapse, but the chaperons, the dancers, and the horses.

Only the dogs wagged their tails until the last car left, as energetic at the end as they had been when they first barked friendly greeting.

How to Make Large Expenditures Seem Small

Insurance premiums, interest on a mortgage and other sizable payments are often difficult to meet on the due dates—unless you prepare for them in advance. By depositing small sums regularly in a savings account you may be surprised to find how much easier it is to take care of these obligations.

KIWANIS CLUBS TO HEAR TALK BY GEN. EAKER

Fete to Mark Englewood Group's 25th Year

Lt. Gen. Eaker, deputy commander of air forces, will speak at the 25th anniversary dinner of the Kiwanis club of Englewood in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House Nov. 14, J. L. Showel, president, has announced.

O. E. Peterson, secretary of Kiwanis International; J. Walter Foraker of Harvey, district governor, and Charles L. Leindecker, lieutenant governor of division IV., also will participate, Showel said.

8 Founders to Attend

Special guests will be eight charter members, still active in the organization, who helped found the club on Nov. 18, 1920. They are K. Ray Ballantine, Walter W. Morris, Erwin T. Penhallegon, Fred C. Rathje, Wendell K. Holmes, John S. Reiner, William H. McDonnell, and Charles T. Thayer. The anniversary dinner is in charge of Raymond S. Blunt, Harry S. Himmel, Willis Tower, and Harold C. Erickson.

There will be a 100 page, silver covered program containing the history of the club's activities.

Two Get Out Program

The program was prepared under direction of Frank C. Jaske, vice president, with the material compiled by Tower, retired principal of Englewood High school and president of Englewood Historical society, who is club historian.

The anniversary celebration also will serve as the fall social activity of all Kiwanis clubs of division IV. These include Hyde Park, Southwest, Archer Road, Woodlawn-South Shore, Roseland, South Chicago, South Central, and Stock Yards Central Manufacturing.

Palos Heights to Have Garden Honoring Vets

Plowing and grading in preparation for the planting of a garden memorial in Palos Heights to the veterans of World War I. and II. will begin this week on the community owned lots at 126th st. and Harlem av. Harold W. Thune, chairman of the memorial committee, has announced.

The planting of trees and shrubs will be done by members of the Palos Heights Community club, winner of the recent Victory Garden roundup sponsored by the Chicago Horticultural society, as soon as the plowing is finished, he said. The planting is the first step in making the three acre Harlem av. site a community park with fieldhouse, tennis courts, and baseball diamond.

Besides shrubs and trees planted at the edge of the park, landscape plans call for petunias, the community flower, to border a walk winding thru the park. The tennis courts and baseball diamond are expected to be completed within a year.

Assisting Thune on the park committee of the community club are Mrs. Frank Barta, Mark Garritson, George Adams, Walter Ward, Harlow West, Mrs. Virginia Blake, Mrs. Min Eckstrom, Mrs. Dorothy Hamilton, H. W. Brown, Mrs. Maxine Whyte, Mrs. Dorothy Anderson, Mrs. Dorothy Rowley, James Stewart, the Rev. Ross Sweeney, and Albert Edgar.

Among the organizations represented are the woman's club, library, canteen, Brownies, Cub, Boy and Girl Scouts, Palos Heights PTA, the fire department, and Methodist and Lutheran churches.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 5

It is not generally realized that roses can be planted successfully in autumn, and yet fall planting saves much time. It can be done while weather conditions are suitable.

In spring, continuous rains, such as were experienced this year, may prevent planting almost until hot weather arrives.

Tuesday, Nov. 6

Bulb planting should be completed by this time. Protect with a layer of material to prevent heaving and injury in the spring. Pot up some paper white narcissi for Christmas flowers. This may be done as late as Nov. 14 if good conditions prevail, otherwise it may take a little longer. The yellow variety also is excellent.

Hardy chrysanthemum tops may be cut to within four inches off the ground, altho they may remain to help hold leaves, straw, or other protective material in place.

Wednesday, Nov. 7

Rake all leaves from rose beds, delphiniums, and peonies to remove any lurking disease that the leaves harbor.

Hardy ferns still can be planted and they are suitable for shady places. Lily of the valley and vinca minor also will do well in such a place.

Thursday, Nov. 8

Fall grown pansy plants that can be protected with boards and covered with a hotbed sash will bloom much earlier than when given no protection. Leaves may be placed among the plants under the sash for additional protection.

Hence, they should be planted as early as the ground can be worked. They revel in cool weather conditions. They flower longer when in partial shade.

Friday, Nov. 9

Protect the strawberry bed after the ground freezes slightly. The protecting material may consist of straw, peat moss, marsh hay, or anything that contains no weed seeds. Unless some protection is applied, the plants are likely to be heaved from the ground in spring.

Cut the lawn to about 3 inches, for if it grows any higher it may pack and kill patches which will need rejuvenation later on. A good lawn is one of the most effective features of any yard. Unless good soil conditions are provided it is difficult to obtain. The soil, therefore, must be given first consideration and the best time to prepare it is before the seed is sown.

Saturday, Nov. 10

Dormant cuttings of some shrubs, such as goldenbell and mock orange, will root in spring if they are buried in soil or sand and placed in a coldframe during winter.

Clean every section of the yard to remove any infested materials. Save the hardwood leaves for the compost heap and if one of the recommended materials is used decomposition will be hastened.

Hold Armistice Service Today in Drexel Park

An Armistice day service will be held at Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th st. and Marshfield av., at 8 p. m. today, the pastor, the Rev. Clinton C. Cox, has announced. The service is sponsored by Three Links American Legion post and auxiliary.

'Winter's Tale' Called Shakespeare's 'Weak Sister'

But Don't Miss Final Scene, Critic Warns

By Claudia Cassidy

After the Blackstone opening of "The Winter's Tale," two evening newspapers remarked cosily that it had warmed their critics. I think it is fair to say that Ashton Stevens was lukewarmed, while Robert J. Casey was hot. Now my own basking at the Shakespearean hearth was somewhere in between, say a pleasant glow due in part to the fact that it was better to have seen and sighed than never to have seen at all. I did not, like Mr. Stevens, think the first 16 years were the hardest, due in part, no doubt, to having trained on two performances of "Parsifal," nor did I, like Mr. Casey, think Shakespeare made sense at last. I have thought for some time that Shakespeare made sense, tho rarely of late such headily brilliant sense, say, as Maurice Evans' King Richard II. or Judith Anderson's Lady Macbeth.

As to "The Winter Tale" being better done than usual, count me out. I never saw it before in my life, and privately suspect the Guild of choosing it to thwart odious reviewers given when possible to derogatory comparison. Charles Collins tells me it last was played in the downtown area in May of 1910, by the visiting New Theater company at what we now call the Great Northern. It may have been a special matinee, and the cast held Henry Kolker as Leontes, Edith Wynne-Matthison as Hermione, Rose Coghlan as Paulina, Albert Bruning as Autolycus, Henry Stanford as Florizel, and Leah Bateman Hunter as Perdita. Ferdinand Gottschalk also was on hand.

At any rate, "The Winter's Tale" comes under the head of occasional production, for it is a weak sister among Shakespeare's plays. The Guild has wrought no miracle in its staging, and a good deal of the result is static, but it certainly fills the eyes if not invariably the ears, and I wish the opera would take a leaf from its handling of many scenes in swift ballet style. Stewart Chaney's brilliant production runs like silk in a fixed proscenium arch with suavely shifted scenes carried by backdrops and curtains. True, actors aren't ballet dancers for looks, and not all the costumes are done physical justice. But take a look at Florence Reed, as handsome as she is authoritative as Paulina—ah, what wimples do for women!—and under no circumstances let an early train make you miss the final scene where Jessie Royce Landis' Hermione, transfixed in that curving niche, suggests equal parts of Lady Diana Manners in "The Miracle" and Poe's glowing apostrophe to Helen.

In fact, as I said before, I didn't think the first 16 years were the hardest, that being the period before rustic revelry. Like the little prince so beguilingly played by Maurice Cavell I must think "a sad tale's best for winter." For 30 years from now when the next production of "The Winter's Tale" comes along, I may smile a bit over memories of its clowning, but I will have to admit what warmed this critic back in 1945 was the sight of this gayly caparisoned "gallimaufry of gambols" and the sight and sound of its occasional flights into the royal realm of dramatic poetry, the times when Shakespeare makes not only sense, but song.

COMING NOV. 19

Speaking of last week's other opening, or rather re-opening, several people have telephoned to ask if by saying it had been vulgarized I meant "The Student Prince" is indecent. No, I meant vulgarized, reduced in quality to a boorish level. There is no reason, save lack of taste, why this 20 year old favorite should not be a highlight of each season. Audiences love it for its sentimental story and its lush Romberg score. Call that story corny if you like, but it stands up pretty well in operetta competition. Call that music derivative if you like, but it also can be a pleasure to the ear. The whole show blooms under gracious treatment, but it has slipped deeper and deeper into a rut of undisciplined routine until now nothing short of theatrical dynamite will blast it out. True, it is a Shubert gold mine the way it stands, but if it were carefully restored to its original charm, as we hope "Show Boat" is being restored for New York's New Year, it might easily take first place in the musical hit parade.

Just as I was wondering how to end the column, Philip Maxwell walked in and told this story: An actor wearing a flowing coat with big pockets haunted a theatrical booking agency until finally the manager reluctantly consented to see him. The actor explained he had the greatest act in captivity, a dog act, plus. The agent retorted that dog acts were a dime a dozen and out of fashion, anyway. "But," the actor protested, "my dog plays the piano." "Ridiculous," pooh-poohed the agent, whereupon the actor drew a little dog from his left pocket. The dog ran to the piano, leaped up on the piano stool and played Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C sharp minor, with feeling.

The agent tried not to tremble. "I'll give you $1,000 a week," he gasped. "No," said the actor. "Two thousand a week!" "No," said the actor, impatiently, "you haven't seen the whole act yet." He reached in his right pocket and pulled out a parrot. "The parrot sings," he explained, "accompanied by the dog." The agent was beside himself. "No foolishness," he screamed, "I take the dog." But the actor put the parrot on the piano where it sang "Caro Nome" with all the frills while the dog obliged at the piano.

The agent, almost in a faint, managed to make it known that his offer was now $3,000 a week. But the actor shook his head sadly and put the animals back in his pocket. "I'm sorry," he said, tears welling in his eyes, "I'm sorry but I can't take your money. I haven't been honest with you." He started out the door, turning to say, "You see, it's all a lie. That parrot can't sing a note. The dog's a ventriloquist."

When last seen, Mr. Maxwell was looking for the dog, to sign it up for the 1946 Chicagoland Music Festival.

Bruno Walter—and a Plea for a Chicago Arts Center

"THE roots," said Bruno Walter, "should be more splendid than the foliage." It was a paraphrase of Hofmannstahl, and Walter's reply to my question as to what we can do to get better music. Few answers could have been more graphically to the point. Close your eyes, think it over, and what do you see? A great, sprawling tree of music spreads over the land, many of its hungry roots choked on the surface of barren soil. Where those roots thrust deep and strong there is a crown of leaves we call laurel, woven of the great names of music, not necessarily the names of spectacular performers, but those of artists not yet retired who hold tradition as a living, guiding force between generation and generation. Check them off in your own, choice — Walter, Toscanini, Koussevitzky, Monteux, Schnabel, Lehmann—any one you believe belongs. None of them is young, and without them, where are we? Sooner or later each generation's crown of music is lifted into the evergreen of memories. Nothing we can do will stop that immutable law. But roots are another matter. If we make them splendid now, generations to come will be blessed with living laurel.

How do we go about it? Well, how do you encourage any roots? You cultivate the land. And Mr. Walter's ideas on the subject are no different from those of any thinking musician, tho perhaps they are more articulate. "Talent," he says, "is the one real power. We must discover it, foster it, give it every opportunity to flourish." He says America is alive with talent, particularly with wonderful, God-given voices. He wants to help them. But don't mistake that desire for any leaping on the gaudy bandwagon that rides unprepared young singers recklessly into major roles on major stages. Of that headlong ballyhoo he says succinctly, "You break their necks." He would have tributary training theaters of the type Edward Johnson calls bush league opera houses, and he would have that training subsidized by the government, tho here he hastily interpolates, "I will not be an American citizen for six months. Until then I must not presume to make suggestions." That subsidy would be no WPA project, no charity, but a birthright. "No one could have told me as a boy," he says, "that I must be a carpenter. I would have said, 'No! Music is for me.' That choice must be made possible to every young talent. Such freedom of choice is the only true democracy."

Bruno Walter

Auditorium Fertile Spot to Plant Roots

Well, it doesn't take even that much to set me off on one of my favorite subjects, so here we go again. Remember that last week Sergei Denham was hinting at a Chicago academy of the dance, stemming from the best Russian tradition? Remember that the Ballet Russe he represents now has its New York home in the subsidized City Center? Remember that Mayor Kelly has said eventually he would like to reconvert our Auditorium into such a center, and that Eddie Dowling has his eye on a resident theater there? Then why not take a bold step? Why not turn that Auditorium, with its superb acoustics, its traditions, its studios, and its residential accommodations, into a center of the arts where music and theater and their operatic and balletic satellites thrust healthy roots into receptive soil. Perhaps some of those roots might find their way across Michigan blvd. to join the Art institute's in matters of theater design.

Such a project, brilliantly executed and soundly sustained, could turn from a musical mirage to that richest of gifts to talent, a chance to develop under ideal conditions. After generations of prodigal waste of vast national resources we have come to conservation in many fields, so why not in talent, too? It could pay incalculable dividends. And while it would not be easy to find the right directors for such a dream come true, they could be found. Two years ago I asked Bruno Walter if he would be willing to take charge of a huge festival project and he protested he was too old. "But," he promised, "whatever is good for music, I will be its friend." He will stick to that promise.

A Quarantine for Collaborationists

Mr. Walter's conversation has a way of sending you off on detours to the musical moon, so it won't surprise him or, I hope, you to discover that he hasn't gone away from our story. We were talking about the accusation of collaboration so terrifyingly hurled at so many European musicians and I asked him what he thinks of barring them from international music. His reply was typical. Not for us, but for those who suffered so deeply from such collaboration [and he includes himself with us, for all his exile, saying, "They did not hurt me, not in music"], he believes in a time of quarantine. The true, proved collaborationist who aided the nazi cause with his art should, Mr. Walter believes, be barred. He himself could not work with such a one. But the artist who acquiesced from weakness, to protect himself or his family, even to live? Of him he says compassionately, "Who is a hero before a machine gun?" He states two specific cases. He says quietly as one states an uncontrovertible fact, "Furtwängler is no Nazi." And while he once refused to appear in concert with Wilhelm Backhaus, who had been photographed with Hitler, they again were friends when the pianist saw deeper into and repudiated the nazi regime.

Of the recent invitation [addressed with such faith to Bruno Walter, Paris, France] to return to his once beloved Vienna Philharmonic he says, "I must wait. I have written saying I am deeply touched, but I must wait. We do not yet know what Vienna will be. We do not know what it is. But I," and what a world of remembered affection lies in those words, "I know what it was."

Speaking of those happy days and of the rich years in Berlin after the first World war and before Hitler, he says it was to him and his friends in creative arts a kind of Periclean age in which they had high hope. "But take note," he says gravely, "how thru German folk and fairy tale lore there runs the story of the pact with the devil. Germany made a pact with the devil. Hitler was a true emissary of hell. Did you ever hear him speak, in that ranting, hysterical screech that could emanate only from evil? Because of him Germany committed suicide. She made a pact with the devil, and we cannot yet say that the devil has lost."

'Aida' Is Also on Opera List for This Week

By Albert Goldberg

The operatic connoisseur doubtless will find the choicest morsel of the present season to be the revival of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" under Bruno Walter's direction, scheduled for Saturday night, with a repetition at the Saturday matinee of Nov. 17. The week's second addition to the repertory will be "Aida" at the Saturday matinee, introducing a new soprano, Gertrude Ribla, in place of Zinka Milanov, whose continuing illness will keep her out of opera casts for the remainder of the Chicago season. Miss Ribla is a pupil of the former Metropolitan soprano, Frances Alda, and has sung at the National theater in Havana, in Canada, with the Philadelphia La Scala company, and with the Cincinnati opera under Fausto Cleva's direction.

"The Marriage of Figaro," tho one of the most widely known titles in the operatic category, is one of the most infrequently performed of all the great masterpieces of musical drama. In the long history of the Chicago Opera company only five previous performances were given. The first of these was in 1911, the second year of the resident group's organization, and was conducted by Cleofonte Campanini with a cast consisting of Alice Zeppilli, Carolina White, Maggie Teyte [the Chicago debut of a singer who will return after many years for an Orchestra hall recital on Jan. 4], Gustave Huberdeau, and Mario Sammarco.

After one repetition that season the work was absent from the repertory until 1929, when it was revived with Edith Mason, Eva Turner, Marion Claire, Richard Bonelli, and Virgilio Lazzari, under Roberto Moranzoni's direction. Three performances were given that season, and after that the elaborate modernistic sets which had been built in Berlin and imported upon the direction of the company's then stage director, Charles Moor, gathered dust in the warehouse until this season, when they were unearthed and subjected to complete renovation. So ponderous are these realistically constructed sets that a crew of 75 stage hands is said to be required to handle them.

At about the time—here our records fail us—of the Chicago Opera's second production of "Figaro," the city heard other performances of the Mozart work by the lamented American Opera company, performances which for style and manner must always linger in the memory of those who heard them. The American Opera was a venture of Vladimir Rosing and Rouben Mamoulian was one of the stage directors. Performances were sung in excellent English translations—clarity of diction was a fetish of this group—the artists were young and personable, and the productions pointed the way to an ideal of modernized opera that might have had far reaching results had not public indifference, plus marauding producers who offered the successful young singers of the troupe more money than any quixotic venture could pay, sounded the knell of one of the most significant of native operatic projects. Well remembered from "The Marriage of Figaro" are the sprightly Figaro of the late George Fleming Houston and the petite Cherubino of Cecile Sherman.

Chicago did not hear "Figaro" again until the Metropolitan opera resumed its visits in 1943, when it opened the season with Bruno Walter conducting and a cast including Pinza, Brownlee, Steber, Sayao, Novotna, Baccaloni, De Paolis, and Irra Petina. Four members of that group will be heard in Mr. Walter's current production: Ezio Pinza as Figaro, John Brownlee as Count Almaviva, Jarmila Novotna as Cherubino, and Alessio de Paolis as Don Basilio. Otherwise the Chicago cast lists Stella Roman as Rosina, Margit Bokor as Susanna, Virgilio Lazzari as Dr. Bartolo, Rosalind Nadell as Marcellina, and Inge Manski as Barbarina.

Besides Miss Ribla, the Saturday afternoon "Aida" will have Frederick Jagel as Rhadames, Kersin Thorborg as Amneris, Alexander Sved as Amonasro, and Nicola Moscona as the high priest. Mr. Cleva will conduct. Other performances of the week will be repetitions with original casts: "Pelléas and Mélisande" on Monday night, with Sayao, Singher, Tibbet, Doe, Moscona and Tate, Goosens conducting; "La Forza del Destino" on Wednesday night, with Stella Roman in the role in which she hastily substituted for Zinka Milanov last week, Warren, Baum, D'Angelo, Nadell, Moscona and Manski, Walter conducting, and "La Traviata" on Friday night, with Sayao, Berini, and Bonelli, Cleva conducting.

THIS WEEK AT THE OPERA

Three ornaments of the Chicago Opera week at the Civic Opera house—left and right, Jarmila Novotna and Margit Bokor, who appear in Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" Saturday evening; in the center, Kerstin Thorborg as Amneris in Saturday afternoon's "Aida."

Sherman Hayes Brings Band to Bismarck Nov. 16

Jean Sablon Opens Friday at Blackstone

By Will Davidson

Sherman Hayes
[Seymour Photo]

A rather sudden change in plans has given the Bismarck hotel another opportunity to discover a potential hit band. On Nov. 16 it will bring in from the hinterlands the 11 piece orchestra led by handsome Sherman Hayes. Hayes is probably best known for the recordings he made with George Olsen, his mellow baritone voice being really something to hear. But he also has appeared with Del Courtney, Orville Knapp and others. His current band is replete with singers. Besides himself, Hayes has three male vocalists and a girl singer, Del Welcome. I understand from Ed Beck, the Bismarck's ace producer, that the Hayes band is a discovery to rank along with his discovery of Benny Strong, who follows Hayes on Dec. 21.

Interesting as the Hayes arrival is, I find it regrettable that an unfortunate slip has necessitated this change in bands in the Walnut room. Emile Petti had built up a host of friends and had established his band as one of the best ever to play in the room. Few men had tried harder to give a break to the acts in the floor shows, and it is a shame that that enthusiasm led him to overstep his bounds in criticizing a noisy audience. There is no place in cafe business for temperament, irritating as inattentive crowds can be, and knowing Emile I'm sure he regrets it all as much as the rest of us.

The Walnut room show still features the beautiful dancing of Bill Gary, and now has the unusual antics of Paul Sydell's dog, Spotty. Up in the Tavern room the Paulens have renewed their popular dancing reign, with Earl Roth providing the music.

Since we are looking ahead, don't forget that Friday night is the night Jean Sablon returns to Chicago, this time in the more amenable atmosphere of the Mayfair room. The handsome Sablon should prove a tremendous attraction at the Blackstone. He will be followed early in December by Burl Ives, who earned his booking by a one night stand at the Palmer House months ago.

I was asked [not by the Blackstone] to refrain from mentioning this some time ago, but now that it has been announced elsewhere I presume I am not betraying a trust by coming in a week late with the scoop.

The night before Hayes opens at the Bismarck George Olsen returns to the Palmer House, heading a show that features the Minnevitch harmonica gang. More of that next week. On the same night of Hayes' opening—the 16th—Gene Krupa returns to the College Inn of the Sherman, which should be good news for the local Krupa fans.

Incidentally, those Krupa fans are rabid, if timid. I've had quite a few anonymous notes threatening all sorts of dire and childish things if I didn't quit saying Gene was anything but perfect. It must be wonderful to have such abject adulation. Or does it get pretty sticky at times?

Speaking of the Palmer House, there is an act there now you shouldn't miss. Gene Sheldon is an old time vaudeville favorite, and of late he has been doing very much all right in the movies, but his idiantics on the banjo, his byplay with a tall and attractive Chicagoan, Loretta Fisher, and his really superb musical ability in the few moments he does get serious, make him a show stopper. Gene demonstrates how a banjo should be played, and how a banjo player should act.

Jere McMahon, Marilyn March, Charles Sheldon [who doesn't have nearly enough chance to show off his splendid voice], Paul Winchel, and Eddie Oliver continue to fill out the show.

The Latin Quarter has an almost new show, and it is a pretty good one. Outstanding, of course, is Billy Vine, the large man with the eloquent face and the engaging line of tomfoolery. Billy is still doing "Rain" and "That Old Gang of Mine" and the classic about the departing train, and they are as funny as ever. He has some new material, too, which ranks with the old, to make him a very entertaining gent. One thing I particularly like about Billy. If he uses a ringsider as the butt of a joke he makes amends before his act is over. You can't help applauding that.

Dorothy Donegan, resplendent in new gowns and hairdo, is a little less than terrific in her playing. There is something artificial in her act that keeps it from being the exciting thing it used to be before she became famous. I have the impression she has outgrown the uncontrolable excitement that used to implement her fine playing but is trying to hang onto the externals that long ago became a trademark. This is unfortunate, for Miss Donegan is a very good performer, and something of a genius on the piano.

Jerry Cooper, popular balladeer of the airlanes, does a nice job on the Latin Quarter's stage. His voice is very pleasant, and his manner matches it. I suspect that the injection of a few more commercial numbers might help him overcome the inertia of a night club crowd, but his main strength indubitably lies in his ballads.

The Brandows are a dancing team I like. They are good, fast hoofers, with no pretense of artistic arrangements. They are clean, sharp, attractive.

The Latin Quarter Lovelies carry on with their colorful routines from the Richman show, and Buddy Shaw's orchestra continues to do its good work.

The Buttery of the Ambassador West has brought in a new small combination to replace the very popular Dave Morrison, who graduates to the larger band field now. The new Buttery unit is led by Chuck Cavallo, who's been around the music business quite a while. Chuck built his unit for radio work and on the night I caught it he hadn't yet shaped it into the sort of group needed in the Buttery. It lacked the cohesiveness, the crispness, the color a small unit needs for a room where dancing is the primary entertainment.

Shirley Richards continues to do her nice singing in the Buttery, altho in attempting to solve a bothersome lighting problem the management has handicapped her with a microphone spotlight system that makes her look like a charming menace in a spook show. I wish, too, that she could do more singing with the Cavallo band, but there seems to be a considerable traffic in vocal chords on that stand.

Boswelling the Bistros:

It isn't too surprising that Danny Thomas is setting records at the Chez. The boy is tremendous and you shouldn't miss him. . . . Willie Shore, they tell me, has whipped his act into its old fine shape and is doing ropes up business at the Rio Cabana. That's good news, for Willie is a favorite of mine. . . . Exhuberant word from Alan Edelson, former local publicist, indicates he has Gotham by the horns. Alan, as you may or may not know, is happily intent on cultivating the corn in the Hildegarden.

STARS OF 'ANNA LUCASTA'

The three best reasons why "Anna Lucasta" is a success at the Civic theater. Left to right: Frederick O'Neal as the swaggering bully, Hilda Simms as the girl of the title role, and Earle Hyman as the country boy who knows the score.
[Sketch by Ben Cohen]

PRIMA'S SINGER

Lily Ann Carol is the lovely girl who sings so sweetly with Louis Prima's band at the Hotel Sherman, and who is such a good foil for his comedy.

Rockford College Holding Institute on Far East

Session Will Continue to November 20

By The Rev. John Evans

Rockford college, which annually presents institutes promoting international relations as a community service, is now conducting one on the far east. It will continue to Nov. 20. Participants include J. B. Powell, for 22 years publisher of the China Weekly Review; Owen Lattimore, former adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and now head of the Walter Hines Page school of international relations at Johns Hopkins university; George Kao, director of the midwest bureau of Chinese News service, and Mrs. Walter Williams of Rockford college, formerly professor of journalism at Yenching university, Peiping, China.

Chinese shadow plays will be shown by Pauline Benton with her Red Gate players, and Charles Fabens Kelley, curator of oriental art at the Art institute, will lecture on Chinese ceremonial bronzes. Round table discussions will follow the formal addresses.

Radcliffe college, Cambridge, Mass., in coöperation with the Massachusetts General hospital school of nursing, has instituted a new coördinated plan combining a complete liberal arts education leading to a bachelor's degree with professional education in nursing. The curriculum covers five and one-half years and no pre-professional courses will be included which might in any way limit the breadth of general education.

Students beginning in September, 1946, will carry full work at Radcliffe for the first year with three hours a week at Massachusetts General hospital. For the following two and one-half years, including summer sessions, instruction will be both at the college and the school of nursing, by which time the student will receive a bachelor's degree. The nursing diploma will be awarded after two years more at the school of nursing.

Mirth, Mystery and Music in October Films

OCTOBER'S BEST FILMS

- "Uncle Harry."
- "Pride of the Marines."
- "Guest Wife."
- "The House on 92d St."
- "State Fair."
- "Rhapsody in Blue."

By Mae Tinee

Plenty of variety in last month's film offerings — you could have music, mystery or mirth—you pays your money and you takes your choice—but these were my favorites.

"Uncle Harry" is melodramtic, but well directed and different, and I think most people will like it. It's all about a stodgy, inhibited, henpecked man and what happens when three women get to squabbling over him. It would be unfair to tell much of the plot, because it's suspenseful and at times surprising. George Sanders does nice work as Harry, but Geraldine Fitzgerald takes most of the honors.

"Pride of the Marines" is based on one of the most heroic individual feats of the war, and tells of Al Schmid, who fought off a murderous Jap attack at the cost of his eyesight. In the blunt, brusque language of the young men who have fought our fight, it points a sharp finger at many subjects, and does so effectively. John Garfield gives an intense performance in the lead, and Dane Clark is an able assistant as his buddy. It has some highly poignant scenes and some hilarious ones, too. Several marines who attended a preview assured me that marines would like this picture—so, if you don't, you can tell it to them!

'Guest Wife" has a plot that could hardly be called new, but boasts smart direction, some very clever dialog, and an able cast. Claudette Colbert has done a lot of this sort of thing, and turns in one of her best performances, aided by Don Ameche doing some fine clowning, backed up by an excellent supporting cast. If you're in the mood for something light, highly improbable, and giddy, I think this will fill the bill nicely.

"The House on 92d St." One of the best things about this movie is that it's so unlike a movie. It has all the good points of a documentary film and has received a similar treatment. The FBI put its stamp of approval on the film, and opened its mysterious doors to show some of the machinery and some of the agents used in espionage and counter-espionage before and after Pearl Harbor. Actual incidents have been taken from cases listed in the bureau's files, and the whole has been woven into a fascinating film, chockful of convincing intrigue and suspense. The plot builds up swiftly and smoothly, with suspense mounting gradually, and if you're a finger nail biter you can expect some extensive damage after seeing this thriller.

IN "1,001 NIGHTS"

Evelyn Keyes has a lot of fun in "A Thousand and One Nights." At McVickers.

"State Fair" is a folksy, friendly musical in color, with an excellent cast, and some hummable tunes. It's all about an Iowa farm family and the state fair, which is the big event of their lives. Some of the shots of the amusement features are excellent and it's all as lively and colorful as a circus. If you like fairs and farms and families you'll undoubtedly be pleasantly entertained by all this.

"Rhapsody in Blue." As a review of many of George Gershwin's memorable musical successes, it's first rate. You'll hear the rhapsody itself, music from "Porgy and Bess," and many of the lighter and widely popular numbers the American public sang, whistled and danced to. . . . While it has definite shortcomings as a biography, it's a solid two and a quarter hours of Gershwin music. The photography thruout is excellent and occasionally superior.

Chinese Theater

HOLLYWOOD. — Benson Fong, Chinese actor now appearing in "Calcutta," recently banded together with other prominent Chinese film workers to form a Chinese Theater Group.

Drama Notes

"Carmen Jones," which recently set up a flurry about the possibility of leaving us for England, now thinks it will stay at the Erlanger at least thru mid-December. Apparently Billy Rose is having twin troubles. No labor permits are being issued over there to American performers, and by English copyright, Bizet is not in the public domain until 1947.

"The Voice of the Turtle" will be heard in the land with one new voice for the Selwyn month starting Nov. 12, when K. T. Stevens takes her first leave since the opening and her place is filled by Louisa Horton, recently signed for the Boston troupe of the comedy, due there in January. Meanwhile, the Selwyn announces a Thanksgiving Day matinée to replace the regular Wednesday matinée.

Gossip: Margaret Sullavan is reported interested in a play by Samuel Taylor called "I Know My Love," which Billy Rose would produce . . . Eugenie Leontovich's "Caviar to the General" has been withdrawn for repairs . . . "The Tempest" will play two weeks at New York's City Center starting Nov. 12 . . . The producers of "Dear Ruth" seem to have another success in "The Secret Room," also directed by Moss Hart . . . Eugene O'Neill has been in New York but he still says no plays. Maybe "The Ice Man Cometh" by next season, tho that has been tentatively promised for three seasons or more.

Celebrating the 170th anniversary of the marine corps, "Salute to the Marines" will be presented at the Chicago Stadium Saturday evening, Nov. 10, according to Col. Chester L. Fordney, commandant in this area. Among those promised for the show are Joe Wallace and Les Lear, Willie Shore, Eddie Franklin, Nancy Martin, Bernice and Lebrac, Lowe, Hite and Stanley, Sonja Henie and others. A birthday cake will be baked for the occasion and will be cut at the show at the same time President Truman is cutting a similar cake in Washington.

The publishing firm of Simon and Schuster recently ran an advertisment in Variety saying that the $154,371 earned by Bob Hope's "I Never Left Home" had gone to the National War Fund and that Mr. Hope's net from the venture is that he owes Simon and Schuster $8.45 for author's alterations.

When "Lute Song" starts rehearsals Thursday the cast will hold Mary Martin, Clarence Derwent, McKay Morris, Helen Craig, Augustin Duncan, Ralph Clanton, Nimura the dancer, and Margaret Matzenauer, long a celebrated singer. Robert Edmond Jones will design the production, which has special music by Raymond Scott. The story derives from Sidney Howard and Will Irwin.

Two more cast shifts take place in "Anna Lucasta" tomorrow night when Alvin and Alice Childress, who have been playing the roles of Noah and Blanche at the Civic theater trade places with Slim Thompson and Claire Jay of the New York troupe. Meanwhile, a 20 year old Chicago schoolteacher, Janice Kingslow, has been engaged as understudy to Hilda Simms, who plays the title role.

AT THE PALACE

'JOHNNY ANGEL'

George Raft is one of those strong silent men in "Johnny Angel." It's at the Woods.

ROMANCE AT 'STATE FAIR'

Jeanne Crain and Dana Andrews find both fun and romance in "State Fair," now on the Roosevelt screen.

Notes of Music and Musicians

The Chicago Symphony orchestra's busy week begins this afternoon at 3:30 with Bruno Walter conducting a special concert in Orchestra hall for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. The program lists Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony, Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," and Brahms' Second symphony in D major.

William Kapell

On Monday night the orchestra, with Désiré Defauw conducting, and William Kapell, pianist, will give the second concert of the series in Milwaukee. The first concert of the young people's series will take place on Tuesday at 3:30, with Rudolph Ganz conducting a program consisting of the overture to Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," "Four Symphonic Demonstration Pieces" by Mr. Ganz, the first movement of Haydn's Piano concerto in D major, played by 12 year old Mayne Miller, "America the Beautiful" as an audience participation number, and Sibelius' "Finlandia." Formerly presented on Wednesday afternoons, the young people's concerts will be given on a varied schedule this season. During November and December all concerts will be on Tuesday afternoons. Because of the orchestra's tour in January, one concert will be played on a Tuesday and one on a Wednesday, the same system prevailing thru February. During March and April the concerts again will be given on Tuesdays.

Mr. Kapell will be the piano soloist at the Thursday-Friday concerts, playing Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 3 in D minor, a gargantuan work which has been played previously at these concerts only by the composer, Alfred Cortot and Vladimir Horowitz. Mr. Defauw will conduct the overture and ballet music from Schubert's "Rosamunde," the first Chicago performance of Stravinsky's "Scenes de Ballet," and the Dance of the Seven Veils, from Strauss' "Salome." The Stravinsky work was composed in 1944 at the request of Billy Rose, and portions of it were excerpted for use by Alicia Markova and Anton Dolin for their ballet sequence in Rose's revue "The Seven Lively Arts."

On Saturday evening the Lange Little Symphony, composed of Chicago Symphony players and conducted by Hans Lange, will give a concert at Wheaton college. The program will consist of Stamitz' Symphony in E flat major, Johann Christian Bach's Concerto for Violin and Violoncello, played by John Weicher and Dudley Powers, Mendelssohn's Scherzo in G minor, Saint-Saëns' Tarantelle for flute and clarinet, played by Emil Eck and Jerome Stowell, and Wolf-Ferrari's Chamber Symphony.

The Philadelphia orchestra, directed by Eugene Ormandy, will give a concert as the second number in the History and Enjoyment of Music series at Orchestra hall tomorrow at 8:15. The program will consist of three compositions: Bach's Toccata in C major, for organ, transcribed for orchestra by Mr. Ormandy; Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G minor, and Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Egon Petri, noted Dutch-American pianist, will open the 10th season of the Musical Arts Piano series, sponsored by the Adult Education council, in Orchestra hall on Tuesday at 8:15. The program will begin with the first Chicago performances of three transcriptions by Mr. Petri: Buxtehude's chorale-prelude, "Now We Pray to the Holy Ghost," "Sheep May Safely Graze," from Bach's "Birthday Cantata," and the Bach chorale-prelude, "I Step Before Thy Throne, O Lord." The program will continue with a Menuett by Bach; Busoni's "Fantasia Contrapuntistica," consisting of a chorale-prelude and quadruple fugue on Bach's unfinished fugue from "The Art of Fugue;" Rachmaninoff's "Variations on a Theme of Corelli," Opus 42, and the Twelve Etudes of Chopin's, Opus 10. Orchestra hall has been completely sold out by subscription for the series and only a few seats remain on the stage for individual concerts.

The Russian trio—Nina Mesirow-Minchin, pianist; Fritz Siegal, violinist; Ennio Bolognini, cellist—will open its season of concerts under the auspices of the Chicago Chamber Music society at the Arts club on Wednesday at 11:30 a. m. The program consists of Beethoven's Trio in D major, Opus 70, No. 1, and Mendelssohn's Trio in D minor.

Rudolf Firkusny
[Bruno of Hollywood

The second concert of the Woman's Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Jerzy Bojanowski, at Orchestra hall on Friday at 8:15, will have as soloist the young Czech pianist, Rudolf Firkusny, in Brahms' Concerto No. 1, in D minor. Mr. Firkusny has been heard here only once previously, when he played the Dvorak concerto under Sir Thomas Beecham at Ravinia. As an orchestral novelty Mr. Bojanowski will offer a suite by the contemporary Polish composer, Karol Rathaus, based on incidental music written for the Habima Players' production of Karl Gutzkow's drama, "Uriel Acosta." The work not only will be a first Chicago performance but apparently a first hearing here of any of this composer's music. Other orchestra numbers will be Beethoven's "Leonore" No. 3 overture, and Smetana's "The Moldau."

The University of Chicago will present two chamber music concerts this week, a recital by Isaac Stern, violinist, and Alexander Zakin, pianist, in Mandel hall on Monday at 8:30, and the "Introduction to Chamber Music" series, now moved to Kimball hall, on Wednesday at 8:15. A composition by Paul Hindemith will be played on each program in recognition of the composer's 50th birthday on Nov. 16. Messrs. Stern and Zakin will play the American premiere of a sonata by Hindemith, written in 1939, which in all probability also will be a world premiere. They also will play the first Chicago performance of Bartok's Second Rhapsody, in tribute to the recently deceased composer, Schubert's Duo in A major, Opus 162, two movements from Bach's Sonata in A minor for violin alone, and Beethoven's Sonata in A major, Opus 30, No. 1. The Kimball hall concert will present the Symphony Wind quintet, with Clarke Kessler as lecturer, and the program lists Hindemith's Quintet for wind instruments, Opus 24, No. 2 [originally entitled "Kleine Kammermusik"], and with Perry O'Neil at the piano, Beethoven's Quintet in E flat for piano and wind instruments, Opus 16.

Miliza Korjus, coloratura soprano and star of the film version of "The Great Waltz," will open the Anshe Emet forum series on Tuesday at 8:30. Her program lists Mozart's "Alleluia," arias from "Norma," "Lucia di Lammermoor," and "The Pearl of Brazil," and songs by Bishop, Dell'Aqua, Delibes, and Benedict. Miss Korjus will be assisted by Glauco D'Attili, pianist, and Henry Bove, flutist.

Marshall Scott, baritone, will give a debut recital in the auditorium of Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood blvd., this afternoon at 3:30. Lillie Cochran, soprano, will be the assisting artist.

The Gen. Platoff Don Cossack chorus, directed by Nicholas Kostrukoff, will open the Zelzer concert series at Orchestra hall on Saturday at 8:30. This is the 20th season this ensemble has been before the American public. The program lists Russian liturgical music, folk songs, and contemporary soviet ballads, including "From Border to Border," from Djerjinsky's opera, "The Quiet Don." Soloists will be M. Dedovitch, tenor; V. Andronoff, bass; A. Grigorieff, bass, and V. Mamonoff, tenor.

Charlo Byars, soprano, will be heard in a debut recital at Kimball hall tonight at 8:15. Robert Macdonal will be at the piano for a program that lists nine songs by Richard Trunk, a group by old English composers, arias from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Haydn's "The Creation," songs in English by Clokey, Barber, Harris, and Quilter, and two songs each by Wolf and Mahler.

Art Tatum, blind Negro jazz pianist and winner of the Esquire jazz poll of last year, will give a recital in Orchestra hall on Monday, Nov. 12, at 8:30.

Fay Satton, Chicago soprano, will give a recital in Kimball hall next Sunday afternoon, Nov. 11, at 3:30.

WILLIAM HENRY CHAMBERLIN REVIEWS "EUROPE IN REVOLUTION," BY JOHN SCOTT

FAMILY LIFE IN EARLY DAYS OF CHICAGO

Underground Adventures of a Flyer

"JOURNEY UNDERGROUND," by David Prosser. [Dutton, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

David Prosser

One day in September, 1943, Flight Officer David Prosser of Lake Forest, Ill., stepped into a British-based Fortress bound for a raid on Romilly, France. In his flight jacket he tucked a carton of cigarets, Browning's poems, a French-English dictionary, some aspirin, and 12 toothbrushes. He then went away, and was shot down.

Prosser didn't see England again till December. The story of his stay in France is familiar to Tribune readers, for in serial form it appeared in this newspaper last spring. Now, augmented and published as a book, it emerges as an interest-holding, full-packed account of a lost airman's trek across France before the invasion.

Handicapped by an injured ankle, Prosser found sanctuary with a French family who passed him successively to loyal members of the underground. He got lice, learned French, found thrifty Frenchmen still using American tools, beds, and clothing left over from the 1918 war. He was joined by Herk, a languid Texas cowboy who could not be bothered to learn French, and looked on the whole adventure as something that didn't make sense.

In Paris the disguised Yanks rubbed elbows with German soldiers, who behaved with great military correctness. [Prosser was amused to find some French people who believed the American soldiers of World War I. to be ex-convicts—a charitable explanation of their drinking, wenching, and brawling.] Prosser and Herk were horrified at the lack of "security" in the underground; their hosts always bragged openly of concealing American airmen. Finally the pair got across the border into Spain.

His finely drawn characterizations of French people, his eye for detail and background, his cheerful humor, and his recollection of incident, which amounts almost to total recall, make young Prosser the ideal man to record an adventure that befell thousands of American airmen before the battle for Europe was won. This book places him at once in the top bracket of the young men who, being in the war, have written of it. And it means further that we'll be seeing his name on the book pages again.

Expectant Father in Delightful Book

"STORK BITES MAN," by Louis Pollock. [World, $1.]

One of the genuinely amusing books of the year, Louis Pollock's exposition of what the expectant father can expect to contend with handles in a fresh and delightful way a subject that long has been utilized for some pretty weary jokes. Pollock recounts his own first experience at becoming a father, and altho he treats the matter with delightful humor there is an undertone of human sympathy and understanding that gives the book a much greater value than if it were merely an attempt at comedy. Carl Rose's ample and wonderful illustrations are a crowning touch to this little volume.

Book Offers Blurred View of European Catastrophe

"EUROPE IN REVOLUTION," by John Scott. [Houghton Mifflin, $3.]

Reviewed by William Henry Chamberlin

John Scott began his apprenticeship as a foreign observer with the very unusual experience of working for years in the big new soviet iron and steel plant at Magnitogorsk. His story of this experience in "Behind the Urals" is one of the best of the grass roots books about Russia, human, fair, and objective. And he proved himself a shrewd and thoughtful journalist in his second book, "Duel for Europe," which was largely based on his observations as a newspaper man in Moscow from 1939 until 1941.

Unfortunately his present book falls short of the high standard of its predecessors. One reason is perhaps to be found in the title. It is a major achievement to report a revolution in a single country with balance and perspective. To describe the revolution of a continent is a still more ambitious project. The author is quite correct in noting that the war, with its immense destruction of human life, its unprecedented physical devastation of the centers of urban civilization, its inhuman uprooting of tens of millions of people, its scrambling of many property rights, has dealt a tremendous, probably fatal blow to the pre-war European social and economic order.

But the final returns on the war's aftermath are not all in. To attempt to compress Europe's "revolution" [catastrophe would be a better word for it] within the covers of a book suggests a process of trying to photograph a blurred and rapid procession with a still camera.

There was apparently an unfortunate time lag between the writing and the publication of the book, and this throws a spotlight on some of Mr. Scott's bad guesses. For instance, he envisages the Germans fighting a fierce guerrilla war after military collapse — something that didn't happen. He also indulges in some fanciful speculation about how America might attack Russia, whereupon Russia would make common cause with Japan and China, thus welding together "a military bloc, with a population of some 800,000,000, with untold natural resources." Again something that didn't happen, that probably couldn't have happened.

Mr. Scott sees clearly what some of our statesmen were apparently blind to, the impossibility of ruining Germany without also blighting the whole European economy. He has a few shrewd observations like the following:

"The Germans needed all of Hitler's ranting and daily doses from the Goebbels propaganda machine to persuade them that they were better than other people. Englishmen simply take it for granted and rarely waste a syllable discussing it."

But his comment on soviet foreign policy, an important part of the book, is so apologetic as to surrender his previous admirable standard of objectivity. He tries to draw an utterly false and absurd analogy between the American good neighbor policy and what might well be called the soviet bad neighbor policy of overrunning adjacent states, allies, neutrals, and former axis satellites alike, imposing synthetic made-in-Moscow governments, committing every kind of organized and unorganized looting, outrage, and oppression.

Arthur Meeker's Story Is Told in Mood of Serenity

"THE FAR AWAY MUSIC," by Arthur Meeker. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50].

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Arthur Meeker Jr., whose "The Ivory Mischief" proved him a historical novelist meticulously careful in recreating a background as well as a skilled swordsman with the rapier of satire in touching the heart of human foibles, has written another historical novel as dramatically different from "The Ivory Mischief" as is its setting from the lush sophistication of "The Ivory Mischief's" 17th century Paris. "The Far Away Music" is a story of Chicago in 1856—a Chicago little recognizable in today's gigantic metropolis, today filled with the dreams of adolescence as it shoulders the responsibilities of vigorous young manhood in the society of the world's great cities.

With the same meticulous care for the minutiae of living which made "The Ivory Mischief" important as a record of a period as much as an interpretation of one, "The Far Away Music" recreates both a mode of life and a mood. The mood is as quiet, as muted as far-away music, as gentle as a memory of emotion—as if the violences of love and frustration, the passionate urge to personal freedom, were reflected in an old mirror dimmed and softened by time. Its emotional surface is as serene as an ice-covered mountain torrent. The reader knows that beneath its calm crust there are turbulent emotional depths, but the reader never, except in his own imagination, shares those turbulences.

As with the mood of the book, its historical recreation is done in a muted tone, and from its own contemporary point of view—with no accent on what today seems either quaint oddity or crudity. Life in the Chicago of almost a century ago is recorded as background, not emphasized as motivation.

"The Far Away Music" is essentially a family novel, a tale of family life more common, perhaps, a century ago but by no means rare today. It is the story of a family pattern and of a "black sheep," whose blackness consisted only in the impossibility of conforming to the family's idea of whiteness. Jonathan Trigg's sin was the sin of listening to the far away music of freedom.

As the book opens, Jonathan Trigg has arrived in Chicago after seven years' absence in California. He is emotionally, if not physically, a resurrection from the dead. His departure had been a willful one, against his wife's and his wife's family's pleas, and from his years of silence the aggrieved relatives had been happy to draw the obvious conclusions.

To those in the little white house at No. 80 State st., where seven years before Jonathan had left his wife and three daughters, his return may prove revolutionary. It is unquestionably disconcerting. His daughters have been told he was dead. Their lives like their mother's have been cut out and served up after the Bascomb family pattern.

Uncle Charles, "fabulously rich," his ultra-social wife, Uncle Caleb, a prosperous lawyer, his dyspeptic wife, and the Bascomb "girls," Aunt Betsy, who talks more than she thinks, and Julia Bascomb Trigg, are a group interdependent and interirritating. Mrs. Jonathan Trigg's three girls are less hers than family possessions. Sissy, just returned from Miss Crandall's select female seminary in Utica, N. Y., is engaged to be married [of course with the family's approval] to Aaron, whom she does not love. Nancy, 16, and Loulie, who was a baby when her father left, know as well as Sissy that, while Mama is the head of the household, Uncle Charlie is the head of the family.

How Jonathan Trigg's return and rebellion affect [and fail to affect] the little household in State st. is a tale told with deceptive simplicity. It might have been told by the gentle Sissy, who truly is "standing with reluctant feet where the brook and river meet."

New Volume in Saga of Sac-Prairie

"THE SHIELD OF THE VALIANT," by August Derleth. [Scribner's, $3.]

Reviewed by James Gray

August Derleth has made it his life work to chronicle the affairs of the Wisconsin village in which he lives. The Sac Prairie saga, as he calls it, has taken him backward and forward in time from the early days of settlement down to the immediate present. In a series of novels, short stories, journals and poems, Mr. Derleth has told more about his community than is known of any other place of its size in America.

Lately Mr. Derleth has tripped over bigotry and picked himself up in a state that can be described only as genial indignation. He disapproves of bigotry, but is nonetheless rather pleased to have something dramatic to write about. Placing himself in the very foreground of the story, lightly disguised as a character in the narrative, he does battle with the benighted who attempt to choke off free expression among teachers in the public high school.

This story of intolerance he bolsters with others drawn from the contemporary record of life in Sac Prairie. There is the pathetic history of the girl who is convicted of sins which she has never even thought of committing by the irresponsible jury of tea table gossip. There is the incident of a good farmer who almost becomes the victim of a banker's greed. Several others which are also variants on the theme of man's inhumanity toward man tend to ravel out into sterotyped melodrama as Mr. Derleth plunges on and on thru the 500 pages of his repetitive and earnest, but curiously unpersuasive book.

The vitality of August Derleth is one of the literary phenomena of our time. No one can quite match him in facility and steadfastness of purpose. Unfortunately his narrative ingenuity does not always support these garrulous campaigns into the field of interpretation. There are, I think, fewer well created figures in this book than in several of Mr. Derleth's others, "Country Growth," for example. There is also less in it of the exuberant appreciation of the Wisconsin scene than there was in his "Village Year." The smaller forms seem to serve August Derleth's talent best. The novel only encourages him to throw his weight about recklessly.

Clifton Fadiman Will Make Digest of Classic Writing

By Harry Hansen

New York

CLIFTON FADIMAN may be known chiefly as the dynamic master of ceremonies of a radio program, but actually he is one of the best American critics and his heart is in literature. He has just made a new contract with Random House to prepare a digest of the classics called "The Living Literature of Greece and Rome," in which works of significance for our day will be reprinted with critical comment by Mr. Fadiman. He has three years in which to prepare it and it will be published in two to three volumes, taking its place by the side of those other classics that have already made a place for themselves by their editorial and typographical excellence, including works on India and China, the Greek and Roman drama and the writings of Thomas Aquinas. All of these books except the volumes on the Roman drama have had an extraordinary sale, but the Roman volume belongs in the series and will in time justify the investment. It takes money to plan works of this kind but they belong to the long term assets of publishing.

Admires James' Craftmanship

If you have been reading "The Short Stories of Henry James" you may have observed that its editor, Mr. Fadiman, repeatedly expresses his irritation with sloppy writing and lack of craftsmanship in current books and finds much to commend in the serious and conscientious labor of Henry James. Sharp references to "the cult of informality," the cheap jargon, vulgarity, superficiality and worship of material success indicate that Clifton Fadiman is a critic of society no less than of literature. It is quite likely that his long tenure of seven years on one radio program is partly responsible for his perturbation. During the war he devoted part of each week to directing writers who prepared articles to lift the people's morale, and for a long time he presided at war bond rallies. Friends say that the satisfaction of being a national figure, which he relished at first, has palled, for he is now the object of the handshaking brigade, whose members rush up at every opportunity to assure him that they heard him on such and such a date. It is quite likely that when he feels the family exchequer has been established on a sufficient basis he will find the quiet library more welcome to his studious nature that the microphone.

Navy Sinks Book Sales

One of the unexpected consequences of the visit of the battleship Missouri and other ships of the United States navy to New York waters was the first sizable falling off in sales of books in a long period. On Navy day a large number of the smaller book shops reported no business worth mentioning and some of them closed. This, however, is wholly a local phenomenon and will not affect the fall sales, which will reach huge totals by Christmas. The big book buying spree is still on and the book clubs expect to extend their lists as soon as more paper is available. An indication of how large the movement toward book clubs is, can be found in the report of one of the smallest, the Book Find club, which now supplies books to 60,000 members. For a long term of years the Literary Guild, which now sends books to over 600,000 members, had a hard time getting beyond 60,000.

Marion Hargrove, who began his military career as a private and closed it as a sergeant, probably made more money out of what GI's care to remember least—induction and preliminary training—than any other man in uniform. His book, "See Here, Private Hargrove," was the first account of personal experiences of a selectee to strike the public fancy and zoom to the million mark in sales. The very fact that it bore its author's name indicates the chief reason for its wide popularity—it rang absolutely true. Nothing else that Hargrove wrote approached it. He became a writer for Yank and covering stories in the Philippines was his last assignment. He was demobilized last week at Governor's Island, in New York harbor, and will devote himself to magazine writing. For the present he will live in High Tor, the home of Maxwell Anderson, the playwright, where Mrs. Hargrove and their infant son Christopher have been living, while Maxwell Anderson occupies the Hargrove apartment in Manhattan.

Wagner's Face at the Opera

One evening a few seasons ago Louis Biancolli, New York music critic, entered the Metropolitan Opera house and, glancing over the audience from the back of the house found his eyes arrested by a remarkable profile. It was a woman's face, but the profile was etched in his memory by numerous portraits. He hurried to the office of the director. "There is a woman here with the face of Richard Wagner," he declared, "who in the world is she?" "Didn't you know?" asked the director. "That is Wagner's granddaughter, Friedelind Wagner." "Is she a Nazi?" "Decidedly not, she spurned the Nazis," said the director. "Come and meet her."

So Mr. Biancolli met Miss Wagner and, finding that she knew practically every page of her grandfather's scores, launched into an animated conversation about them. How much Miss Friedelind Wagner knows is revealed in her personal story, "Heritage of Fire," a damning indictment of Nazi interference with Bayreuth. Miss Wagner is a cultured woman who has made a place for herself in New York's musical world. In the last week she has been describing her experiences on the radio, as authors invariably do when they publish a book.

Simonov Poem Is Popular

Mr. Biancolli, who, with Robert Bagar, writes the program notes for the Philharmonic concerts, is an accomplished linguist and learned to speak and translate Russian in about a year. In the course of his work he came across what he thinks is easily the most popular poem of the war in Russia—the work of Konstantine Simonov, whose novel, "Days and Nights," has automatically become a best seller in the United States because it is the choice of the Book of the Month club, and, as every critic attests, the best writing that has come out of the war in Russia. The poem, like the book, strikes the human note; it is called "Wait for Me." Quite simply it is the letter of a soldier at the front to his wife, asking her to wait for his return, in spite of any reports she might hear of his death or disappearance. It reflects not only sentiment, but the calm confidence of the lover that nothing, not even the threat of death, can stop him from coming back to her.

Irvin S. Cobb as Seen Thru Eyes of His Family Circle

"MY WAYWARD PARENT, Irvin S. Cobb," by Elisabeth Cobb. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

Irvin S. Cobb's daughter has written a book which is not so much a biography of her famous sire as a family chronicle in which "Buff" Cobb herself sometimes takes the center of the stage and crowds Papa almost into the wings. It's the life with Father pattern that more and more authors are finding an almost sure-fire method of telling about their unusual parents. Not that the results are lacking in entertainment; quite the reverse, as Clarence Day so completely proved.

But Irvin Cobb was a personage in his own right, and I'm not sure that the method of viewing him thru the eyes of his family does full justice to his career. His rise from a boy reporter in Paducah, Ky., to highly paid literary fame is portrayed with much the same perspective that a wife sees her husband's business: in terms of dinner table conversations.

Elisabeth Cobb

To be sure, there is a good deal of Irvin Cobb in the book: how he boasted of being at one time the country's youngest managing editor of a daily newspaper; how a free lance story sent to the CHICAGO TRIBUNE drew a tribute from its famous editor, Joseph Medill; how he by-passed Chicago in spite of this commendation when he sought to become a metropolitan newspaper man; how he was literally pushed into writing magazine and book material.

Cobb's character is portrayed in some detail. He is revealed as essentially a shy and modest man, traits he sometimes concealed by gruffness and bluster. But he was also fond of having his own way, and often played the family tyrant in a forgivable way, his daughter shows. He was generous and gullible, and sentimental beyond ordinary limits. And withal he was not naturally a funny man, but his mordant humor and his knack of turning phrases made the public think him a real merry andrew.

He couldn't open a tin can without maiming himself; he left a wake of destruction behind him when he attempted to fix anything around the house; he was bumbling and awkward and lovable, like a gangling boy or half grown puppy. That was Irvin S. Cobb, and that was why he had a legion of friends.

But Cobb the writer, the career man, the phenomenon of popular literature in the earlier 1900s, does not appear at full length in Elisabeth Cobb's portrait. There is more talk about the clothes he bought for himself and his family than there is about the fact that critics of his day called him a master of the short story. This latter fact calls for a new appraisal, but of course his daughter is not the one to make it.

Just the same, it's a downright amusing book. The author proves herself at times a genuine humorist in her own way, altho I can't refrain from remarking that at times there is more corn than Cobb in her story. You'll get some hearty chuckles out of it. Life with Father Cobb must have been pretty wonderful, at that.

A Heartening Tale of Small Town Editor

"A MAN FROM KANSAS: The Story of William Allen White," by David Hinshaw. [Putnam's, $3.]

Reviewed by Frederic Babcock

David Hinshaw

A lot of us present-day newspaper men can recall the time when, as small town midwestern kids, we dreamed of some day getting into the Big Leagues. For most of us the goal was either Chicago or New York. But all of us felt that, even tho we might never make that grade, life wouldn't be so bad if we could become half as great as one small town editor. The metropolitan centers could have their celebrated editors, but Emporia had its William Allen White. As far as we were concerned, that was enough.

In time this evaluation became nation-wide, almost world-wide. The Sage of Emporia grew into an international figure. Even before his death two years ago he was developing into a legend. This legend will continue to grow.

Already a definitive biography is under way; also projected is the publication of his letters. And now, in "A Man from Kansas," one of his closest friends and co-workers, David Hinshaw, has recounted the editor's life story without attempting to say the final word regarding him.

"I tried to capture the flavor of Will White's life," Mr. Hinshaw told me the other day. "I wrote the book in a hurry. Certainly I don't think it's the greatest biography ever written. But I hope it gives a true picture of a true American."

Everything is there, from the Bull Moose days to the two world wars and the war against intolerance, and from the "What's the Matter with Kansas?" editorial to the obituary of Mary White, daughter of Will and Sallie White. The man's humaneness, his humor, his integrity are brought out with feeling and good taste and sympathy.

"He bridged the gap between the neighborly pioneer life and today's life of confusion and comfort," the author writes. "He sought for and found the best in men, loved them, and was greatly beloved by them. He sought beauty from life and found and reflected it in all his relationships."

There follows this half-apologetic note: "Undoubtedly I have gilded the lily. Who knows whether or not I have told the truth about him, since no one can say positively whether truth is what should be or what is. Should a man in writing of his friend's life tell the mere facts or should he enlarge upon the bright ideals his friend sought to attain?"

In my opinion, no such note was necessary. From knowledge gathered at first hand, Mr. Hinshaw has written a brilliant story of a brilliant man. Other biographies may penetrate more deeply into what made William Allen White click. But I doubt if they will tell a more heart-warming story.

"A Man from Kansas" should be read by every American. I hope it sells a million copies.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

AS a boy August Derleth couldn't get enough Sherlock Holmes stories; there were not enough of them in the world to satisfy his craving for the society of the fascinating disentangler of Upper Baker st. So, at the age of 19, he wrote a letter to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, asking the great storyteller what he intended to do about it. When Sir Arthur refused to make any promises, young Mr. Derleth, a student at the University of Wisconsin, determined to carry on the tradition himself. A desk calendar stood at his elbow; he stabbed a finger into it at random and wrote himself a note: "In re—Sherlock Holmes." On that day, he told himself, if Conan Doyle had done nothing to relieve the intolerable situation, he would write a Sherlock adventure of his own.

Thus was born Mr. Solar Pons, known to Scotland Yard as "the Sherlock Holmes of Praed Street," and almost before he knew it Derleth had written not one but several dozen stories, all pure pastiche. Of these the first 12 have now been brought together by the new publishing house of Mycroft & Moran, a subsidiary of the mysterious Arkham House at Sauk City, Wis. Sherlockians will hail them with pleasure, and will look forward to the "Memoirs of Solar Pons," already announced for future publication.

It is the peculiar charm of the Solar Pons stories that they are frank imitations of the great originals; manner and method are Doyle's, and sometimes even the language is borrowed, to heighten the resemblance; such familiar speeches, for example, as "Dark waters, Parker, dark waters!" and the nostalgic "Come, Parker, the game is afoot!" Professor Moriarty is here under another name, the Pontine narrator is a medical gent who serves as the detective's amiable foil, and even Mrs. 'Udson is on the scene in the person of a "long-suffering" Mrs. Johnson. What more can one ask, now that the original records are closed forever?

The volume opens with an approving introduction by a fanatic named Vincent Starrett. He does not claim that the tales are equal to the best of Doyle's; only that Solar Pons is a clever impersonator for whom we should all be grateful.

New Arkham House Books

Three other books have issued from Arkham House since last I reported on the activities of this unique institution. Chronologically they are "Something Near," a gathering of Derleth's eerie short stories, to stand beside his earlier "Someone in the Dark"; "Witch House," a novel by Evangeline Walton; and "The Opener of the Way," a collection—the first, I believe—of Robert Bloch's fantastic short fictions. These are all special items for readers who like ghosties and ghoulies and things that go bump in the dark, and all are recommended. Miss Walton's "Witch House" is her second novel; her earlier work was "The Virgin and the Swine," published in 1936. Mr. Bloch's excellent stories, in the tradition of Poe and Lovecraft, are well-known to readers of the "weird" magazines, particularly perhaps that masterly shocker, "Yours Truly, Jack the Ripper."

To this group, collectors of charnel fairy tales should add H. P. Lovecraft's fine essay on "Supernatural Horror in Literature," which has been printed for the first time in hard covers—with an introduction by Derleth—by Ben Abramson, the bookseller, now a New York publisher.

Poe Edition Is Compact

Recommended, also, in the same field, is "The Portable Poe," edited by Philip Van Doren Stern [Viking], a wonderfully compact edition of the classic American whose romances of death inspired most of the others. Mr. Stern's admirable volume brings together everything the average reader will ever need of Poe's prose and verse, including a number of letters and opinions not easily accessible elsewhere. The tales are grouped for easy reading in departments of fantasy, terror, death, revenge, and murder, mystery and ratiocination. Specialists will regret the omission of "Thou Art the Man" from the latter division; not that it is a particularly good story—it isn't—but its historical interest as a pioneer example of detective-story plotting is considerable, and its inclusion would have made that section of the book complete. This is the best one-volume Poe I have seen.

A Pair of Shy Authors

It is not often one finds an anecdote illustrating the shyness of authors; usually it is the other extreme of temperament that is celebrated in literary gossip. J. M. Barrie's shyness, however, was as famous as his pipe. His first meeting with A. E. Housman, who was equally shy, was an ordeal for both men. The story is not generally known, and seems to me a remarkable instance of egotism in reverse.

They met, the playwright and the poet, each the other's admirer, at Jesus college, Cambridge, when Barrie was a guest of the university, and sat beside each other thruout the ceremonies without a word spoken between them. "I was dying to ask him up to my rooms for a smoke and a chat," said Barrie, reporting the incident later, "but I couldn't. So I sat down and wrote him a letter." This was the letter:

"Dear Professor Houseman:

You must have found me very incommunicative in hall tonight. But I am a strangely silent man.

Yours sincerely
J. M. BARRIE."

The reply came by return of post.

"Dear Sir James:

You must have found me very incommunicative in hall the other night. I, too, am a strangely silent man.

Yours sincerely
A. E. HOUSMAN

"By the way, you spell my name wrong."

"Every effort will be made," says Mr. Smith, "to maintain a level of scholarship for the quarterly which will hold its circulation to modest figures by assuring the complete indifference of hoi polloi."

A Literary Cascade of High Power

"YOU AND I," by Myron Brinig, Farrar & Rinehart, $3.

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

Myron Brinig

To read this story of two young people who started life as brother and sister, by adoption, and learned thru separation in far-flung places that they belonged to each other is a colossal accomplishment. For the only thing comparable to the voltage in this simple plot is Niagara Falls. Stand beneath them and let their waters carry you downstream to the wide blue ocean and you get a slight idea of the force that pushes "You and I" along to nearly five hundred closely packed pages.

In fact, there is so much detail poured forth in this story of two personable youngsters and how they left New Mexico and Montana for New York and Paris and then came back again, that it is a history of the last couple of decades from almost any viewpoint. It hurls places, people, deeds, thoughts and Mr. Brinig's own considerable personality into the pell-mell of a literary waterfall.

You must be young and vigorous to take it. It's wonderful in its massing of details, and its superb photography of life among the mountains and the skyscrapers, the red light districts and the social columns. It's Proust in its careful depiction of the minute, and it's Hemingway in its energy. Great gulps of fact and fancy fill its rich pages. It's not only a waterfall, but it's a meal that starts with hors d'oeuvres and goes pounding thru 20 courses, with all the side dishes, wines and condiments. When You and I finally decide to marry and settle down it seems like the end of a perfect, but awful busy day.

Restraint is not of the essence of Myron Brinig, who takes his pen in hand and dashes off a couple of thousand words before breakfast. Like the late Thomas Wolfe his works can do with a bit of cutting. Try as we will You and I are always getting lost a couple of hundred pages back, lost to sight, to memory dear.

Was he always thus? I seem to remember a clear readable story, "The Sisters."

Jewish Books Will Be Placed on Display Here

Books, manuscripts, and art and ceremonial objects, all emphasizing the Jewish contribution to world literature, will be placed on display soon thruout Chicago and suburbs.

The exhibits will be in connection with the observance of Jewish Book month. Among the places where they may be seen are the main public library and 16 branches, the Jewish People's institute, the Covenant club, the University of Chicago, and the Hebrew Theological college. While books of special Jewish interest are to predominate, efforts will be made to reach a great many non-Jewish readers. Radio programs and public meetings also are planned.

Climaxing the month's celebration will be a mass meeting, either the last week in November or the first week in December. Persons attending are to be asked to bring books for distribution among libraries now being rebuilt in European cities damaged or despoiled in the war.

Arrangements for the observance were completed last Monday at a luncheon of the Chicago Jewish Book council. Dr. Felix A. Levy is the 1945 chairman of the council, which is made up of both Jews and gentiles.

Story of Soviet Russia Is Told Without Propaganda

"DAYS AND NIGHTS," by Konstantine Simonov. [Simon & Schuster, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Here is the story of the fighting for three houses in the terrific battle for Stalingrad. It is told by a young soviet war correspondent who was in the city. The book is in the form of a novel and is centered around [illegible] figure, Capt. Alexei Saburov. It is all war. There is no argument about the class struggle, there is no groveling praise of Stalin, there is no effort to turn the fighting into an effort to save the soviet system. There is no obvious propaganda in the book.

All this is to say that there has been no recent Russian novel like it. The men and women move thru the book as individuals crawling like courageous mice over the ruins of a city. They are not talking about the glories of Marxism. They are talking about how to survive, how to get some frozen potatoes to eat, how to evacuate wounded, how to save a trapped battalion, how to fight Germans, how to fight Germans, how to fight Germans. For the whole emphasis is on a national war against a national enemy, never a mention of a class war and a class enemy. Here is a people looked at, for the first time in my knowledge of soviet fiction, as ordinary citizens fighting to save their nation.

Konstantine Simonov

The novel opens with a rapid and useful narrative prose of a kind rare in Russian books: "An exhausted woman sat leaning against the clay wall of the shed and in a quiet, tired voice told how Stalingrad had burned. It was dry and dusty. A little breeze blew yellow puffs of dust along the ground. The woman's legs were bare and burned, and while she spoke she raked the dust with one hand onto her inflamed foot, as if trying to dull the pain."

That is the tone of the book. The captain who is watching her at a little village east of the Volga goes on to that river, crosses it in a wild scene of sinking barges and burning docks, and enters the destroyed city. From then until the end of the book we are given his life by days and by nights, with close observation of fighting street by street and room by room.

We learn something of the relationship between higher ranking officers in the Red army, and we see at what seems like accurate first hand a group of strongly distinct personalities. The novel has excitement and smoke and treachery and courage and fright. In other words, it might have been any trapped army fighting for survival. The author is content to let it be just that. The sad history of publishing in the soviet is revealed when the publishers make much of the fact that this is the first novel of the soviet which permits a situation to be used for its own sake and not for the sake of pointing out the glories of the system.

If you want a novel full of battle and blood, this is it.

But there are some strange things in it. Just as any novel in a capitalist country might have planned it, the old woman whom the captain meets on the opening page of the book turns out to be the missing mother of the young nurse he meets on the way into Stalingrad. This romance grows exactly as any traditional novel would have it, even to the extent of having the nurse transferred to the same company as her captain-lover. Sentiment seems to have reared its admirable head in the soviet. It is restrained, and second to the war, but it is good old fashioned love just the same.

Another remarkable aspect of the book is that the action takes place at the officer level. The enlisted men, who must have been the bulk of the Red soldiers in Stalingrad, are hardly mentioned, and then only as numerical groups sent here or there. An old sergeant from the czarist army, suspected at first but later accepted because of his bravery, and the captain's orderly, who might have been a private soldier in any man's army, are the only soldiers we meet below the rank of captain.

We are much with generals and colonels in their dugouts, and we are given a sense of how their minds work. But we are never given a look at the men who did the heavy fighting. The captain, true enough, leads his men into action, but in a way he does it in isolation like a true old fashioned hero.

One would have expected the country of the mass to produce a book showing us that mass in action. Instead we are given a book about the officer class, a perfectly natural development in view of the evolution of the soviet into a country where the commissar and the officer and the artist are privileged classes.

This is a good, straightforward novel. The Red army fights thru it as a very tough outfit. The last word in the book is "Russia," and it is that concept of the nation, rather than the party, which dominates the story.

But I should have liked a look at the Russian people in Stalingrad as well as the Russian officers who planned the battle. And it would be a great comfort to think that soviet policy had become as freed of the urge to spread communism as this novel has been freed of the urge to spread propaganda.

TITLE	SUBJECT	VERDICT
"JUSTIN MORGAN HAD A HORSE," by Marguerite Henry. [Wilcox and Follett, $2.50.]	In this grand story of a real American horse, "Little Bub," the queer looking, undersized colt who outran all the racers in early Vermont, and later made his master's name world famous, wins the hearts of his young readers from the moment they meet him.	One of the finest horse stories we have had in a long time. Lovely illustrations by Wesley Dennis. Don't miss it.
"FAIR IS THE MORNING," by Loula G. Erdman. [Longmans, $2.]	When Connie Thurman accepted a teaching position in a run down rural community she had a job to do with the adults as well as the children. The ways in which she attacked the problem, and the success she attained make good reading.	Recommended for the older girl who is looking for information on challenging and inspiring vocations.
"TWO IS A TEAM," by Lorraine and Jerrold Beim. [Harcourt, Brace, $1.75.]	Story of two little Americans of different color who had good times together until each insisted upon having his own way. When disaster overtook them, they decided to work together again.	A simple story for younger children stressing the value of coöperation and compromise in working with others. Not an original theme, but a timely one.

The types of water in which bass are found, the various kinds of lures to use, the technique of stream fishing, how to capture fish with a fly-rod and many other fishing topics are described in the text and illustrated with 40 full page photographs made expressly for the book. Anglers will find the author's counsel and experiences not only practical but exceedingly interesting reading.

"MY DOG LEMON," by Ray P. Holland (A. S. Barnes & Co., $1.75.)

This delightful story about a hunting dog adds luster to Mr. Holland's reputation as an outstanding teller of tales. How Lemon, the dog that had practically no scenting ability, won a local field trial, the way his sense of smell was restored and how he went on to win a national championship, make a story that is as full of humor as it is of the atmosphere of hunting and field trials. Any sportsman who likes hunting dogs or field trials will get a real kick out of this unusual book.

"THE CASTLE BUCK," by Phil H. Moore. (Longmans, $3.50.)

Mr. Moore, a retired American engineer, is better known to eastern radio audiences and sportsmen as Jo Kose, the Nova Scotia guide who tells intriguing tales of the wilderness. He has done a clean cut job in assembling a sparkling group of stories which are rich in hunting and fishing lore.

The Castle Buck, the story from which the book gets it name, is about a superstitious Scotch boy and a large albino deer. Besides this intriguing yarn there are stories on salmon and trout fishing, tuna, and many others [both tall and true] which reflect the author's humor and knowledge of the Nova Scotia wilderness.

Cochran Writes Tale of Romance, Piracy, Witches

"SILVER SHOALS," by Hamilton Cochran. (Bobbs Merrill, $2.75.)

Reviewed by Al Chase

Against a sinister background of piracy, witchcraft, and political and religious intolerance and intrigue, the author of "Windward Passage" and "Captain Ebony" has written another exciting sea novel in which love, religion, and adventure play leading roles.

Bloodthirsty buccaneers, intolerant Puritans, avaricious kings and noblemen, lovely women, and daring mariners are involved in a dramatic search for gold and jewels in a sunken Spanish galleon off the isle of Hispaniola.

It's the romantic and exciting life story of a young Puritan, Mark Andrews, who, innocently inveigled into what looked like a love episode, flees from England to Massachusetts on an English frigate en route to the West Indies on a treasure quest.

In Boston he is urged by Cotton Mather and his father, the Rev. Increase Mather, to enter the ministry, but their persecution of the lovely slant eyed Sibyl Torni, accused of witchcraft, turns him back to Capt. Phips and his English frigate, on which Sibyl and the captain's wife are stowaways.

The treasure search is successful and after a bloody battle with pirates the frigate sails to England. The lusty skipper is knighted by the king, later becoming governor of Massachusetts. Puritan Mark, now less puritanical, gets a fortune and weds the charming Sibyl. And, of course, they all live happily ever after.

A Tender Leaf of Hope Hides in Book Shop

"TROUBLE ZONE," by Leon Dennen. (Ziff-Davis, $1.50.)

"WHAT THE INFORMED CITIZEN NEEDS TO KNOW," edited by Bruce Bliven and A. G. Mezerik. (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $3.)

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

That stout officer, Marcellus, delivered a rolling mouthful of apt syllables on the ramparts of gloomy Elsinore castle, which might well be applied to the book selling trade when he said: "Something is rotten in the state of Denmark." Here are two books put forth by their publishers "like the tender leaves of hopes"—to continue the Shakespearean motif—but how different is their fate at the hands of the booksellers.

"Trouble Zone," which is a slender volume of international dynamite is not on display in most book shops, but is secreted under counters as tho it were as explosive as its contents, while the second book, a pollyannaesque potpourri on the world and domestic situations rates window and counter displays.

Now this might be attributed to the queer cast of chance were it not for the fact that the dice are stacked with such regularity against volumes which have attempted to breast the current of internationalistic propaganda. Some volumes which attempt to tell the truth as their authors see it are hidden and brought out as surreptitiously as sex books. Whether or not one agrees with them such books should have their day on the counter before they go the way of all works on current problems to the discount tables to be pawed over by those hoping to find something for 49 cents that looks like $5.

In "Trouble Zone," Mr. Dennen, who spent nine months in 1944 for a Jewish relief organization in the Balkans and the near east, gives a picture of what he saw. The picture is not a pleasant one, but it is obvious from news columns that what is going on in the Balkans is not pleasant. He does not like British power politics, nor does he like Russia's new imperialism and old dictatorship. He feels strongly about democracy and holds that without it the Balkans will be the brewing point of World War III.

Dennen calls Yalta "a great appeasement." He holds the United States aided in the betrayal of democracy in siding with Tito, soviet puppet, against Mihailovich, in supporting the Lublin of Poles representing Russia as against the London group representing the Polish people and in aiding Maniu, another red puttet in Romania, against Romanians. He supports proposals for a federation of small nations from the Baltic to the Aegean against a Moscow federation "nailed down with bayonets and terror."

"What Every Informed Citizen Needs to Know" has an irritating title, because it carries the unmistakable implication that its editors know everything and have passed upon what others ought to know. Mr. Bliven is the editor of "New Republic," a butcher paper organ that boasted of its liberalism and is now equally active in singing hosannas for soviet Russia, which is the greatest dictatorship the world has known. Mr. Mezerik is a magazine writer and editor of a feature syndicate.

The book is a symposium of 22 articles on a variety of subjects with an equally diverse array of authors ranging up or down—the reader can take his choice from former State Secretary Stettinius to CIO President Philip Murray. It also contains an appendix giving such documents as the united nations charter, the non-existent Atlantic Charter, report of the Crimea conference, Bretton Woods agreement and the GI bill of rights. It is dedicated to Franklin Delano Roosevelt, with the statement that "his hopes and ideals are the thread which binds this book together." It might be suggested that the appendix should be studied and read; the rest is stuff that the informed citizen already knows.

Henry James

Wider Vogue Is Seen for Henry James

"THE SHORT STORIES OF HENRY JAMES," selected by Clifton Fadiman. [Random House, $3.]

Reviewed by Joe Lee Davis

If you have thought that the current revival of Henry James was a mere passing enthusiasm of the intellectuals, revise your opinion. With Clifton Fadiman behind it, this revival is certain to be a popular success. If so, the irony will be immense. The wide hearing which James sought in vain during his long and prolific career will be accorded him three decades after his death.

Fadiman's critical introduction is concise, lucid, stimulating, and discerning. He sums up "the case against James" neatly. He himself once subscribed to this case fully, he admits, because of "the shallowness of my knowledge." He held that James' work was rootless, snobbish in subject matter, narrow in emotional range, and so fussy and fastidious in style as to be well nigh unreadable, especially as the master aged in the word. [This pun sounds like Fadiman, but he isn't guilty.]

Fadiman then presents the case for James, as he now sees it. James can give us so much that we sorely need today — international vision, an awareness of the reality of good and evil, a subtler kind of social criticism than the Marxist is capable of, insight into the complexity of human motivation, a sense of the supreme importance of the individual, and an unremitting integrity in the quest for perfection.

Fadiman's selection of 17 stories strikes me as superior to that of any other anthologist of James. Instead of overemphasizing one or two of James' themes, he represents them all, and they are surprisingly various. He enables the reader to follow James' development, including something from each phase of his work from 1877 to 1909.

To each story Fadiman has appended a brief critical note. All these notes are helpful and some, such as that on "The Beast in the Jungle," are models of suggestive explication.

Lighting the Path of Seeker After Christian Truths

THE LIGHT OF FAITH," by Albert W. Palmer. [Macmillan, $1.75.]

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy

The subtitle of this little guide—An Outline of Religious Thought for Laymen—describes the purpose of the author, who in a small compass has succeeded in illuminating many of the problems that beset the thoughtful man.

Reading of the book will not make a man religious, but it will help the Christian or the seeker after the Christian experience understand the leads that Christianity has set up along the road of his quest. While the point-of-view is frankly liberal and "modernistic," the author achieves often happy synthesis between the old and the new.

Atom Books Are Much of a Sameness

"ATOMIC ENERGY IN THE COMING ERA," by David Dietz. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

"ATOM SMASHERS," by Raymond E. Yates. [Didier, $2.]

"ALMIGHTY ATOM," by John O'Neill. [Washburn, $1.]

Reviewed by John Randolph

Most of the available popular books on atoms are as alike as atoms of hydrogen. They all follow the same pattern and they all contain the same facts. What is more, they all come to the same conclusion: viz, that the world has entered the atomic age and now stands at the crossroads between, on the one hand, peace unending and no more work for the toilers, and on the other hand, imminent and instant destruction of the globe, reducing it to another ring of planetoids around the sun.

Of the books at hand, none of which contain as much information on the atom as has been published in THE TRIBUNE, the best is that by Dietz. It is the best book on atomic theory and facts for the reader unversed in physics or chemistry because it is the clearest and the most rounded.

Dietz, a Pulitzer prize winner and lecturer on science at Western Reserve university, Cleveland, O., tells the story of the growth of atomic theory in some detail. The names and the ideas of the great scientists pass in majestic review, from Democritus and Lucretius, thru Rutherford to Planck, Milliken, Einstein, Bohr, and Arthur Compton.

Dietz also tells in a clear and concise manner how the atomic bomb was developed in the United States under the terrific pressure of the war.

The book by Raymond Yates, a writer of popular science articles for newspapers and magazines, is similar in outline to the book by Dietz but it is shorter and much less comprehensive. Some may prefer it, tho, because it is easier on the brain. Its outstanding section is the part explaining the workings of the cyclotron, the biggest of the atom smashers.

The book by John O'Neill will, we believe, become a curiosity in scientific writing. It is poorly written and repetitious.

But where O'Neill really shines is in describing what he believes will be the effects of the release of atomic energy. O'Neill gives the impression that the commercial application of atomic energy is just around the corner. It will be interesting to pick up O'Neill's volume 10 years from now.

O'Neill's most interesting pages are the ones where he shows that Professors Dunning and Nier, Americans, were a full year ahead of the Germans, Hahn and Strassman, on the isolation of isotopes 235 and 238 of the uranium atom.

Much of the material in these three books is based on Smyth's "Atomic Energy for Military Purposes," the official American book on the subject.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

THIS column's lyric colleague who hides her venomous personality behind the pen name "Cyanide Sally" was reeking with wrath one day last week. She had learned on authority believed to be unimpeachable that the anguish she endured in her girlhood [c. 1890] learning all the stanzas of "Evangeline" [and reciting them to her mother's guests at tea] had been wasted.

The disillusionment came in a letter from Rousseau Van Voorhies, F. D., who uses his right name when working for his boss, the Macmillan company, but is known as "Frère Jean" to the monks of l'Abbaye de Thélème and as "Boswell" among the scholars of the Boswell institute. With the letter came a book [not published by Macmillan—if that be treason] written by his grandfather, Felix Voorhies [who dropped the Van]. The thesis of both book and letter was that the late Henry Wadsworth Longfellow had abused his poetic license by tempering with the facts.

Two days later, when the fever of her fury had subsided a little, Cyanide produced the following:

Nix on the forest primeval! The murmuring Rousseau Van Voorhies,
Doctor of total frustration, vows by the beard of his grandpa,
Vows by the whiskers of Felix, sire of his sire: "You're deluded!
Whole generations of children have wasted the hours of their childhood
Learning those Longfellow verses [kept after school if they didn't],
Droning hexameters, endless, reciting Evangeline's story,
Sobbing in sorrowful dactyls, the saga of Displaced Persons."
Hark! From his cell in the Abbaye the son of the scion of Felix
Answers the wail of the poet, protesting the poet's errata.

"That's just the beginning," said Cyanide. "Before I get thru it will be longer than Longfellow's and of course infinitely better. I shall—"

"You must rest now," the nurse told her.

We do not share Cyanide's disdain for Longfellow. We think he was pretty good in some ways, with a keen ear for rhythm, a discriminating taste in rhyming, and a reliable judgment of moral niceties—making him a safe poet for headstrong youth.

Unlike Cyanide, we do not feel that historical accuracy is a sine qua non of good narrative poetry, and if she writes any more of such stuff as that quoted above we won't print it. She will have to do her own publisher hunting—and it would serve the Macmillan people right if she picked on them.

But we must concede that the research already conducted by Dr. Van Voorhies and his grandpa, as outlined in the latter's book and the former's letter to Cyanide, merits attention.

"Dr. Van Voorhies assures me," said Cyanide, "that the very title of Longfellow's poem is wrong. The real name of the girl he wrote about was not Evangeline but Emmeline—Emmeline Labiche. And her boy friend was not Gabriel, as Longfellow makes it, but Louis—Louis Arsenault. He was one of 3,000 or more Acadians deported from Nova Scotia by the British in 1755 on charges of disloyalty.

"Longfellow has the story wrong too. He has 'Evangeline' growing old and grey as she tries thru years and years to find her 'Gabriel.' And finally, when she is a sister of mercy in Philadelphia, she finds him dying but still faithful. The shock of his death kills her too and thus they are united at last, as Shirley Temple might phrase it, and are buried together in the Catholic cemetery, as I have read in the Oxford Companion to American Literature."

"Well, the true story [Cyanide went on] is revealed by Dr. Van Voorhies and his grandpa. The lovers were not reunited in Philadelphia. They were not reunited anywhere. All that happened was that Emmeline—the one Longfellow calls Evangeline—caught up with Louis in Louisiana, where he was known as Louisiana Louis. And was his face red! He wrote Emmy a song with the refrain, 'I can't get away to marry you today—my wife won't let me.' [This is frequently attributed to another song writer, but I'm pretty sure Louis made it for Emmy.] She felt so badly about it that she went crazy, and Dr. Van Voorhies says he afterward awarded her [posthumously] his favorite degree, Frustrationis Doctor, placing the parchment on her grave under what is called the 'Evangeline Oak,' because if ever a girl was frustrated she was."

The book Van Voorhies sent Cyanide is titled "Acadian Reminiscences," published in 1907. She has not yet read all of it but she has been convinced by the Evangeline chapter that old Felix knew a great deal more about ill-fated lovers [Cyanide's own phrase] than Longfellow ever learned.

"Longfellow got his version," she said, "from a preacher who offered it first to Nathaniel Hawthorne, who didn't bother with it. So Longfellow said, 'If you really do not want it for a tale let me have it for a poem. And that's the way it was."

Millions of readers [including this bookman] have been charmed by the poem; and thousands [not including this bookman] have memorized it—in whole or in part.

In any case Longfellow's descriptions of Acadia are reliable. He based them on Haliburton's "An Historical and Statistical Account of Nova Scotia."

"EASTERN CATHOLIC WORSHIP," by Donald Attwater. [Devin-Adair, $2.50.]

Many persons, even Roman Catholics, are unaware that 8 million communicants subject to the religious suzerainty of the pope hear the mass in languages other than Latin, and that their liturgies differ in numerous and important details from the rites familiar to the western world. The languages, for example, include Syriac, Arabic, Turkish, Armenian, Greek, Slavonic, Coptic, and Ge'ez. A majority of the aforesaid 8 million receive communion standing up. In the Ethiopian liturgy the priest gives the worshiper the wine in a spoon and in the Byzantine rite the wine and the bread are together on the spoon. Mr. Attwater, a native of England and a co-founder of the Eastern Churches Quarterly, presents English translations of eight eastern liturgies, which are followed by 50 million Christians—most of them in the Eastern Orthodox churches.

Will Shinto Be Base of New Japan?

"SHINTO, THE UNCONQUERED ENEMY, Japan's Doctrine of Racial Superiority and World Conquest" [with selections from Shinto texts], by Robert O. Ballou. [Viking, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

Robert O. Ballou

Mr. Ballou has begun in this book an important service—to supply the American reader with extracts from the Shinto sacred books and historical documents from its earliest literary history [8th and 9th centuries] to the tragic present [August, 1945] that illustrate or comment on its spirit.

For these are the foundations, or the debris, upon which the new Japan must build. They furnish us with sympathetic understanding of a people that from an enemy we must come to regard as a friend. Has state Shinto, with its doctrine of race superiority and world conquest so corrupted the more humane Japanese religious teachings—I am thinking of the religious Buddhist drama—that there can be no longer any vital link with the past? For example, can the phrase "the world under one roof," found in the earliest Kojiki [Record of Ancient Matters], be made, for the Japanese imagination, to conform to the ideal of the united nations?

I wish, therefore, that the second half of the book which quotes the Japanese texts had been twice as long. The first half, the editorial summary, adds little new to the conclusions of books like Maki's "Japanese Militarism" or Tolischus' "Thru Japanese Eyes," and above all of Holton's "Modern Japan and Shinto Nationism."

That the Japanese mind today is searching anew its tradition there can be no doubt. There are other paths than the one that led to a world tragedy. Will they be found? It will be a task of the first magnitude, for the corruption caused by texts like this has gone far: "Shinto may be compared to a tree while all other religions are fertilizers."

Nature's Method of Fertilizing Is Advocated

"PAY DIRT," by J. I. Rodale. [Devin-Adair, $3.]

This nation has destroyed its soil fertility more rapidly than any other country in history. The effort to bring back the virgin richness of our earth by means of chemical fertilizers has given us increased yields but it has changed the nutritive value of our foods. Hens give us more eggs but the chemical composition of the eggs has lowered. Foods are more abundant but mankind is forced to dose itself with vitamins and cure alls to make up for these elements the foods lack.

This is the thesis of Rodale's "Pay Dirt," which pleads for a return to compost farming and gardening. Restore natural fertility and humus to the earth in nature's way by using decayed vegetable matter, he urges. The return to organic farming will help to relieve the farmer of his present great need for chemical fertilizers and will reduce the hordes of insects and varieties of diseases which have resulted from present day farming practices. A very readable and authoritative work, "Pay Dirt" has a real appeal for farmers and gardeners alike.

Career and Loves of a Vivid Genius

"THE LIFE OF THE HEART: George Sand and Her Times," by Frances Winwar. [Harper, $3.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Frances Winwar

Her tetralogy of group biographies describing the principal literary movements of 19th century England having firmly consolidated her position as a biographer, Frances Winwar is now apparently turning to more varied themes. She has already given us a book about Whitman and here is a book about George Sand.

This should surely be the optimum time for such a book to appear, and "The Life of the Heart" will be welcome if it does no more than correct the absurd and vicious caricature of George Sand recently circulated in that otherwise mildly acceptable piano recital called "A Song to Remember."

It is not necessary to admire the flamboyant Sand temperament in order to resent a great writer's being presented as the precise opposite of what she was. "For the aristocracy of the intellect she had always the deepest veneration," wrote Oscar Wilde, "but the democracy of suffering touched her more." And George Sand herself declared, "I've always loved some one more than literature, and my family more than that some one."

Joseph Shearing somewhere lays down the principle that one has no right to use the real name of a historical personage in a work of the imagination unless one intends to follow the known facts of his life with substantial faithfulness. But it would be too much to expect such austere counsel to be honored in certain quarters.

Portrait by Eugene Delacroix of George Sand in male attire. From "The Life of the Heart: George Sand and Her Times," by Frances Winwar (Harper).

The famous affair with Chopin plays its part in this book. Chopin was "family" in a sense, for George Sand was nurse and mother to him quite as much as lover. Miss Winwar gives her credit for setting him free from material worries to devote himself to composition, tho she judges her severely for breaking the bond when she did out of consideration for her son, Maurice [the real love of her life], who hated the Pole. "She . . . killed him by letting him go." "She was inexcusable for breaking a bond with a man whom she knew to be dying."

George Sand lived a revolutionary life in a revolutionary epoch. She defied every prejudice and every ideal cherished by conventionally minded people, living at first, intensely, in the life of the senses [yet never finding satisfaction there], later turning "from self to humanity," a turn which led her in three directions at once; toward a cloudy kind of mystical assurance; toward a Wordsworthian glorification of common life, as in "Fadette"; and toward an intense devotion to the proletariat which she at least called communism. She ended her life a kind of "grand old lady of literature," relic of a past age, her sins forgiven or forgotten, and honored for her devotion to the cause of humanity by successors who knew little of either her ardor or her credulity.

In commenting upon George Sand's frank letters to Alfred de Musset, Miss Winwar remarks that "it is necessary for an understanding of George Sand as of Alfred de Musset to experience the shock of seeing them not only as naked as their letters reveal them but also anatomized. . . ."

There is perhaps less anatomy in "The Life of the Heart" than one could wish. All the facts are here, drawn from the most industrious consideration of all relevant material in several languages. Here, too, is marching narrative. And the background of a lurid period has been painted in with brilliant colors. But we do not get very close to the personality itself. Or at least I do not. Not nearly so close as in Gamaliel Bradford's brief study in his "Daughters of Eve."

Source Book on Atomic Power

"URANIUM AND ATOMIC POWER," by Jack De Ment and H. C. Dake. [Chemical Publishing Co., $4.]

O, ye who talk so glibly about atomic power, as if you knew all about it, look at this book and blush. Once suppressed, this is one of the source books on the fission of uranium. It is not too tough for the layman, but only the chemist and physicist will understand it fully. It covers atomic power, the uranium minerals, prospecting for uranium minerals, the physics and chemistry of the metal, and specific methods in uranometry.

French Scholar Retells Story of Tristan-Isolde

"THE ROMANCE OF TRISTAN AND ISEULT," by Joseph Bedier. [Pantheon, $3.50.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark

In reviewing E. A. Robinson's "Tristan," which, altho it hardly seems possible, appeared almost 20 years ago, Conrad Aiken said: "These Merlins and Tristans and Isoldes and Lancelots are modern and highly self-conscious folk; they move in a world of moral and emotional subtlety which is decidedly more redolent of the age of Proust than of the age of Malory."

In sharp contrast to the American poet's psychological handling of what is unquestionably the greatest and best-known medieval love story, Joseph Bedier, the French poet and scholar, has tried, to borrow his own words, "to avoid a mixture of the ancient and the modern. To steer clear of disparities, anachronisms, and embellishments and, thru the exercise of historical understanding and critical discipline, to avoid intrusion of our modern concepts into older forms of thinking and feeling."

That, he goes on to say, "has been my aim, my effort, and no doubt, alas, my delusion." M. Bedier's modesty is exceeded only by his very evident ability to by-pass the pitfalls which he saw ahead of him.

Without intending any disparagement of Robinson's "Tristan," or implying that Tennyson, Arnold, Morris, Swinburne, Masefield, and the earlier poets should have been faithful to the several Isoldes in ways other than their own, we are yet of the opinion that M. Bedier's selection, collation, rendering, assembling, re-telling, or what you will, is the most adequate, faithful, and appealing one that we now have or are likely to have for a long, long time.

Hilaire Belloc's translation of the French text is admirable, as are Paul Rosenfeld's insertions and additions. Joep Nicolas' illustrations accentuate in no small degree both the fairy-tale starkness and the springtime loveliness of the immortal story. And outside, as well as in, "Tristan and Iseult" is a thing of beauty.

Markey Tells of Essex Role in Victory

"WELL DONE!" by Morris Markey. [Appleton-Century, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

The carrier war in the Pacific comes pretty near being the whole story of the naval fighting there, for with carriers we were enormously successful once we had enough, and with ships of the line our slow-thinking admirals were not.

"Well Done!" is Reporter Markey's able account of the activities of the 27,000 ton, 60 million dollar carrier Essex, with special reference to her participation in the Marianas "turkey shoot" of June, 1944. [Yank pilots shot down 402 Jap planes while losing 17 of their own to enemy fire. Adm. Spruance's lack of vigor in following up kicked the victory away.]

The Essex carried 2,500 men, of whom 2,400 served her 100 pilots, who were the sole reason for the existence of Essex. Her planes were Hellcats, Helldivers, and Grumman Avenger torpedo bombers which, curiously, were not used for torpedo bombing at all. That was because —altho the Japs had admirable aerial torpedoes from the first day of the war—ours were simply no good. They would not hold a true course in the water, and even if they did, they often failed to explode. So the Avengers carried bombs instead.

Reporter Markey's admiration for the naval flyers and the Essex crewmen is obvious, but also obvious is his doubt about some of the navy's admirals. [The feeling is general among returning correspondents.] He points out that no American admiral had ever engaged in a real battle before the war, and that the admirals had to take their baptism of fire along with the citizen sailor who occupies such lowly station in the service. He says:

"It is not to the glory of the navy, nor to the good of the democracy, that the right of every peacetime admiral to assume the duties and responsibilities of war was held unviolable. No admirals at all had been retired by the spring of 1945, and many who had been on inactive duty were restored to positions of high command. Men well beyond their prime were placed in critical posts and held there even when they should have been puttering quietly about a garden or writing their memoirs."

THE Murder Chart

BY DREXEL DRAKE

ENTRY	PERFORMANCE	PAY-OFF
"RUMOR HATH IT," by Christopher Hale. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Troubles converged on wealthy Mrs. Pomeroy to mar her birthday. Her spendthrift brother demanded money. Her granddaughter defied her with an unwelcome fiance. Her son and son-in-law were disappointments. Before she could change her will she was murdered. Crime had surprising repercussions.	Well planned murder puzzle. Entertaining strain of humor, along with excitement, in process of solving it.
"THE SILVER TOMBSTONE," by Frank Gruber. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.]	Ownership of Arizona silver mine so hotly disputed that lawyer was murdered. By sheer coincidence, Johnny Fletcher and Sam Cragg, impecunious sleuths, were suspects. They had to dodge police of two states while pilfering sustenance, slugging opposition, and trapping villains.	The unsolved puzzle for reader of this yarn, after shaking off delirium, is how two heroes survived all of the torment, punishment, and hardship invented by author to discourage them. Furiously wacky entertainment.
"EENIE MEENIE MINIE-MURDER," by William Beyer. [Mystery House, $2.]	Sinister interests were at cross purposes concerning jewels Alicia Forest entrusted to law firm, one member of which was mysteriously murdered in office. Cornelius Duffy, investigator, had capable help from firm's girl secretary in trailing culprit.	Aside from stilted writing, and novel opening that is hard to take, this tale has enough excitement, action, and puzzle to afford pastime.
"CASE FOR EQUITY," by Katharine Hill. [Dutton, $2.]	Lorna Donahue, real estate woman, losing way in fog, stumbled into abandoned house and found man's corpse, but when she returned with police the body had disappeared. Egged on by intuition and hunches, she persisted thru maze of complications to solution of puzzle.	Tale rambles along vaguely charted course thru succession of unconvincing situations, the amateur woman sleuth snatching at theories and creating hurdles too psychically to entice much interest.

ARE YOU STARVING ON "3 SQUARE MEALS" A DAY?

Is your body suffering the hidden hungers that keep you in a state of chronic indigestion, colds, fatique, overweight or generally low vitality?

Let Thomas Gaines, famous authority on nutrition, show you how to EAT Your Way To Better Health

Do You Know-the plain truth about these common ailments?

That "Always Tired" Feeling

You apparently get plenty of sleep. You do no strenuous work. Yet you feel utterly tired and "washed up." Why? Because improper eating may be spreading toxins throughout your body, sapping your vitality. "Protective eating", as explained by Thomas Gaines, means energy in plenty, instead of constant fatigue.

Chronic Indigestion

"Warring foods" literally explode in the stomach, cause heartburn, gas pains and fermentation. To cultivate a happy, contented digestive system, follow the harmonious food combinations given in HEALTHFUL EATING!

Colds

Cold germs seldom bring down the man or woman in tip-top health. If you catch cold easily, try the Gaines 4-day cleansing diet. It will build up your resistance to infection.

Sinus Trouble

Sinus trouble nearly always means that the laws of harmonious eating have been violated. Corrective diet often has done more to relieve its discomforts than extensive medication. (See p. 135 of HEALTHFUL EATING.)

Common Rheumatism and Arthritis

Simple mistakes in eating can cause the most acute pain and suffering, which simple corrections can do much to relieve. Note what Thomas Gaines has to say about rheumatism and arthritis.

Overweight

Did you know that you actually can reduce by eating? That certain foods have the property of using up excess weight — the safe, natural way? If you want to lose girth and poundage, follow the Gaines suggestions.

Underweight

If you don't gain weight "no matter how much you eat", the fault may be in WHAT you eat. The weight-gaining food combinations given by Thomas Gaines have "worked wonders" with thousands of underweight folk.

Why millions who think they are well fed always are half-sick because of wrong eating habits

HERE, at last, is the "protective eating" plan that thousands have begged Thomas Gaines to put into a book. As far as your health is concerned, it may prove to be the most important reading you have done in years.

For HEALTHFUL EATING will show you how GOOD FOODS CAN HURT YOU when combined incorrectly—WHY you may be eating "three square meals" a day yet literally be starving certain organs of your body. Most important of all, it shows you how A FEW SIMPLE CHANGES IN WHAT YOU EAT THE NEXT 30 DAYS can give you the dynamic, energetic health, the sense of fitness and well-being, which you want.

Why Wholesome Foods Are Not Enough

In 46 years of experiment and study, Thomas Gaines has discovered the simple secret of why WRONG FOOD COMBINATIONS can impair or even ruin your health. For, the fact is that perfectly good foods, when eaten at the same meal in wrong combinations, often starve your body of the health elements it urgently needs. These wrong food combinations create "hidden hungers" in your body making you chronically tired, nervous, subject to indigestion, frequent colds, poor vision, headaches and a host of other ailments.

Such "warring foods" form a chemical reaction in the stomach and liberate dangerous toxins which are absorbed by the blood and circulated throughout the system. The stomach becomes clogged, gas is formed, the digestive juices are blocked or dissipated. Results: stomach acidity, indigestion and acute constipation.

New Health and Strength Through The Gaines "Protective Eating" Plan

Just as wrong food selections and wrong combinations will destroy health and efficiency, so will the proper food combinations quickly restore and maintain bodily vigor and energy.

In his new book, HEALTHFUL EATING, Thomas Gaines explains in plain language how to combine foods properly. He shows you which foods cleanse your body of toxic wastes WITHOUT the use of laxative pills, which foods to avoid because they "explode" when combined in the same meal, which foods put on weight and which take it off.

The Gaines "Protective Eating" Plan is easy to follow. It calls for no self-denial, nor does it demand giving up the foods you now enjoy. All you are asked to do is to follow the few definite suggestions on proper food combination. Do this and you will be conscious almost immediately of exhilarating new vigor, new strength, a new sense of youthfulness. Many who have used the Gaines methods for only a few weeks have reported results little short of remarkable.

Can Normal World Come Out of War?

"AND THE FIELD IS THE WORLD," by Dola de Jong. [Scribner's, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

As a piece of writing, a novel, a rendering of human beings in action, "And the Field Is the World" is a little slack and a bit spotty. But the substance it treats is so menacing and so formidable that, despite its technical deficiencies, the book takes on considerable, almost solemn, importance as a document of our time.

Dola de Jong tells the story of a group of European children, assorted in age, temperament, and nationality, living as refugees in North Africa in one of the early years of the war. Taking her material from reality and her title from a verse in the Gospel of St. Matthew, the author devotes her whole book to the theme that these children are at least some of the seed with which the world-field of the future—of the present?—must be sown.

The result is a work of intense moral pressure. For all that is detailed of these homeless, rootless children, whose unguided lives include the most sordid as well as the most innocent adventures, emphasizes the ominous question: "Can a child that has been mistreated grow up into a well balanced, happy human being? Did they expect a normal world after this war had been fought to a finish?"

Tho it lacks soldiers, planes, tanks, ships, and battles, this novel is completely and truly a book of the war. Indeed, it may very well be the forerunner of a new and impressive type of war fiction, that which treats, not the direct dramatic fact of combat, but the subtler tho no less deadly social effects of total war on what were once called, almost quaintly, the "noncombatants." It is, in the atomic age, a book worth brooding about.

1,250 Pictures, 100,000 Words in 2 War Books

"WORLD WAR II. IN PICTURES," by Harry B. Henderson and Herman C. Morris, [World Publishing company, two volumes, $5.95.]

Reviewed by Ward Walker

Altho this wealth of war pictures —1,250 of them on 516 pages—is presented as an analytical history of the late war, its human interest value far transcends its historical worth.

Thru the hundred thousand words of text runs a strong thread of propaganda which will annoy a student of history and lead most readers to feel they are studying an Allied white paper. All axis bombings are "ruthless . . . savage disregard of helpless women and children." Allied bombings are described simply as "completely effective." Yet the pictures themselves illustrate graphically the basic truth that escaped the editors: all war is brutal, whether fought by American or Nazi, Russian or Jap.

These pictures start with the Japanese invasion of Manchuria. Rapidly the camera lens swings thru that first round of World War II., picks up the contemporary activities of Hitler and Mussolini, swings to the bread lines of America. The photographs have been well chosen out of more than a million negatives and their pace is swift. Volume I. covers up to Pearl Harbor day, while Volume II. chronicles the allied march to victory, including the second battle of the Philippine sea. There are picture biographies of the personalities in the war, action pictures by the hundreds, and maps to illustrate the overall strategy.

The volumes are hard to put down; you'll find yourself picking them up again and again.

2 Professors Defend Reds' Poland Grab

"POLAND AND RUSSIA, 1919-1945," by James T. Shotwell and Max M. Laserson. [King's Crown Press, $2.25.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi

The Polish question is "primarily" a territorial one, the learned authors assert, and territorial questions are, they say, "not so much questions of geography as of history." So they proceed to discuss the Curzon Line in terms of history —or what suits them to pick out of history.

Their thinly veiled purpose is to convince the reader that the new settlement imposed upon Poland is reasonable and just.

Being "primarily" interested in the history of the Curzon Line [the original temporary nature of which is conceded], they simply leave out such questions as the desires, rights, and interests of the peoples whom it throws into the soviet lap.

To justify Russia's aggression against Poland, they represent the latter as a semi-totalitarian country, never mentioning the fact that Russia herself is 100 per cent totalitarian. They picture pre-war Poland as "entirely subservient to Hitler Germany" [!] because of the Polish-German nonaggression agreement of January, 1934, without any proof but that fact offered. By the same logic, the simultaneous Polish-Russian nonaggression pact, which is not mentioned in this connection, should have made Poland "entirely subservient" to Russia, too.

No use going into further details which abound—such as the attempt to whitewash Stalin's anti-Polish alliance with Hitler by asserting, in obvious violation of the truth, that it was undertaken only after the subjugation of Poland. [By the way: is one justified in plundering a neighbor because some one else did so before?]

If the book were not signed by two professors, one would call it a piece of fraudulent propaganda, and a dull one at that. As it is, one lays it aside in amazement.

It was financed by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The gentlemen in charge of that endowment must enjoy an enviable peace of mind.

Grave Does Not Silence Voice of Dead Author

"ACROSS THE LINE," by Albert Payson Terhune and Anice Terhune. [Dryden, $2.]

Reviewed by Laurence T. Heron

Mr. Terhune, the dog story writer, wrote a fraction of this book before he died, and, according to his widow and co-author, dictated much of the remainder after he died. Its purpose is to assure mankind of the afterlife and to demonstrate, as it were, that friends and relatives who are said to be dead are in fact right on hand much of the time and are able to communicate. Of the sincerity and truthfulness of Mrs. Terhune, there can be no doubt. For that reason the book is a significant document, whatever interpretation you may put upon the experiences she relates.

Some of the old friends whom Mr. Terhune found "across the line" [that separates the living from the so-called dead] are, as you might suspect, dogs. Moreover, he assures Mrs. Terhune of the transmigration of souls. There are other statements, too, that will send most theologians of most Christian denominations scurrying for cover if they accept as factual the glimpses of the heavenly kingdom purported to have been conveyed to Mrs. Terhune by her late husband.

THE FASCINATING NEW WAY TO WIN POISE · POWER · PERSONALITY

Make Your Conversation

Bring More Poise, Individuality and Progress ... This Quick, Interesting Way!

HOW we modern Americans dislike to be bored! We are indeed an active lot of people! We like entertainment, sports and adventure. One night we are off to the movies. The next night we play bridge. Even when we do spend an evening at home, we must turn on the radio. Anything, you see, to escape from boredom.

But a very significant change has taken place, and is continuing. Unquestionably, the war has been a factor; possibly the new trend is simply a natural reaction.

All over America thinking people are beginning to weary of the terrific rush ... the incessant high speed ... the endless round of bright lights, the feverish quest for diversion. Too many movies, too much bridge . . . too much running around . . . what, they ask, can be more boresome than that?

Interesting Conversation . . . the Secret

The result is that more and more intelligent Americans are beginning to relax. They are finding a new happiness. They are turning to the finer things of life. And that is leading to an ever widening desire for conversation.

True, not every man or woman knows the art of good conversation. But that's simply all the more reason why the interesting talker is so welcome in this new world of ours. He brings enthusiasm with him. Sparkle! Entertainment! Thrills! No more silly gossip about the neighbors . . . no more stupid remarks about the weather . . . no more tedious tales of family trouble. Instead, bright, sparkling words that arouse attention and quicken the imagination.

You know, through your own observation, that good talkers always win attention. They command respect! They quickly become not only popular, but often very influential. All of which directly helps them to win the good things of life —while others are still vainly wishing for them.

Resolve now that you, too, will win. Decide now—this very day!—that you will take the first step by finding out how to become a good conversationist.

Just a Few Simple Rules

Conversation has certain fundamental rules and principles—just like any other art. The good talkers whom you admire know these rules and apply them whenever they converse. Learn the rules and make your conversation brighter, more entertaining and impressive. When you have learned the magic power of words, you may find yourself becoming more popular and winning new friendships in the business and social worlds.

The Famous Ethel Cotton Conversation Course

Several years ago a woman famous in adult education had a revolutionary idea. Impressed by the fact that thousands of men and women were needlessly retarding their progress through lack of good conversational ability, she decided to help them.

The result was the famous Ethel Cotton Conversation Course, a remarkably simple plan through which thousands have discovered powers of conversation they never dreamed they possessed. Indeed, many have written that their very lives have been transformed—they've opened the gates to new and fuller lives, rich with opportunity and golden promise.

The woman's name is Ethel Cotton. You may have heard her over stations of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Formerly, only those living in such cities as New York or San Francisco could enjoy the benefits of Miss Cotton's now nationally famous Conversation Course. Today, the full Course, consisting of twelve thrilling lessons and twelve personal "Studio Talks" from Miss Cotton, is available by mail.

Countless students who have taken the Conversation Course tell us they have found nothing like it. They say that it is not only intensely practical, but also exciting and inspiring.

French Girl Picks a Man of Her Race

"HER OWN PEOPLE," by Grace Tomkinson. [Ives Washburn, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Here's a steady, unpretentious, extremely satisfying novel. "Her Own People" is the story of a French-Canadian girl, Rosalie, and of her simultaneous romances with the prize young man of her own village and with the glamorous school teacher of the English settlement.

These two men—Laurent and Talmadge—stand for the every day reality versus the romantic escape; more than that, they represent for the girl two possible ways of life, whose separate patterns and mutual interweavings are accurately established and clarified in the fine treatment of both French-Canadian and English communities.

Seduced by Talmadge and by all that he symbolizes, Rosalie nevertheless returns to Laurent, and remains, with what seems genuine conviction and with the promise of a rugged happiness, one of "her own people."

The novel begins slowly, yet achieves at once that genial warmth one often finds in work which builds in, by rich and solid touches, a whole background of people and place. Then gradually, over the immediate interest, there is developed a remarkable tension; and the book ends in high, driving drama.

As a serious treatment of French-Canadian life, "Her Own People" will inevitably be contrasted to that gentle minor classic, "Maria Chapdelaine." Grace Tomkinson's writing lacks the inwardness, the quiet beauty, and above all, the spirituality which distinguished that work of Louis Hemon. But in its own fine feeling for character, in its abundant humor and real vitality, and in its informed rendering of relatively neglected material, "Her Own People" stands up as an unusually rewarding book.

Handy Reference on All Countries of the Americas

"THE PAN AMERICAN YEARBOOK, 1945," compiled by Pan American Associates. [Macmillan, $5.]

Reviewed by Arthur Bergholz

This is the first issue of what will be an annual guide to the essential information concerning all the nations of the western hemisphere. The business man, commercial traveler, tourist, and student will find it indispensable for quick reference to facts which are important to his purposes.

The arrangement of material is excellent. Part one presents a succinct analysis of the broad historical, geographic, economic, and political developments which shape the course of current events within the countries under discussion. Part two treats separately each of the 22 nations which comprise the two Americas. A uniform outline is used thruout. In the case of each nation the following facts are covered: history, geography, people, culture, government, economy, official trade, control-government operations, finance, travel and transportation, communications, cities and markets, organizations, and a supplementary bibliography.

The final section of the work covers the names of more than 25,000 established firms and individuals with their addresses. These are grouped into 13 major industries, such as consumer goods, raw materials, oil and mining, etc., and subclassified alphabetically by country. Every sensible arrangement is utilized to make the material quickly accessible.

The volume represents an achievement in coöperative scholarship in the acquisition of important facts and in making them available for present uses.

Fabulous Story of Fabulous Tot Told by Herself

"MY YOUNG LIFE," by Shirley Temple. [Garden City, $2.]

Reviewed by Mae Tinee

What were you doing when you were three years old? You don't know? A fine thing, — Shirley Temple remembers the day the movie scout picked her out of a group at dancing school at that advanced age.

Shirley Temple

She tells, in proper schoolgirlish fashion, about her life from that point onward in this brief volume in which pictures outweigh type by an easy 4 to 1. It's a fabulous tale set in the fabulous world of the movies, starring a plump, dimpled tot who earned well over two million dollars between the ages of 5 and 12, retired for a brief time, married at 17, and now has a contract for another five year's screen work.

Her mother was paid $1,000 a week for her care of the child at the studio and the combing of her famous 56 curls. Shirley had, in addition, a private tutor, a publicity man, a body guard and a photographer, her own bungalow on the Fox lot, a collection of over 1,500 dolls kept in air-conditioned cases, a speaking acquaintance with hundreds of celebrities and millions of fans all over the world.

However, she still thinks that some things are "super" or "divine," her favorite expression is "jiminy" and she wants to "go on making pictures as long as people want to see me on the screen." I can see why, can't you?

Real Hawaii Sits for Its Portrait

"CALABASHES AND KINGS," by Stanley D. Porteus. [Pacific Books, $3.50.]

As Dr. Porteus points out, many, many books have been written about Hawaii, and more will be as men continue to discover this most romantic part of America. His purpose in adding another book to the list is twofold. The first is purely personal—a release from the dry writings of his profession as psychologist, and an expression of the love he holds for the land he now calls home. The second is a desire to introduce to the world the real Hawaii—not the overcolored paradise of the steamship ads; not the fascist breeding ground of the books dissecting the sugar empires, but the amazing, varied, normal community that has its evil along with its good, its rainbows along with its deserts, its simple saints, and its exaggerated sinners. Dr. Porteus has done an amiable job of it, and his book is a thorogoing, readable introduction to a territory most of us really know little about.

These Books Show Alaska to Readers

"ALASKA: PROMYSHLENNIK AND SOURDOUGH," by Stuart Ramsay Tompkins. [University of Oklahoma Press, $3.]

Reviewed by Mason Warner

Such a sales killing title can be excused only by the desire of a university press to be aloof from the profit making motive. The author clarifies when he describes the promyshlennik as "a counterpart of the coureurs de bois."

"Alaska" is worth reading. After receiving his Ph. D. degree from the University of Chicago, Dr. Tompkins was superintendent of schools in Yukon territory. He is an erudite authority on Russian history, writes with adequate equipment of research and personal experience, and tells the romantic story of Alaska from the time of the first explorers to the building of the Alcan highway.

Twenty-seven photographic illustrations and eight maps add to the attractiveness of a well made 350-page book.

"OPPORTUNITY IN ALASKA," by George Sundborg. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

Thousands of ex-service men and others considering Alaska as a possible home in the future will welcome this book by a man who has lived on our last frontier.

A section of the book is titled "A Thousand Careers in Ten Chapters," and in it are discussed the opportunities in forest industries, agriculture, live stock raising, the fisheries, mining, hunting and trapping, construction, transportation, the tourist trade, in business, the professions and service occupations.

This reviewer's knowledge of Alaska is only that of the casual tourist. Desiring to avoid the responsibility of approving an appraisal of the country for prospective settlers, he referred the book to Clyde C. ["Slim"] Williams, explorer, fur trader, musher mail carrier—a man who really knows Alaska—who reported: "That book is right. It doesn't paint too rosy a picture. Alaska IS a land of opportunity, but you've got to have the physique and the spirit of the pioneer to make good. Money helps, too."

"AN ARTIST SEES ALASKA," by Henry Varnum Poor. [Viking Press, $3.50.]

"Profusely illustrated" would be gross understatement applied to this book. Not only does the artist see Alaska, but his numerous sketches and entertaining text make it possible for the arm chair traveler to do likewise.

Mr. Poor was assigned by the war department to make a pictorial record of the war in the Far North and extracts from his diary while on the job form a large contribution to his book.

BAD MEN OF DELIGHT

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1945: Frederick R. Bechdolt)

INSTALMENT IV.

WATCHING his tall figure receding thru the doorway, she began to wonder if perhaps it might be that he was the man who had sent for her. She remembered her grandfather then, her father's father whose name had never been mentioned in the family. In those wild days of the early 90s more than one young rider had left the country between sunset and sunrise. This would account for the silence of her father. And when she had arrived so near the truth she recalled some of the stories which she had read of Bill Pope's mysterious disappearance. She had noticed him watching her on the stage this afternoon, and he must have followed her from the stage station to the Boot Hill cemetery, where he had pursued the man who fired that shot. Now his apparent solicitude for her seemed to have a reason. He was reputed to be a rich man, and her benefactor would be wealthy. There wasn't any doubt of that.

There was, she reminded herself, no use in questioning Harvey Furlong about this. On that first evening when he came to the sheep wagon, he had instructed her to bide her time for some reason or other which she couldn't understand. But there wasn't anything to forbid her from speculating during the meanwhile. The more she thought of it, the more likely it seemed that her lost grandfather was the man who had endowed her, and that she had just met him face to face.

And while her speculations were straying into this perilous bypath which was so near the truth, Bill Pope was seeking the man called Vilas in the big adobe mansion on the ridge above the Antelope Butte Stage station.

Aside from the Mexican laborers and the handful of middle aged Apaches who hadn't gone to war, the population in this section consisted mainly of transplanted easterners. These latter had readily accepted the printed word concerning Pope's house guest.

He was, according to accounts, an invalid whom the picturesque westerner had known during his wanderings. His appearances were seldom and there was nothing in the sight of a man in a wheel chair to excite curiosity. The only ones who didn't take this pair at face value were two or three old men who were living at the county seat, and so it came that the man called Vilas was always in the background, which was precisely what he wanted.

Like Bill Pope, the big house on the ridge was—as Harvey Furlong would have put it—one of the sideshows which attracted lettuce farmers and wealthy shed men from the Salt River valley to the Antelope Mesa Stage station during such week-ends as gas rationing permitted. Externally it did not live up to the air of mystery which was supposed to enwrap it. For the doors and windows opened to the outside after the old Spanish fashion. And no visitors were allowed to discover one remarkable feature of its interior architecture which would have aroused plenty of speculation.

Of the doors which opened on the outer world there was one of heavy oak planks, and when Bill Pope unlocked it, an electric light came on within. He passed down a narrow hall whose walls were blank. The door at the further end was as heavy as the outer one. In its center there was a wicket which was guarded by iron bars. He pressed a button and, after he had waited for a full minute, the grill swung open. Beyond lay darkness. A voice said:

"I was beginning to think you'd died." It was a high pitched voice and it was as hard and thin as a taut steel wire. The wicket went shut, the door swung open exactly like the portal of a bootleg bar. It was, in fact, the exact replica of one entrance which had withstood the assaults of federal prohibition agents in a middle west metropolis thruout prohibition.

The room behind it occupied one-half of a square space which was enclosed by the rest of the house. The other half of that space was an unroofed patio. And the walls surrounding both were without door or window, excepting the one entrance.

The roof was large, the rugs on the hardwood floor were expensive Orientals. There were two paintings on the walls, nudes both of them. The chairs were luxurious. There was a small dining table at one end and a silver service on a buffet nearby. A set of parallel bars and one of those pulley contraptions which men use in conditioning themselves, were out of keeping with the soft furniture. The wheel chair was by the door but it was empty.

The man called Vilas was on his feet. A thin film of perspiration covered his face, and he was breathing deeply.

"That washout held us up. I thought I'd never get off my back. It's taken me half an hour to limber up again." His naturally thin voice was sharpened. It was evident that his nerves were on edge. "Well, what about that woman? Or did she give you the slip?"

If you had heard him then you would have cherished no doubts as to who was master of the big house on the ridge. Bill Pope was thinking, "He is scared all right, and meaner than usual." Aloud, he said.

"I had a talk with her a little while ago. She says she has come here on business and she is to meet a man."

"Where is she now?" Vilas interrupted.

Pope's face remained unmoved, but the calmness was only skin deep.

"She is," he replied, "staying at the stage station. She is registered under the name of Barbara Curry. The number of her cabin is 16. It is the last one up the hill." He was on the point of telling of his two attempts upon her life but he reflected on the fact that the man whom he was facing wasn't in a mood to forgive failure and he held his peace.

Vilas thrust out his heavy underlip. Bill Pope noticed that the lip was quivering ever so lightly, and when the other spoke he detected a quiet purpose in the thin voice, far uglier than the irascibility which had preceded it.

"Okay. "We'll have to get rid of her tonight."

The man called Vilas dropped into an easy chair and, while he sat there with his underlip thrust out, Bill Pope rolled a cigaret. The silence lasted until he had smoked it half way down. Then the feeling that there was something out of joint in this affair got the best of him. He said,

"This girl's not hard boiled." He dropped his cigaret into an ash tray and stroked his long moustache. "I had a talk with her down in the lounge. She's smart all right but she don't talk like a woman that would chase a man three years to play even with him."

The man called Vilas laughed unpleasantly.

"Sure, she's smart, and you're not the first old goat that fell for that trustful line she dishes out. Her name's not Barbara Curry. It's Leola Burke, and she used to be my secretary." He sighed regretfully. A man has few secrets from his secretary and less from his mistress, and the woman of whom he spoke had operated in both capacities. There was another interval of silence while Pope occupied himself with the manufacture of a second cigaret.

Vilas said, "I suppose you figure it that she's been following me more than three years just because she misses me."

They had fallen into one of those errors which, a little plain speaking might have straightened out, but such talk demands friendship, and their alliance lacked this. For one of them the big house on the ridge was as a jail, and the wheel chair was an implement of unrefined torture. For the other, the irritability of his enforced companion was a constant affront. But in the moment of crisis each was certain that he could depend on the other—because both of them had to.

"I have been figuring on something like this ever since we met," Vilas went on. "That's why I had you hide my car in the old barn at the other end of town when I came here, and keep the batteries charged. That hearse I'm using now would be picked up at the first gas station, and every highway cop between here and Yuma has stopped your roadster."

"It's come to that?" Bill Pope asked disconsolately.

"It's come to that." Vilas' voice held a note of assurance. "We're going to get rid of her and clear out. And don't get it into your head that I'm going to leave you behind. One mistake of that sort was enough for me. When I stage this disappearance it's going to be complete." He lay back in the easy chair and flexed his big arm muscles. "Would she be in her cabin now?"

"She was in the lounge when I left." Pope's voice was still heavy with regret.

"Cheer up," Vilas bade him. "You don't want to go to jail any worse than I do. We will continue our beautiful friendship, because if we parted, neither of us could trust the other any further than you can throw a bull by the tail."

"How are you going to handle her?" Pope asked.

"She's looking for a shakedown," the thin voice murmured. "She always did like money. That's why she played along with me in the old days. If she hasn't come back to her cabin now, she'll be there soon. And she'll be willing to talk business. All she'll ask is everything I've got. But a punch on the jaw leaves no mark. The cabin's within a hundred feet of our garage. We can carry her up here. Run one of our cars back and forth over her. Load her into it and dump her out on the highway."

Pope said nothing but his face was not receptive. Vilas smiled.

"Willful and premediated murder is what the law calls it, I believe. It takes brains to carry it out without pulling a boner. You always can put up a great front, Bill, but you're like some ham actors that I've run across. You are plain dumb. I will handle this myself."

"I have been thinking," Bill Pope said, "that there is a hitch somewhere along the line. It's three years since you faded out of the picture back east and now she shows up. 'Pears to me she'd of needed help to track you down."

"If you do that again," Vilas told him calmly, "I will begin to believe that you have something besides bone to hold your ears apart." He rose from the chair and paced back and forth across the room. He said, "I should have been the one who thought of that." He took another turn across the floor.

"Martin!" He murmured the name as if he loved it. There was another interval of silence while he continued walking, and Pope rolled his third cigaret. Vilas said:

"I must be slipping."

"Martin had good references," Pope interposed. "I checked on them."

"He was in Tuscorora," Vilas said. "He didn't belong in a small town. Good references are a dime a dozen if you know the angles. He was right on hand when our old driver quit us. A smart guy, and the only man in this end of the state who was ready to take a job! Two weeks ago you found him prowling around in the hallway. He said the outer door was ajar and he'd dropped in to see what was there. We fell for that! This noon we let him drive us down to the railroad station because he said he had an express package coming. He was in the depot for five minutes after the train got in. Plenty long enough to have a word with her. We have got to work fast before those two move in on us. Go to your room and wait. I'll let you know when I need you."

After the door had closed behind his ally he went to a closet and took several garments from the hangers—a pair of overalls, a denim work jacket, a cheap khaki shirt, a pair of heavy shoes. The overalls were old and they were stiff with lubricating grease. The shirt was sweat stained and the jacket was stained with oil. He found a hat on the closet shelf. It looked as if some one had dropped it into a garage repair pit and walked on it. After he had gotten into the disreputable clothes he rubbed his hands on the legs of the overalls until they were black and smudged his face with the soiled grease. He ran his fingers thru his hair.

He had worn these cast off garments a good many times since he had come here. Always at night, and the wanderings which had often kept him abroad until the eastern sky was paling had given him his only escape from a claustrophobia which threatened to drive him mad. One who knew him well would need to look closely now to recognize the wheel chair invalid.

There had been a time when he believed that no one takes a second glance at a greasy mechanic on the street, but whenever he made up for this part now, he recalled an unpleasant encounter, proving that there were exceptions. It had happened on a sunny December morning more than three years ago when he met Bill Pope face to face. From that meeting had been born the big house on the ridge, the wheel chair invalid, and Bill Pope's new lease on prosperity. Altho the benefits of this alliance were mutual, the memory of Pope's recognition never failed to remind Vilas of the necessity for caution.

When he emerged from the front door, he stood close to the wall for a few moments and he looked about him. The moon had just appeared above the ragged mountains behind the town. A few tall, giant cacti stood out black against the sky. The silver light was creeping down the hillside among the sable shadows. Vilas sucked in the dry air of the desert as eagerly as a thirst victim sucks water from a cool spring, and while he was enjoying the first deep draught he heard a footfall.

A man appeared around the corner of the house, and, as the dark figure passed into the moonlight, his face showed plainly. It was the thin wise face of Martin, the driver of the black sedan.

There were two routes from the house on the ridge to the town beneath it. One was a road which led off from the garage driveway and the other was a path which took a short cut among the guest cabins on the hillside. Martin passed within 20 feet of the spot where Vilas was standing and hurried down the winding trail. Vilas waited beside the wall and watched.

Beginning its descent the path took a long loop, for the hillside was steep here, and the swing of the loop leveled off on a narrow bench where cabin 16 stood. Vilas fully expected to see Martin turn aside to the cabin door, but the man went on without slackening his pace.

A moment of indecision followed. There was no light in the cabin windows. Wait here for the return of the woman or follow this suspect? It occurred to the watcher that if the pair were going to meet they would pick a more sequestered spot, and he went on, more confident than ever that he was shadowing his quarry to a rendezvous.

There is no time so illy suited to the art of shadowing a man as night. For, even in the moonlight, the quarry has frequent chances to disappear, and the sound of the shadow's footfall is likely to rouse suspicion sooner or later, during the hours when few persons are abroad. So Vilas had to lurk far in the rear and he was walking softly. The man in front passed the Antelope Mesa Stage station in the full glare of its lights. The man behind lost time in making a detour outside the radiance. They came into the wide main street which was unlighted and followed it for a few blocks. Then the quarry whipped around a corner into the by-street where Harvey and Barbara had listened to La Golondrina. A moment later Vilas reached the corner, but Martin had vanished.

Vilas kept on. The dirt roadway was deeply rutted and once he stumbled so badly that he was near to falling on his face. The little street came to a dead end a few yards further on. He was thinking that Martin had given him the slip and he was cursing himself for his slackness when he remembered a pathway leading off to the left.

The trail had once been a road, but that was many years ago. It was on the bottom land at the foot of the hill and the mesquite grew tall here. There were stretches where the darkness was thick and there were open spaces where the light of the full moon revealed every small detail. Vilas had come this way once before and he knew the windings of the path. He knew what lay at its end and he realized that Martin had been putting his spare moments to good use during these last three weeks.

When he reached the last thicket before the road spread to the width which it had held in the old days when it had been a street, he halted. On one side of the open space which lay before him there was a ruined adobe, and beyond it, a low stone building. On the other side there was a shed whose walls were of stone. The near end of the shed had been enclosed. The door of the closed portion was padlocked. Bill Pope had come here once a week to start the motor of the car within and keep it running until the batteries were charged. Vilas' respect for Martin rose and his slight respect for Bill Pope diminished as he pictured the former following the latter hither.

There was an old telegraph pole before the stone building across the street. Martin was standing beside it and Leola Burke was with him.

Leola Burke was wearing the same dark blue slacks which Vilas had described to Pope before the stage left Tuscorora. The pair were near the spot where Vilas was lurking and he could catch nearly every word they said.

Martin was saying, "I've got to get back to the house before they miss me. Where are the others?"

"They've been sweating it out in Tuscorora all day," Leola told him. "I couldn't get to a phone until three hours ago but they shoved off right away."

"I don't like amateurs," Martin said. "You can't depend on them."

"Two years in prison," the woman's voice had hardened, "and their lawyers cleaned them of their last thin dime. If you'd been left out on a limb like that and you could get most of it back by playing even with the rat that gave you the double cross, you'd be dependable, wouldn't you?"

"I am," he reminded her dryly, and she laughed.

"I made sure of that before I looked you up. It's been a year since I cut you in on the deal and this is the first chance we've had to talk things over since. Let's get down to business. They know I'm here."

He nodded. "I heard Pope get his orders and I saw him make the stage."

"He tried to drown me, but he picked the wrong woman." She described the affair in the dip and when she had finished, Martin announced:

"I made impressions of both locks in the hall and got keys. It's up to you now. His car is in that shed. You folks can shake him down or hijack him. I'm thru." He produced two flat keys from his pocket and dropped them into her hand.

"You don't like the rough stuff?" she asked coldly; and he answered promptly.

"I don't want any part of it. I told you that when we made our bargain and I've lived up to my end."

"We'll handle ours," she assured him, "and you'll get your cut." He took her hand and shook it. He said:

"If I hadn't been sure of that from the start, I wouldn't be here now."

"Those quarters you got for me," Leola told him, "aren't so bad. I'll go back and get a bit of rest. It's been a long day——"

Vilas stole away as quietly as he had come.

What Has Gone Before

Barbara Curry is herding sheep in the Utah uplands, struggling to prevent foreclosure of the ranch her father left her. A stranger, a soldier on leave, brings news that she has a benefactor who arranged with him to open an account for her at the local bank. She is to visit Delight to meet her benefactor. Barbara wonders whether she wouldn't be willing to trade her good fortune for a chance to meet this stranger again. About to board a stage for Delight, she is thrilled to have pointed out to her a famous western character, Bill Pope. Bill is sitting in a chauffeur-driven sedan beside a man in a wheel chair. The man recognizes a woman wearing blue slacks and about to enter the stage and orders Pope to follow her and get rid of her. A flash flood engulfs the stage. Pope mistakes Barbara for the woman and attempts to drown her. Harvey Furlong, the stranger, rescues her. As he shows her the town a bullet barely misses her. Pope explains the bullet as a Mexican's careless shot. Harvey arranges for Barbara to stay at the stage station and meets Jim Curry, Barbara's grandfather, formerly known as Brazos.

Who ever Heard of Buying an Encyclopedia This Way?

HERE'S a funny situation. Nearly everyone admits he should have a good encyclopedia in his home, but not one home in a hundred has one! Yes, it's a funny situation, but the joke is on the publishers of encyclopedias—not on the public.

Some years ago, when we became the authorized publishers of the famous Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia, we realized that there was something radically wrong somewhere. Here is what we did.

First, we decided to make the price of the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia so low that anyone would recognize it as the most remarkable bargain of its kind ever offered.

Second, we decided to offer the first volume of the set for only the cost of mailing it. What we did, really, was to offer a free sample volume so that anyone interested could see how the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia was printed and bound and how the articles were treated editorially. In short, we decided that the Funk & Wagnalls 27-volume New Standard Encyclopedia had to sell itself, and strange as it may seem, it has succeeded beyond our most optimistic hopes. Evidently the American public knows a bargain when it sees one.

We now make you the same astonishing offer which has been accepted by so many thousands of others. We are now on press with our new Winter 1945 set of this famous encyclopedia, which in previous editions sold over fifteen million volumes. We want to send you Volume 1 of the set. Merely send us 10c to cover our mailing costs. The only obligation on your part is that, if you do not want the rest of the set you merely drop us a postcard saying so, and that ends the matter. You keep Volume 1 with our compliments no matter how you decide.

Some Facts About The Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia

We will enclose with Volume 1 a pamphlet giving the facts to show that this is one of the finest encyclopedias anyone can buy for home use—unsurpassed by any other at any price.

In the meantime, we want to give you a few of those facts to interest you in taking the trouble to send for Volume 1.

The new 1945 edition contains over 52,000 articles. Compare this with any other encyclopedia in the world. You will find that it is at least 30% more than encyclopedias costing you up to six times as much as ours.

Each volume (comprising about 500 double-columned pages) contains over a quarter of a million words—over 7,000,000 words in all—which will give you some idea of the completeness of coverage of each subject.

Each volume is as up-to-date as human ingenuity can make it. This edition has been revised to cover events of the past year, and each volume, as it goes to press, is brought finally up-to-the-minute. Our unique book-a-week delivery plan, bringing you the volumes as they come off the presses, makes it the most up-to-date of encyclopedias.

Easy-Reading, Handy Volume

Editor-in-Chief of the original edition was Frank H. Vizetelly, the beloved "Viz" of radio fame, and editor of the unexcelled Funk & Wagnalls New Standard (unabridged) Dictionary. Surrounded by a host of authorities in many fields, he brought this immense work into being.

Yet the books are easy to read! Your children in grammar and high school can use them with profit. Free of abstruse wording and dry-as-dust-specialist attitude—and free also of concise fact-omitting brevity—this grand encyclopedia will be your rainy evening companion for many years to come.

And, in spite of their enormous contents, each volume can be held in one hand! Here is a new, streamlined, usable set that is attractive, interesting, and handy for daily reference.

Nor does the incredibly low price we have set on the remaining volumes indicate the quality of materials and labor that went into the set. We have used a high-grade book paper, cover board, and cloth. The printing is clear-cut, and the binding has been done by one of the largest firms in the field. These are first quality books, as of course you will soon see for yourself.

Unique, Book-A-Week Plan

Our plan, tested and approved by many thousands, gives you the books as quickly as they come off the presses.

Volume I. is delivered to you immediately. Two weeks later, unless you cancel your reservation, the next two volumes are mailed to you. Two weeks after that the following two volumes are sent, and so on. You thus receive your volumes, freshly off the press, at the rate of a volume a week.

You do not pay for any books in advance. We enclose a bill with each two volumes which you pay within five days after receiving the books. Considering the amazingly low price of the set and the fact that you pay for it at the rate of only a book a week, our pay-as-you-go plan therefore puts no strain on any pocketbook.

How much are the volumes! Here's the surprise. You pay only 89c per volume, plus 11c mailing cost. The complete set thus costs you only a fraction of what other high-grade encyclopedias cost—and we want only to prove that ours is unexcelled for your use.

De Luxe Edition If You Prefer

For those who desire an especially attractive binding, we have prepared a de luxe edition—bound in dark blue leather-grained material, stamped in red and gilt, with page-tops harmoniously stained, and with head and tail-bands. End-papers and frontispieces are excellent reproductions in color of wood cuts by a world-renowned artist, the frontispieces being a collection of woodcut portraits of American Presidents.

Remember that the contents of both regular and de luxe editions are exactly the same—only the bindings are different. Volume 1 in both editions, for instance, contains 32 full-page maps in full color showing every state and nation in the world. Although you may have volume 1 in your choice editions for the same 10c, the balance of the volumes in de luxe edition will cost you somewhat more (1.39 per volume, plus 11c mailing cost) since they cost more to make. . . . We want to make perfectly clear what you are getting.

DON'T DELAY! Please print clearly your name and address and do not forget to indicate your choice of regular or de luxe editions. Mail the coupon today to Unicorn Press, 80 Willoughby St., Brooklyn 1, New York.

Victory Loan Drive Finds Women Ready

By Eleanor Page

A large group of women who have been working together closely and successfully during war loan drives of the last four years is ready for its final endeavor. They are members of the women's division, Chicago and Cook County War Finance committee, which has accumulated bond sales in seven war loan drives exceeding $1,360,000,000.

It was during the week before Christmas, immediately following Pearl Harbor, that the division was organized with Mrs. John Alden Carpenter as chairman, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf as vice chairman, and Mrs. Jacob Baur as head of the advisory committee. At a luncheon in the Arts club last week, Mrs. Wolf, who became chairman in the fall of 1942, urged that all of the 50,000 volunteers who are participating in the current Victory loan campaign remain at their posts thru the Christmas holidays, right to the end of the drive, Dec. 31, despite the temptations of holiday festivities and returning husbands and sons, so that the drive will go over the top of its $608,260,000 goal.

The division believes that the current drive is particularly a woman's one, as the money will be used for constructive purposes instead of for the tools of war. The funds will be used to provide medical care and hospitalization for the wounded; to rehabilitate and re-train veterans; for mustering-out pay; and to pay for the commitments under the GI Bill of Rights.

Mrs. Vivian K. Bennett of the treasury, who has a quick head for figures, added another vital factor for bringing the drive to a successful conclusion, that of fighting inflation. Women can play a large role in this battle, she explained in pertinent statistics. Women are the owners or beneficiaries of 85,000,000 of the bonds outstanding; women own 60 per cent of the nation's wealth and spend 85 per cent of the consumer dollar, she said. Therefore women can keep prices down.

As an example of how bond sales have redistributed the nation's wealth, Mrs. Bennett stated that in 1940, 90 per cent of the people owned but 10 per cent of the nation's wealth, while now that 90 per cent owns four times as much.

The most entertaining speaker at the luncheon was Mrs. Baur, who, while promising not to bring up the subject of politics, nevertheless wanted to say that a certain club, represented by her hat [decorated in large gray elephants], had sold more than one million dollars worth of bonds. Another luncheon guest who has become much in demand as a treasury speaker, altho she was silent at that meeting, was Mrs. Peter Kastelyn, a pretty, fair complexioned woman, who has been in charge of the south Chicago communities. Her two children, Donald, 16, and Mary Roberta, 12, have contributed their efforts and talents to the war loan drives by taking over their mother's household burdens when she was on war finance committee business, an arrangement they suggested when Mrs. Kastelyn was approached to become a volunteer.

Two musical events on the war bond program were announced by Mrs. Leo Cummings, head of the Catholic division, and Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, one of Mrs. Wolf's vice-chairmen. The latter hopes to arrange a gala concert later this winter, while Mrs. Cummings said that the famed Paulist choristers again had consented to make their annual Christmas concert a treasury benefit. It will be given Dec. 17 in Orchestra hall.

Mrs. Wolf was scheduled as a speaker at the opening of the second annual Chicago Horse show Friday night in the Coliseum, which was designated as "Victory Loan Night." The show is continuing thru this week, and with all boxes sold and a heavy demand for seats, it promises to be a profitable venture for the returning war veterans' fund of the American Legion, which will receive the proceeds.

Mrs. Baur will be on her feet at another occasion planned for this week, a luncheon meeting of the

Mrs. William E. Thoresen, who is on the executive committee for the annual benefit bridge party and luncheon of the women's board of the La Rabida Jackson Park Sanitarium, which will be given tomorrow at the Congress hotel. Advance reservations indicate that the party will be a sell-out. The proceeds of the party will be used to take care of children with heart disease.

Mrs. Leon Mandel, whose husband is a director of the Chicago Horse Show association, will attend several performances of the second annual Chicago Horse show now in progress in the Coliseum. The huge show, with $60,250 offered in cash prizes, opened Friday and will continue thru next Sunday, with evening performances daily, and matinees this afternoon, and next Saturday and Sunday.

Park Ridge School to Entertain Men's Committee Sunday

Members of the men's committee will be entertained by the Park Ridge School for Girls and its directors' board at an open house from 3 to 6 o'clock next Sunday. They will be taken on a tour of the classrooms and the cottages where the students live, and the girls studying domestic science will prepare and serve a supper for the guests. The men's committee, of which Ward W. Dayton is chairman, serves in an advisory capacity on financial matters.

The Park Ridge School for Girls is a home as well as an educational institution. Its students are all dependent girls, most of them from broken homes.

Mrs. Griswold A. Price, president of the board, will head the reception committee at the party. She will be assisted by Mrs. William H. Emery, Mrs. Henry B. Freeman, Mrs. Warren Conable, Mrs. Lee Lundell, Mrs. J. H. Riemenschneider, Mrs. John Harrison, Mrs. Richard T. Cragg, Mrs. Burt J. Denman, Mrs. Herbert Mulford, Mrs. Herbert J. Watt, Mrs. Roy C. Ingersoll, Mrs. Arthur H. Peters, Mrs. Howard Lungren, Mrs. John B. McKoane, Mrs. Ralph C. Denton, and Mrs. David Brannin.

Fashions and Fancy

[Tribune Photo]

The moss green suit with matching off the face hat which is being worn this fall by Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr. is a perfect background for the little red feather she wears pinned to one lapel as the badge of a Community and War Fund donor as well as a fund volunteer worker. As co-chairman of the women's special gifts division of the fund, she was active at a luncheon meeting of the division recently at the Casino club. There was a bit of Russian influence in the costume Mrs. Edwin W. Sims Jr. wore to the luncheon: her hat. It was high and dashing, of a bright red color, and worn well back on the head. A round pouff of feathers attached so it fell just at the cheekbone was its only decoration. Mrs. Robert J. Dunham, drinking milk with her luncheon, wore a high flying hat of black feathers. Mrs. William J. Kelly's chapeau was of winter white, an off-the-face model covered with coarse black netting. Puffing a cigaret thru a long onyx holder, she was a picture of sophistication in her black frock brightened by a gold chain necklace and sparkling clip, and huge gold bracelets at either wrist. To the opera one night in a feminine group went several young matrons. The husbands of two were out of town, and the husbands of two others were "baby sitters" for the evening. One of the group members, Mrs. Hugo C. Vogel, was wearing the stunning beige crepe dress in which she was married some years ago, a graceful flowing gown with a wrap-around, rippling skirt, lined in chocolate taffeta, which looks completely up to date.

The Saturday matinee performances in the Civic Opera house draw a distinguished list of Chicagoans. To hear Jeannette MacDonald in "Faust," Mrs. Allan M. Clement wore a handsome jet trimmed gown of black and a stunning gold choker with a drop pendant. Her gray felt hat was covered with small bows of lavendar and rose colored velvet ribbon. Mrs. Lawrence Y. Crump heard the performance in a dress of soft gray wool and a hat of light blue ostrich feathers. Her coat was of Persian lamb. Mrs. Arthur Cutten's black chapeau was brightened by bands of cherry colored ribbon. Mrs. Bruce MacLeish was smart in a dress of French blue wool and matching hat of ostrich feathers, and wore a corsage of purple orchids. Mrs. Matthew P. McCulloch's simple black frock was trimmed with fragile black lace. Her hat was of black feathers, and her jacket of sable skins.

Mrs. R. A. Cavanaugh

The sixth annual American Fashion show drew several smartly clad audiences to the W-G-N studio theater. Mrs. Robert A. Cavenaugh's cinnamon and black wool suit trimmed in Persian lamb was admired on all sides, and Mrs. Wallace D. Mackenzie's dashing hat of mahogany red trimmed in a swoop of gray feathers and black velling were noted at the first matinee performance. Mrs. Paul Butler, whose husband is president of the Chicago Horse Show association and consequently much occupied at the Coliseum where the second annual horse show now is in progress, has a handsome street dress of pale beige. It is fastened up the sleeves and part way up the front with natural colored bone buttons. A froth of delicate batiste embroidery at the neck line and the brown silk braid binding around the sleeves give a touch of distinction. The hem, also bound in brown braid, is turned up instead of under, imparting a decidedly French character to the straight skirt. The smart beige hat which completes this unusual costume has a band of softly gathered brown crepe wound about its postillion crown and a cluster of tiny beige felt flowers with turquoise centers at one side. Mrs. Frank Gordon wears an attractive costume of soft brushed wool in a pistachio green hue, a dress and jacket of the same material, under a short sable jacket. The delicate feather curls which crown the matching hat combine an identical shade of green and a soft apricot tone.

Club Leaders to Study War Relief Project

By Irene Steyskal

This will be a happy Thanksgiving for America.

Thruout the land, families reunited after the separation of the war years will sit down at tables festive with the colors of autumn, heavy with the food of a generous harvest. There will be the traditional fowl, a golden mound circled in a frill of green parsley; the pumpkin and the mincemeat pies; the bowls of raisins, nuts, and fruits.

In gaunt countries across the seas where hunger and disease crowd on the heels of war the approach of winter conjures a different picture. It is a picture that troubles many an American woman as she goes about the planning of her Thanksgiving menu for the family reunion—troubles her to the point of impatience with faulty governmental machinery, and moves her to a course of direct action on the war relief problem.

Here in Chicago tomorrow some 2,000 housewives, most of them the presidents, the rehabilitation or the public welfare chairmen of women's organizations in this area, will assemble at 2 o'clock in the La Salle hotel to see what can be worked out to collect canned foods for shipment to Europe and the countries of Asiatic allies.

Acting chairman of the meeting will be Mrs. Walter H. Hermsdorf of Evanston, who heads the rehabilitation committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Hermsdorf has supervised in this state the general federation's surplus foods canning project for war relief. In rural communities clubwomen have tinned and already are packing for shipment large quantities of food, she reports. The meeting here will be concentrated on means for enabling the urban woman to participate in the drive for canned foods, which will continue to the end of November.

The nation-wide canned food collection is in behalf of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration, and donations contributed to the drive will augment the UNRRA supplies. It is expected that at tomorrow's meeting a permanent women's coöperating committee will be set up, representing the large federated groups, church, fraternal, civic, social service, and philanthropic organizations.

Two speakers will address the meeting: Chaplain Edward J. De Mars of Vaughan hospital, who served overseas, and the Rev. Preston Bradley minister of the People's church.

Originally, the drive was planned as a home project to preserve farm and garden surpluses. But, with the growing and urgent need, the urban groups are asked now to contribute cases of commercially canned foods. All types are needed, Mrs. Hermsdorf emphasizes. She lists baby foods, vegetables, fruits, fruit and vegetable juices, fish, meats, and soups.

Arrangements for collecting and shipping are to be worked out at the meeting. Among the larger organizations sending representatives are the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, the American Legion auxiliary, the Council of Catholic Women, the Eastern Star, Jewish Charities, Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations, the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, the women's division of the Church Federation of Greater Chicago, the Y. W. C. A., Girl Scouts, and Camp Fire Girls.

The immediate post-war days, despite the gathering uncertainties and disillusionments, find the Young Women's Christian association moving unfalteringly forward in the arduous task of reëstablishing war-broken contacts, of clearing the ashes and rubble of its ruined centers to build again in new hope for tomorrow. Friends in China, the Philippines, and India are in the thoughts of Chicago members on the eve of the observance here of World Fellowship day.

Three thousand invitations have gone out to local members for the dinner which will be held at 6 o'clock Tuesday in the Loop center, a gathering keyed to the unity

Fresh from the Hills .... Plaster Statues

By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

THE red horse, blue pig, and pink cat stared at me as I drew up by the big green truck beside the Tennessee highway. When I went over to them, the door of the truck burst open and out popped a barefooted, dark eyed little woman in a blue print dress. She picked up the red horse and put it into my hands.

"Only $2.50," she said.

That was all right, because the horse, like the dog and cat, was made of plaster. For years those plaster statues which one sees along the highway have made me wonder about the people who make them. What a forlorn existence, I have always said to the Jedge as we passed by them. Making something nobody wants and living a gypsy life! The bright eyed little woman was anything but forlorn. She was clean, her hair was neatly combed, and her cheerful smile brought out a dimple in her right cheek. Behind the truck on the long shady side, I could see a man working on one of the plaster animals in the shade of a lean-to canvas. Just to make conversation, I asked if they knew the statue makers I had once met in Missouri. I described the sad faced girl and her much older husband.

"No'm," said the woman. "We've never been in Missouri . . . yet! I come from South Tennessee and my man comes from up in Pennsylvania."

"Her man," shirtless and overalled, suddenly appeared and took over the conversation. Straight, tall, with curly light brown hair, excellent features, and a proud lift to his chin, he was hardly the type I had expected. After we talked about Missouri a moment, I asked where he got the molds for his animals.

"I make 'em," he said. "Whenever we see another animal figure we want we buy a statue or model and make a mold. No, it isn't difficult! We make it out of imitation stone. Comes in a powder and gets hard as a rock. Look at these molds of ours!" We went around to the lean-to canvas, where a miniature cook stove stood on high legs with pipe thrust high in the air. The man opened a door into a chest built under the truck, disclosing many molds, each in segments with the edges painted blue.

"I put that blue paint on 'em so I won't cut into the mold when I'm scraping off the plaster that leaks into the cracks. No, I can't tell you what I use to keep the mold from sticking to the statues. That's a secret. I asked a feller once what he used for that. Said he'd tell me for $25. After a black widow spider bit me I wasn't able to work much, so I wished I'd paid him and found out. Every time I'd get a job tending a boiler or working at a machine I'd fall right over.

"Finally down near Pine Knot, I found another feller making these statues. He hired me to do some work on his trailer and while I was working I saw him sell these things, hand over fist. So I traded him a big old camera for showing me how to make statues. Then I pawned that old fiddle I've got hanging up in the truck for my first bag of plaster. With that first bag I made enough statues to get my fiddle back and get out on the road. With the next two bags, I was able to get this old truck. I was always pretty good at machinery, so I gave the truck a long wheelbase and built this trailer house on it. It's took me everywhere! And for the last 4,000 miles I ain't used a drop of gasoline. Nothin' but fuel oil!"

I peered in at the motor while he explained:

"Just took an elbow off here and put on a T-joint and run this pipe back under the truck. I've got a tank back there that holds 79 gallons of fuel oil. And besides that, my regular 15 gallon gas tank."

The flow of words that beat against me like a Cumberland mountain breeze went on. "I bought that car over there just to get parts off of it. But it turned out to be pretty good. So I fixed it up and built the trailer for it. Now when we see a place where we want to stop, we just draw up by the side of the road where there's a good water supply, because these plaster statues take a lot of water, and set up business."

I asked Brighteyes if she could drive the big truck.

"Shore," she answered. "I can drive anything with a motor to make it run and a wheel to keep it in the road."

"She's a good driver," agreed the man. "When we get ready to leave out, we just take down the canvas lean-to, stick the supports in the truck, roll up the canvas and put it in the trailer along with the stove and saw and away we go. Did you notice that saw over there?" He indicated a circular saw about 12 inches across. "It hurts my back to saw wood the regular way. I just hitch that little saw up to a motor there under the truck and all I have to do is hold the logs up to it. I can saw as much wood in an hour that way as I could saw by hand in a whole day. I can switch an emery wheel or buffer onto that rig instead of the saw, if I want to polish anything. Yes, I set that stove up on them high legs, too, so it's handier to get at."

Little Brighteyes chimed in:

"I get breakfast on the stove inside the truck. Then I cook dinner and supper out here on this stove. It'll bake cornbread with the rain pourin' on it so hard water is b'ilin' in them lid holes. Don't take no fancy wood neither. Any kind'll do!"

A flurry of business came. Two girls went into raves over the bew-tiful statues. In no time at all a $10 bill had changed hands. They wanted a large poodle dog and a bull dog, but they wanted them painted black instead of red.

"Funny thing," said the man. "In some places they want all the animals red. Here they want 'em all black. I've rigged up an air pump so I can just change the paint cans and spray any color of paint any one wants. And do it right now. I can blow up my tires with this, too." The hiss of escaping air was ample proof. "Got these motors off a couple of old washing machines. Then I've got a rig to charge the batteries on the cars and keep my radio workin' and run the electric lights in the truck and give me juice for my public address system. You see, on Sundays I preach!"

This was almost too much for me. I asked about his congregation. Did he send out posters, or how did people know where to find him?

"No trouble getting crowds anywhere we happen to be," he said. "I just get out that microphone and start preachin'! It carries my voice two miles and here come the people out of the woods."

With Brighteyes and the preacher I climbed into the truck to see the mike. It stood under the built-in paint cabinet alongside the built-in grocery cupboard, wedged against the built-in bed heaped with tumbled blankets. On the opposite side, a full sized cook stove was close neighbor to a drop-leaf table and a clothes press. The preacher's bible lay on a shelf at the front of the truck beside a can of lye bearing a red figure of Satan. Accidentally placed, perhaps, but I thought it rather fitting.

"And where," I asked, "did you meet sister here?"

"Well, that was funny," the man chuckled. "About four years ago, I'd just pulled up at a place and was setting out my statues when two women came walking down the road. They came over to look at the statues and finally one of them asked for my wife. I told her I'd been a widower for 11 years. So then she asked why didn't I have a wife to go along and help me with the work. I said it was because she hadn't took the job. She said she couldn't until she was asked. So then I asked her. And here we are."

Brighteyes brought out the marriage certificate, tied with white ribbon, and explained that the other woman with her that morning was her 18 year old daughter. "She's married now, too. Married a fine young fellow that is stone blind. They're gettin' along fine. My man here learned him how to make these statues and he does jis' as good as any one. Now they've got a truck and they're on the road, too, sellin' statues."

After the lights had been turned on in the truck to show me how well they work, we went outside to take another look at the stove that cooks in pouring rain, and to see the pet bantam chickens and the real live dog. Brighteyes went to the mail box and returned with a couple of letters. "We carry a mail box and post with us and set it up first thing when we stop. Then we sent a postal card back to the last place we stopped and git our mail right along." After this explanation, she sat down at the work table and began painting long black Hollywood eyelashes on a white plaster bull dog. Her husband went to see a truck driver who had beckoned to him. He returned just as I was asking if the statues "sell well."

"We sell all we can make," said the man. "If folks haven't any money, they trade anything they have. Onions or potatoes, and that man out there just now wanted to trade me string beans for a plaster pig."

"One woman took a bedspread right off her bed and give it to me f'r a long horn steer," said Brighteyes. "Purty, too, with silk threads drawed thru it."

Somewhere there must be a flaw in this way of living. I asked:

"But you're among strangers all the time. Aren't you lonely?"

The woman laughed gayly.

"My, no! Whenever we stop we git acquainted with all the folks around us. Folks around here are puttin' at us to stay here all winter. But we're a-leavin' out Tuesday."

"Going south?"

"O, I'm not partic'lar," answered the man. "We just let winter ketch us where it finds us. My truck," he added proudly, "will keep us warm in the coldest weather."

Pity such people? Never again. I came away wondering if the Jedge could trade our old camera for lessons in making plaster statues.

idea of "Chicago in the World and the World in Chicago." At the assembly a report will be given on the gifts contributed to the Y. W. C. A. World Fellowship fund.

Rebuilding destroyed centers, replacing lost equipment, rehabilitating or relieving overworked personnel are some of the general needs for which money contributed will be used. China, having only four now in the field, asks for six more staff workers. The need for two on the Philippine staff is urgent. The four workers in India are calling for two more members to help with the training of factory workers. Puerto Rico calls for advisory service preparatory to setting up a Y. W. C. A. in San Juan, and 10 workers are assigned to help the seven Latin American associations now organized in extending their programs.

An unusual project in China is a variation on the biblical charity of the gift of a cup of cold water for the thirsty. In China it is a cup of hot water that is needed. When the Y. W. C. A. members there started a recreational program for army recruits they discovered that the greatest health need was for boiled water. As a disease prevention measure, the workers extended the boiled water practice to refugee centers. Weekly cost of having water carried from river or stream, charcoal to heat it, and pots to boil it in amounts to $100,000 in local currency.

At the Tuesday night dinner dramatizations will be given and graphic exhibits displayed to show the world work projects of the Y. W. C. A. A replica in miniature of the Manila center, which was destroyed by bombs, will be shown. The health education and the professional and business departments, whose special interest is in collecting clothing and canned foods, and such small but greatly needed items as needles and pins, will have a display. Girl Reserves are collecting soap, and each member attending the dinner will bring a bar.

Miss Lilace Reid Barnes, former president of the Chicago association, is on a special mission in England. Letters from her on the situation there will be read at the meeting. Two Chicago leaders, Mrs. Lempi Matthews, president of the national Y. W. C. A. business and professional department, and Miss Elsa Graves, president of the national Y. W. C. A. league of industrial girls, are now in London attending the World Youth conference.

On the home front, one of the organizations finding it necessary to increase rather than diminish its service with the termination of the war is the Travelers Aid society. Travelers Aid has a call out for 100 or more volunteer day time workers who can give 5 hours' service on one day each week at Chicago railroad terminals.

The need for volunteers, Mrs. Neil H. Fowler, chairman of the society's service committee, says, is greater than at any time in the agency's history. Requests for service have been mounting since V-J day, she indicates, and grow from day to day as demobilization continues.

Mrs. Fowler explains that, to qualify for Travelers Aid volunteer service, a woman should be in the 25 to 50 age range, altho she says that "some leeway is permitted on the upper range." Training courses for the new volunteers will begin on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, Nov. 12, 14, and 16. Those who can serve should telephone the volunteer office of the Council of Social Agencies [Wabash 0528] before Tuesday of this week to make an appointment for an interview.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, November 10, 1897.

Dear Julia: We were pleased today to learn that Charles Page Bryan, son of our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Bryan, is to be named minister to China, succeeding Charles Denby. We understand that it is one of the best posts in the diplomatic service, second only to the embassies of Europe. Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy. Will says that as minister to China he will receive a salary of $12,000 a year. He should be able to live nicely on that sum.

Henry George

Mr. Denby has been in China for three administrations, two of these Democratic and one Republican, and has been very satisfactory, I believe. I suppose he is glad to come home for a change.

The Bryan family is one of the oldest in Chicago and Charles was born in the homestead at Monroe st. and Michigan av. They moved to Elmhurst soon afterward and he was brought up there. Their beautiful place in this vast west suburb is called "Byrd's Nest," as they are related to the Virginia Byrds and naturally are glad to claim relationship with so eminent a family. Young Mr. Bryan was educated at the University of Virginia and after taking his law course was admitted to the bar in Washington, D. C. Soon after this he went to Colorado, where he became editor of the Denver Inter Ocean and the Colorado Mining Gazette, still later being elected to the Colorado legislature. He has beautiful manners and I should think he would have been captured by one of our lovely American girls before now, but he is still a bachelor. If he goes to China I imagine his attractive sister, Miss Jennie Byrd Bryan, will go with him, to be lady of the legation. A diplomat really needs a hostess in his establishment.

My friend, dear Mrs. E. W. Blatchford, has just been calling and our conversation turned on the resignation of the Rev. Dr. E. P. Goodwin, who is leaving the old First Congregational church after a service of 30 years. Every one is sorry to see him go, but Congregationalists are particularly sad, as he has wielded an enormous influence in Chicago. I believe there is only one other minister who has been here longer: that is the beloved Bishop Cheney of the Reformed Episcopal church.

The First Congregational church is one of the historic churches of Chicago. At the time of its organization by Philo Carpenter it was known everywhere for its anti-slavery stand. During the Civil war this church was a power in the land for freedom. After the fire of 1871 the building was used as a rallying point in the relief of those made destitute by the flames. I remember so well at that time seeing the long lines of people waiting at the doors for the distribution of food.

Dr. Goodwin always has held firmly to his beliefs and is very orthodox, but he is so large hearted and unselfish that he is greatly loved not only by those in his church but by a multitude outside.

My cold is much better and I'm going out tomorrow.

Ever with love, Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES

Charles Page Bryan [1855-1918] served as minister to Switzerland, Brazil, Portugal, Belgium, and Japan, as well as China. His sister, Jennie, became Mrs. John Barton Payne.

Henry George

Alexander Greene, 1030 E. 49th st., writes: "Your tribute to Henry George surprised and pleased me. You may be surprised to know that, during the last 10 years, the movement has progressed more than ever before, being specially strong in Denmark. The Henry George School of Social Science in Chicago alone has over 80 centers where any one may receive instruction free of charge."

Young Winston Churchill

Mrs. Grace Neahr Veeder, Wauwatosa, Wis., reading of Winston Churchill in this column, sends a memory of hearing a lecture by him about 1902 at the Kenwood club of Chicago. She calls it a fascinating talk, full of humor and thrills, as when he told of his escape from the enemy, when he hitchhiked, uninvited, in a freight car.

Batesville Dressmaker

We had a sociable at our church
Last night,
An' Big Ben Bowles, the bass singer, Give us "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."
My! What a voice Ben has got!
It almost makes anybody sea-sick
To hear him sing about the ocean.
The minister's wife is a great reader
An' she told us the words
Of that grand song
Was by Miz. Emma Willard,
That had a school in Troy, New York.
Miz. Willard wrote it when she was traveling
To Europe once.

Local Service Clubs Schedule Benefit Events

Mrs. Arthur W. Nelson

With Christmas gifts for overseas service men and women neatly packaged and started on their long journeys, wise and practical shoppers immediately have turned thoughts to gift lists for those who remain at home. And vying for their attention are the many bazars and benefits scheduled in the near future, where countless treasures, toys, and hand-sewn articles will serve the double purpose of filling Santa's pack and of swelling the coffers of charitably minded organizations.

The Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial home, which has given assistance to needy women and children for the past 52 years, has planned a benefit sale and tea in conjunction with a card party at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday in the home at 1400 W. Monroe st. Arrangements have been entrusted to Mrs. Arthur W. Nelson, first vice president, with Mrs. Frank Gamerl, Miss Cary Newcomber, and Miss Florence Booth as her assistants.

Pouring at tea with the president, Mrs. Burnett Dewey Warner, will be three club presidents who have recently become affiliated with the home: Dr. Adelaide Doolittle Hoeffel of the women's auxiliary to the American Medical association, branch 2; Mrs. Harry Bartlett of the South West Women's club of Maywood, and Mrs. Peter F. Lauter of the South Edgebrook Women's club.

Representatives of the 36 women's clubs who assist with the home's welfare program will gather for a luncheon and business session at 12:30 Thursday in the home. A talk on Thanksgiving and Christmas table decorations will be given at that time by Miss Laura Welch.

Heirloom treasures and white elephants will be offered for sale along with a variety of home cooked pastries and sweets at the University of Chicago Settlement league's annual fall benefit bridge, set for 1:30 Tuesday in the university's International house residence.

Last summer members of the league started saving precious sugar from their scant ration supplies for the special cakes, cookies, pies, and other tidbits to be contributed for the bazar. The society assists with the work and financing of the University of Chicago Settlement house and summer camp. Co-chairmen for the benefit are Mrs. Bruce Dickson and Mrs. Nina D. Hess.

"Gift Aisle" is the designation the Wesley Memorial Hospital Woman's auxiliary has given its annual festive pre-holiday sale, which will be conducted this year on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 15 and 16, in Hampshire house, the nurses' new residence at 201 E. Delaware pl. Hours have been set from 10 o'clock each morning until the same hour each evening, with luncheon scheduled at 12:30 daily. Tea will be served each afternoon.

Planning a two day bazar is no small undertaking, and members of the many participating Methodist women's church circles have been working diligently for the past few months on the towels, handkerchiefs, aprons, dolls, toys, baby clothes, novelties, and hand knit and crocheted articles that will go on display in the many booths. The sale is under the general direction of Mrs. Oliver R. Aspegren of Evanston First Methodist church, and district co-chairmen are Mrs. Arthur U. Gerber of Hemenway church, Evanston, north; Mrs. Harry Flack, Woodlawn church, south; and Mrs. E. J. Smerz, Willard Memorial church, Oak Park, west. Mrs. Bishop O. Lovejoy is auxiliary president, and among others actively assisting are Mrs. Alexander R. Freeman, Mrs. Paul Frankson, and Mrs. H. M. McDonald. Proceeds will be divided between the Children's free bed endowment fund at the hospital and a fund for furnishing a dining hall in the nurses' residence.

Final plans for the annual bazar sponsored by the Protestant Women's Service club will be discussed at a luncheon meeting of the club Wednesday in the Wedgwood room of Marshall Field & Co. The sale will open at 11 o'clock Friday morning, Nov. 16, in the Grand ballroom of the Congress hotel.

Mrs. J. C. Claspar, bazar chairman, reports that offerings in the various booths will range from the practical articles for every day use to dainty and luxurious ones suitable for holiday gifts for persons of all ages. Candy, bakery and canned goods also will be displayed. Receipts will go toward taking care of expenses of caring for 25 children totally supported by the organization. President of the group is Mrs. E. O. Weedfall.

Still another benefit bazar is the one to be held by the Friends of Handicapped Children from 9 o'clock next Sunday morning in the Jahn school, 3149 N. Wolcott av., until 11 o'clock that night. Proceeds will assist the organization with its work on behalf of physically handicapped youngsters.

Club Directors Plan Regional Institute Here

Spring convention having been canceled this year, the board of directors of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs has arranged a series of regional institutes, the fifth of which will be held here Wednesday for clubwomen of the Chicago area. The meeting place will be the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. Junior clubwomen will have an institute on the following night in state headquarters at 30 West Washington st.

Mrs. T. S. Chapman

It was to provide clubwomen with detailed information on projects and programs of the federation that the institutes were planned. Several of the departments of work having special programs under way this season will present guest speakers at the Chicago meeting in the morning, and the afternoon will be given to departmental and committee workshops, so arranged that it will be possible for each person attending to participate in more than one conference. Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, federation president, will be the key speaker, giving an overall picture of the "Federation at Work."

Chairman of the meeting will be Mrs. E. E. Byerrum, northern region vice president.

Mrs. E. E. Byerrum

One of the guest speakers in the morning will be the Rev. George M. Link of Michael. Father Link founded and is the director of the Trail Rangers of America. The adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure fits his work for underprivileged boys. From city slums and other unwholesome environments that are an invitation to delinquency, he has rescued scores of youngsters, taking them to his pleasant camp at Michael, another Boys' Town, and offering them the rugged outdoor life that opens a new world of absorbing interests to any alert and active lad.

This year the federation board voted funds to build a cottage at Father Link's little colony which will house 12 of his young Trail Rangers. Father Link will be presented on the institute program by Mrs. E. Jackson De Wire, chairman of public welfare.

Thru the efforts Mrs. Walter M. Rennie's administration, which immediately preceded Mrs. Chapman's, an occupational therapy department was set up at the University of Illinois, with the clubwomen providing several scholarships. Mrs. Frank J. Christianson, public health chairman, will present Miss Beatrice Wade, director of the department at the state university, and two of the students holding Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs scholarships.

Also scheduled for a brief talk in the morning is Mrs. Walter Hermsdorf, whose committee on rehabilitation is concentrating now on collecting canned foods for European war relief this winter.

The first series of committee and department conferences in the afternoon is set for 1:30. Workshops scheduled for this period, with the presiding chairmen, are: American home, Mrs. Fenno Dewey; conservation, Mrs. Charles Rowland; public health, Mrs. Christianson; music, Mrs. Everett Given; club institutes, Mrs. J. Kenneth Rice; literature, Mrs. E. R. Walter.

Scheduled for 2:30 o'clock are a press and publicity workshop, with Miss Dorothy Dohrman presiding; an education department meeting under Mrs. George Greenfield's chairmanship, and art and garden department workshops led, respectively, by Mrs. Everett Mitchell and Mrs. Frederick Wilmot.

Mrs. Chapman also will address the northern region junior club women's institute Thursday night, and Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Dohrman, Mrs. Raymond Knapp, and Mrs. John Jennings will have part in the program. Mrs. Knapp is chairman of internation relations, and Mrs. Jennings, radio chairman. The state chairman of juniors, Mrs. Robert Cavitt, will conduct the meeting.

Heading the arrangements committee for the junior clubwomen's institute is Mrs. R. K. Allison of the 2d district. She is assisted by members of the Arche, Bryn Mawr, and Chesterfield Junior clubs.

Congresswoman ·o Report Tuesday on European Trip

Rep. Emily Taft Douglas [D., Ill.] will visit two Chicago organizations Tuesday. That evening she is scheduled to speak before the Chicago college, and in the afternoon will address the Chicago Woman's Aid. Preceding the night program, the College club will entertain at dinner for Mrs. Douglas.

Starved Rock Park Ablaze in in Fall Colors

By Mildred Peterson

Fall vacationists, with plenty of gasoline for traveling, are reveling in the glorious autumnal weather and sights enjoyed at popular Starved Rock State park, over 1,000 acres of rough and wooded bluffland acquired in 1911 by the state of Illinois, on the south bank of the Illinois river near Utica, between Ottawa and La Salle on state highway 71.

Open the year round, with a large lodge which is one of the finest examples of modern park building in the middle west, Starved Rock State park was visited by over 300,000 persons in 1944 and the attendance has been even greater in 1945. Reservations for the attractive 48 rooms in the lodge should be made well in advance. The lodge also contains a colorful rustic furnished lounge and a pine paneled dining room where you will enjoy excellent meals. The panoramic view from the lodge porch is one long to be remembered.

One of 55 parks and memorials of the state, Starved Rock has many important historical associations. Here was the first center of French influence in Illinois; here was the principal village of Illinois Indians; here was the scene of savage warfare. Heroism and tragedy are the main threads of the story.

The rocky eminence from which the park takes its name was the site of Fort St. Louis, built by La Salle in 1682. It is a cylindrical mass of St. Peter sandstone rising approximately 125 feet from the water and with an area of about half an acre at the summit. This mass of rock received its name from an incident which occurred in 1769 when a band of Illinois Indians, pursued by Pottawattomies, took refuge upon the summit. Surrounded and unable to obtain food and water, they slowly starved to death.

Many of the present trails—and they are numerous and an unending joy to explore—had as their forerunners the Indian trails that led along steep canyon walls to the caves. One of the largest of these, Council cave, was used as a meeting place. Others are just large enough to contain one campfire; in a few campfire remains have been exposed by the removal of dirt, and one, Skeleton cave, revealed a pre-Columbian burial.

Other points of interest bear such romantic names as Cave of the Winds, La Salle canyon, Horseshoe canyon, Tonti canyon, Witches' Kitchen, Pulpit rock, Eagle cliff, Lovers' Leap, French canyon, and Lost lake.

Formations here are made up principally of St. Peter sandstone, which underlies much of Illinois, but which has few major outcroppings in the state. It was brought to the surface in this locality as the result of a huge upfold known as the La Salle anticline. Normally white and loosely cemented, the sandstone is hardened on cliff surfaces by mineral deposits which add to its coloration variegated tints of cream, brown, orange, gray, blue, and green.

View of some of the bungalows on the grounds of the La Quinta hotel in Southern California, which is being operated by a group of prominent Chicagoans.

S. California Resort Bought by Chicagoans

Prominent Chicagoans are the guiding spirits behind Southern California's newest resort project, the La Quinta Hotel and Bungalows, located in a palm filled, desert oasis between the San Bernardino and the San Jacinto mountains, 17 miles south of Palm Springs.

The group which has purchased the 808 acre property is comprised of John Balaban, secretary and treasurer of Balaban & Katz corporation; Joseph Schwartz, attorney; Arthur Keating, president of Ekko Products; Milton Morris of Samuel Winternitz & Co., Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, and Eddie Weisl, attorney.

At present the project consists of the La Quinta hotel, a large, low sweeping building in gleaming white Spanish Mission lines, 21 adjoining bungalows, a swimming pool and cabannas, and stables. The guest list can accommodate 108 persons and the policy is American plan.

The new owners have announced an ambitious plan to develop their unusual location to attract year-round residents and purchasers of home sites. This project will move laterally with the state of California's plan to spend $8,000,000 to develop the mountain and desert area surrounding La Quinta into a playground paradise akin to Nevada's Sun Valley.

A near-by airport and quick accessibility on fine roads to Los Angeles and Hollywood enhance La Quinta's possibilities for both home and resort purposes. An adjoining golf course, tennis courts, miles of horseback riding trails, long, curving palm-arched walks and desert and mountain hiking give outdoor enthusiasts a variety of sports. The sunny, tiled swimming pool with clubhouse cabannas and a cocktail deck invite the less active guest.

The Chicago syndicate has engaged William Walshe, formerly of the Last Frontier hotel at Los Vegas as manager, and also has retained Joe Sawyer, tennis professional at the Racquet club at Palm Springs, for La Quinta's extensive courts.

J. A. Uhl New Officer of Continental Air Lines

Election of Joseph A. Uhl as secretary and treasurer of Continental Air Lines has been announced by Robert F. Six, Continental president. Uhl, who is 38, joined the air line in June, 1945, as assistant to the president to act as contract coördinator and liaison man between the air line and the Continental-Denver Modification center which the company was then operating.

New Exhibits Mark Opening of Art Week

By Eleanor Jewett

November is coming in heavily decorated with new exhibits. Altho it probably has nothing whatever to do with the gladsome estate of the galleries, this is National Art week. National Art week is being celebrated for the 13th time thruout the United States, and is sponsored by the American Artists Professional league. Two Chicago women are holding places of importance in the enterprise: Mrs. S. Mirabella is art week director for Illinois and Mrs. Albrion L. Headburg is chairman for Illinois.

A few seasons ago National Art week was a seven days' fair with public and artists buying pictures and showing pictures in every place that Chicago could turn for the period into a gallery. This year there is nothing dramatic nor sensational on the cards. If one can see his way into going to an exhibit for the sake of the occasion, and buying a print, water color, oil, or sculpture, so very much the better for that person; if one cannot, still the galleries are open and the familiar hunter of new shows and old will find all kinds of tempting wares on display.

A great many people undoubtedly will go home richer by an etching or so from the delightful Chicago Society of Etchers annual print and miniature etching exhibition that opened last Wednesday in the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, to run thru the month. This exhibit always is popular and usually attracts an unusually large quota of new art lovers. Many a collector has been started in his career thru these etching shows. Bertha E. Jaques, whose death has not yet become a stable fact for most of her admirers, interested innumerable persons in the endless delights of print collecting. Mrs. Jennie F. Purvin follows her lead in stimulating fresh interest in etchings among the many visitors to the Mandel galleries she handles so ably. This is one exhibit where National Art week will continue for four weeks; it is a show with universal appeal, and no one who enjoys something good and something new can afford to miss it.

The Chicago Woman's club has arranged an exhibition of paintings by Nan Rice in celebration of National Art week at the Tudor gallery, Fine Arts building. Mrs. Rice is a well known portrait painter and a member of the south side art colony.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is opening its fall exhibition of paintings by members with a tea this afternoon at the Stevens hotel, where the exhibit hangs in the third floor corridor gallery. The exhibition will remain on view to April, 1946. The guest speaker this afternoon is Mrs. Albion L. Headburg. W. W. Raleigh is president of the organization, and Mrs. Nelly Deachman is exhibition chairman.

The All-Illinois prides itself on promoting new talent and in being generous to the older artist. It leans to the conventional and the academic. In the current show Ramon Froman, a young painter whose work in portraiture has been outstanding since he began exhibiting with the society, again has one of the most charming canvases with his portrait of a young girl in a pink sports dress on the floor reading a book balanced on a chair.

Another outstanding picture is the rich and colorful still life, "Tea from Wedgwood," by Blanche Rose. A striking water color is the clean cut "Petit Vallee," by Harry Sheckels. A most delightful landscape is found in the beautiful "Autumn," by Olive Holbut Chaffee. "Laura Lou," by Kenneth Brown Ransley is by all odds the most adorable infant in the show, a blonde 3 year old in pink, clutching a doll.

"Street in Xochimilco, Mexico," by Antonin Sterba and a fine dune landscape by Frank V. Dudley, both excellent paintings, hang at the entrance to the gallery. Karl Buehr and Adam Emery Albright contribute "In Brown County," a spring landscape with delicate pinks, fragile and shy, and "Frogs for Bait," two little boys going fishing. "Sun Flowers," by Jessie Field, is bold and well done. "Shore Leave," by Comdr. Arthur A. Gilbert, is a record of Hawaii, interesting in its realism and likable in its color and animation. "Shanty Town Afloat," by Minerva Warner, is another unusually good picture, showing shacks and river in the snow.

Two member artists whose death this summer was a great blow to the art of Chicago, Robert P. Kilbert and Charles Biesel, are represented by paintings hung to do them honor. Mr. Kilbert's painting is a splendid canvas, one of his best, a team of horses along the lake front. Mr. Biesel is represented by one of his stormy efforts, a landscape in heavy blues and greens.

Alice Ross Brenning shows a delightful "Lilacs"; Ethel Crouch Brown, her symbolic "Service Flag"; Winnifred Pleimling, her little fantasy, "Pearls for the Witch of Atlas"; Rachel Stearns, an intriguing "Family Portrait" of cats, and Nan Rice, the successful portrait of Mrs. Clay Kelly.

The Arts club opened its first exhibit of the season last Friday with a comprehensive showing of the works of Kandinsky, a memorial exhibition. The paintings are loaned by the Museum of Nonobjective Painting, New York. An illustrated lecture on Kandinsky will be given at the Arts club by James Johnson Sweeney next Saturday at 11:30 a. m.

The Findlay galleries, Michigan blvd. at Van Buren st., has a stunning exhibition to Nov. 15 of paintings of ships and the sea, and one or two canvases of wild ducks flying over autumn marshes, by Frank Vining Smith—really gorgeous paintings of sailing ships; and water colors of game birds in flight by J. D. Knap. These last are so exquisite, so authentic, and so fine they should be written of in capital letters. Every one who likes hunting or who likes birds should see these water colors. Nothing as fascinating can be found anywhere in town.

An exhibition of sketches and drawings "From a Sailor's Notebook," by Elwood Panttila, U. S. N. R., is on view at the Little gallery, Esquire theater, 58 E. Oak st., to Saturday. It is an interesting show, fresh and pertinent, first hand information both serious and funny.

Cripple Aid Groups Plan Annual Meets

Both the Illinois Association for the Crippled and the Outing Association for Crippled Children have annual meetings scheduled for this week.

Miss Thecla Doniat

Close to 2,000 persons, it is anticipated, will attend the Illinois association meeting, which is set for 3 o'clock Wednesday in the Stevens hotel. They are to hear Lawrence J. Linck, new executive director of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, whose offices were moved in September from Elyria, O., to Chicago. Mr. Linck is scheduled to speak in the evening after dinner in the south ballroom.

Miss Thecla Doniat, a vice president of the Illinois association, who has been cited and is nationally known for her work for physically handicapped children, is assisting Byron V. Kanaley and George H. Williamson in managing the meeting and arranging the program.

Presiding at both afternoon and evening sessions will be George H. Williamson. The afternoon will be given to election and induction of a new board of governors, reports, and three talks in specific fields of aid to the handicapped. One of the speakers will be Dr. M. A. Perlstein of St. John's hospital in Springfield, who will show motion pictures and explain the "State Program for the Management of Cerebral Palsied Children." Dr. Perlstein is known here for his work at Michael Reese hospital in developing a training program for cerebral palsied children.

Miss Ada Blumer and Miss Blanche Mulder, staff members of the association, will give talks on job placement of graduates of Chicago special schools and on the medical social worker's function in supplementing a placement program. There will be a tea following the afternoon session to give the professional workers and members an opportunity for informal discussion of their problems.

In addition to Mr. Linck's talk in the evening, the work of the association for handicapped adults will be presented thru stories from case histories by Miss Mulder, Mrs. Grace Seelig, Mrs. Marjorie Spierling, and Miss Louise Daley. The evening program will open with a group of songs by Janice Porter, soprano with the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The meeting will draw several leaders in the work for crippled children from other communities. Among those attending as special guests will be Miss Dorothy Dolton of Rockford, Miss Mabel Swanson of Rock Island, and Miss Josephine Milligan of Jacksonville.

The Outing association's annual meeting will be a luncheon assembly at noon Tuesday in the Standard club, 320 Plymouth ct. Mr. Linck will be the principal speaker. He will discuss "Needs of the Crippled Child." Mrs. Barthold J. Strauss will preside. She will give an over-all report on the year's activities of the organization, which for 45 years has been making camping experience possible for hundreds of orthopedically handicapped youngsters. During July and August some 80 boys and girls from 8 to 14 years old were taken for summer vacations to a new lakeside camp site near Oconomowoc, Wis. Mrs. Strauss also will discuss some plans in prospect for 1946.

Among its luncheon guests, the association will have Dr. Stanely Gibson, chairman, and other members of its medical advisory board, the principals of the city's special schools for handicapped children, and social service directors from the various clinics that refer children for camp vacations.

The Women's League for Crippled Children will open the season Wednesday, gathering members and friends at 1:30 o'clock in the Belmont hotel for a conference and an afternoon of games. Mrs. Claude W. Morris of Winnetka heads the organization this season. The league is raising money to erect a building for the Outing Association for Crippled Children at its Oconomowoc camp.

Expert Lists Attributes of Perfect Meal

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

You can lead your family to the dinner table, but you can't always get them to eat every bite of that well prepared, nutritious food you've set before them.

Food must have appetite appeal as well as nutritional value if it is to benefit the family's health. Taste is perhaps the most important factor to be considered in planning and preparing a tempting meal, but the eye also wants something to feed upon. Texture and consistency must be pleasing. And there must be balance and contrast in both taste and eye appeal.

Even with certain food shortages, there is such a variety of foods available to the American housewife, that it is necessary to do some planning ahead of time, if you would have the best possible combinations in your menu.

A simple way to plan menus is to have a basic form in mind. For instance your basic dinner menu might consist of meat [or a meat substitute]; one or two cooked vegetables; a salad, relishes, or raw vegetable; bread, beverage, and dessert. Then go ahead and plan the menu for the day with what is available in the stores and in your cupboard.

After you've planned, either on paper or in your head, just what the meal is to be, check over it to make sure you will have balance and contrast, first in taste, then eye appeal, and finally in texture, aroma, and temperature.

Look for these things:

TASTE: Every meal should have at least one bland food such as potatoes, breadstuffs, or cereals. Richness should be provided by a protein, meat, cheese or eggs, for example, or by a fat. Salads, relishes, and acid fruits supply the necessary tartness, and few housewives would be permitted to omit the sweet item which comes at the end of the meal. Have one of each of these food types represented, but be careful not to go overboard by having too much of any one. Who could enjoy a meal consisting of sauerbraten, broiled tomatoes, tart green salad, and grapefruit for dessert? Many a good meal has been ruined when a whipped cream dessert has topped off an already sufficiently rich dinner.

EYE APPEAL: Nature has been kind in packing so many vitamins and minerals into some of her most colorful foods. You can always count on vegetables and fruits for color appeal. Be careful to select a bright colored salad if you already plan to serve two white vegetables such as potatoes and cauliflower. It is almost impossible to pack too much color into a meal. But do go sparingly when you must resort to artificial coloring. Parsley or paprika on anything and everything can become monotonous, too.

Try to get a little variety into the size and shapes of the foods served on one plate. If the meat is in the form of patties avoid having small whole potatoes or even peas or carrots sliced crosswise. Instead mash the potatoes and cut the carrots in lengthwise shreds. A mashed vegetable or a green that cooks into a shapeless mass might have some better accompaniment than mashed potatoes.

If you want food to be completely eaten, particularly when there are children to be considered, do keep all servings on the small side. It is discouraging to have a well heaped plate set before one. Cutting vegetables into pieces that are not too big for easy handling also is wise.

TEXTURE AND CONSISTENCY: Whenever possible include at least one crisp or crunchy food in every meal. Don't serve a creamed vegetable if the meat has gravy. Avoid too many soft foods. Balance soft foods with crisp and chewy ones.

TEMPERATURE: It isn't essential but it helps to have at least one very cold food or beverage in an otherwise hot meal. And even on the warmest days one hot food or beverage improves appetite as well as digestion.

AROMA: The tantalizing fragrance of bacon broiling, coffee in the making, of onions frying, or meat in the oven, should be argument enough for the inclusion of a food whose aroma can't be resisted.

A Friend in Need

[If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown

With the present seasonal increase in appeals for help, it becomes necessary to repeat the simple rulings and working procedures of this department. Of the many who appeal to us for aid, a large percentage have had no previous experience with our proffered service and therefore are unaware of its limitations and possibilities.

First of all, we have neither funds nor transportation facilities. It is possible, thru the interest and cooperation of our readers to supply needy applicants with clean used clothing, usable furniture, and other household items, but they must make their own pick-up arrangements.

We ask that appeals be written rather than telephoned and that information be as complete as possible, stating financial circumstances, health, home conditions, and other factors relative to the need. If agency aid of any kind is being received, the name of the worker and address of the agency will facilitate our obtaining detailed information sometimes needed before requests can be filled adequately, and will provide a source of contact in the event of change of address.

Numerous appeals are received from friends or relatives of needy persons, written with the kindliest intentions, but sometimes without the knowledge and consent of the parties involved. To avoid even the slightest embarrassment and misunderstanding that might ensue, it is preferable that the actual individual in need write his own request.

Needy large families, in particular, are apt to remain on our files for several months, receiving such help as we can supply from time to time to augment their meager resources, but many applicants require only temporary aid to relieve an urgency and often are able to carry on from there.

Wrappings and Ribbons for Holiday Cheer

By Edith Weigle

Christmas seems to be coming around earlier every year! Last month Chicago stores started displaying gifts and women early birds started buying.

As attractive as the presents they will conceal are the gayly colored and decorated wrappings, ribbons, seals, and little cards. During the war a self-service system was started by some of the stores. A customer went around to the various counters, selected the items she wanted and took them to a desk where they were assembled and where she paid for them.

This proved to be so efficient and so popular that it is being continued by a large department store here. And bright red baskets are provided for the shoppers.

Made in Chicago are the holiday wrapping papers on view. Some are outsize, measuring 30 by 40 inches, and ideal for large packages. These come three in a set. All have their own especially designed seals, enclosure cards, and cotton ribbons. No guess work about matching colors or designs; it's already done by the manufacturer.

One charming ensemble is called "First Noel" and is carried out in pastel tones of blue, pink, and other tints on white. The design shows children grouped around a little crèche. Blue ribbons exactly matching the blue in the paper and little seals and folders are available with this wrapping.

Fun to use for the toys you're planning to put under the Christmas tree is a bright red paper, called "Merry Snow People," that is covered with jolly snow men of all shapes and sizes.

One of the large papers, also made in regular size, is called "Sleeping Village," and shows a typical Christmas card scene of a hamlet in the winter time with large bells above it. The colors are soft blue and red on white.

The old song of "Jingle Bells" furnishes the theme for another paper. The words are spelled out in silver and green on white and there is a little pattern of music notes to indicate the tune. Another combination of colors is also available.

Other attractive wrappings have embossed all-over patterns of gold holly with red berries and green streamers, and designs of Christmas bells and pine cones outlined in white on scarlet.

For information on where in Chicago the items mentioned by Miss Weigle may be purchased telephone the Tribune Public Service office, Sup. 0200, or write in, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 no trump	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of spades.

A great many players are allergic to 10-ace positions. Some persons can take their 10-aces or leave them alone, but others, the minute they see an A-Q or K-J are immediately seized with an unconquerable desire to get over there to take that finesse. Those players would have more money for Victory bonds if they looked upon a finesse not as a means of capturing an adverse honor, but as a device for winning tricks. The South of today's hand was one that could profit by this suggestion.

The bidding conformed in all respects with modern standards. The opening bid of two no trump is probably the best choice. It will be noted that while the hand is somewhat off the 4-3-3-3 distribution normally required for this call, that is no objection with a hand so rich in honor tricks. In fact a three no trump opening could not be criticized. North has just enough to make one bid, and while four hearts would have been a much easier contract to fulfill, South hardly can be blamed for returning to no trump.

West opened with the five of spades and declarer won with the king. He then played the ace of hearts and overtook the queen in dummy. The play of the jack revealed that the suit would not break and the diamond finesse was then tried, the jack losing to the queen. The spades were then established and when West got in with the ace of diamonds he had enough tricks to set the contract.

South's proper play at trick two was the king of diamonds. Two tricks in the suit can be established by brute force, and the best the defense can do is cash two spade tricks and two diamonds. The lead of the five with the four, three, and two showing indicates that West has only a four card spade suit, unless he is making a false lead. Declarer can check on this later. When West is in with a diamond and continues the spade, South refused that trick and when East follows to the third round it is clear that no five card spade suit is out against the hand. If it should turn out that West has five spades, declarer can then fall back on the hope that hearts will break.

Note that the play at trick two is the king of diamonds and not a lower honor. The reason is that an extra trick will be scored if there is a singleton queen outstanding. Whereas if there is a singleton ace, there is no way to take three tricks on any line of play.

Boy Discovers Arizona Land of Bacon, Eggs

PHOENIX, ARIZ. He called it his "land of bacon and eggs." The story is hardly credible, and you might think some publicity man dreamed it up, but it's all down on the police blotter. It started 1,400 miles away, deep in Mexico, where a peon, a former railroad worker in Arizona, regaled his very young son with wonderful tales of the state as a land of "bacon, eggs, and good times."

The lad, 9 years old, ran away from home. He traveled two days on a train to reach Juarez. He waded the Rio Grande to enter El Paso. There a truant officer picked him up and put him in school. He stayed a day and ran away.

It was thru a discharged soldier and his wife that the Mexican boy reached Phoenix. They found him along a highway outside El Paso and gave him a ride. In Phoenix the soldier and his wife bought a shoeshine box and set the lad up in business.

Fifteen minutes after the wide-eyed, swarthy ragamuffin took to the streets in search of his first customer a school nurse took him into custody. He was not in school during school hours.

Maricopa county juvenile officers quizzed this first of the season's winter visitors, thru an interpreter. They ordered him placed in the county detention home, where he was warmly received, and he dined enthusiastically—on bacon and eggs.

What with the war over and the community free to advertise its attractions afresh, the tourists are coming to town again by plane, rail, bus, automobile, and apparently by thumb, like the Mexican muchacho.

Resorts and ranches are being readied in anticipation of land office business. A trend toward longer vacations has been noticed in the Valley of the Sun. This year it looks as tho the season would be well under way before Thanksgiving, while in years gone by most resorts counted on operating in the red until the turn of the year.

Over in Chandler the San Marcos will open three weeks hence, reports Manager John Quarty, who also boasts the new title of president. The expansive resort is over-booked for the post-Christmas period, having been sold out for the boom months since last April.

The San Marcos lobby has been enlarged and redecorated during the summer and other improvements have been made in the dining and guest rooms.

Chicagoans booked at the San Marcos include Mr. and Mrs. George P. Hollinsbery, Mr. and Mrs. John McKinlay, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Arch W. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Carl I. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Willis D. Gale, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Oakes, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert P. Zimmerman, Sewell L. Avery, and Oliver M. Knode.

Genial Jack Stewart, manager of Camelback inn, is preparing his famed resort for its 10th opening on Nov. 15. The inn is partly the vision of a Chicagoan, Edward Loomis Bowes, architect, who drew the plans for it. The inn and its landscaping are by now world famous. Over 100 varieties of cacti comprise the cactus garden. They were gathered from all over the southwest, Central America, and Old Mexico.

Camelback also is famous for its western entertainment, including pack trips, breakfast rides, night steak frys under the stars, square dances, and various horse and cowboy sports, as well as swimming, tennis, putting, shuffleboard, and the sedentary sports enjoyed around a card table. Mrs. Eugene Dubli has returned to the inn after an absence of two years to direct social activities. W. J. Bradley—"Brad" to the guests—has returned as top hand at the corral.

Chicagoans have long been well represented among the inn's clientele. Scheduled to soak in their quota of Old Sol's rays this year are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward Seabury of Oak Park, Mr. and Mrs. George Duwe and family of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lyle Vette of Oak Park, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Harold Eckhard of Chicago, Mrs. Thomas C. Harker of Peoria, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Sloane of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Thomas of Oak Park.

The Jokake inn, long a favorite winter resort in the Salt River valley, is this year under the management of Timothy M. Hall, who reports that the Jokake will open within 10 days for what promises to be one of the busiest seasons in its history.

A full program of western entertainment and hospitality is projected, with two Chicago parties scheduled to arrive on opening day. They are Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. James Beach Clow of Lake Forest and Miss Pearl Bayne of the Chicago public health service. Other Chicagoland guests on the Jokake's reservation list include Mr. and Mrs. Tom Land of River Forest, Mr. and Mrs. William Sidley of Chicago, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Schneider of Evanston, Mrs. William Burry of Lake Forest, and Allan B. Hussander of Chicago.

The Paradise inn, new and luxurious winter vacation club and resort hotel at the east end of Camelback mountain, also is anticipating a busy season. Manager Bob Evans supervised the construction of additional guest bungalows during the summer, adding to the resort's already considerable facilities. Occupants of the new cottages will enjoy all the seclusion they desire, at the same time being but a short stone's throw from the main inn building. Chicagoans who will occupy their own cottages there this winter are Dr. and Mrs. Henry D. Lloyd and the William C. Engel family.

Early Chicago arrivals at the Paradise, according to Virginia Sparr, charming and popular resort secretary, were Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Wilson of Highland Park, Mrs. Thomas P. Octigan and daughter, Nancy, of Winnetka, Mrs. Helen S. Fish of the Stevens, and Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Cary, whose son, Eugene Jr., recently returned from 40 months' service in the Pacific.

James M. Carry of Chicago is expected at the Paradise inn for a brief stay shortly. He will return with his family later in the season. Other Chicagoans scheduled to enjoy Bob and Lucille Evans' hospitality during the winter are Mr. and Mrs. Bert W. Martin of La Grange, Mrs. W. Irving Osborne of Evanston, Mrs. William Bush of Chicago, the Jeffrey Shorts of Winnetka, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Fenton of Lake Forest, Mr. and Mrs. Peter McHugh of Highland Park, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Ware of Oak Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Owen A. West of Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Loring of Kenilworth, with their two children, are arriving this week at Fred H. Knowles' Spur Cross ranch, 20 miles north of Phoenix in the interesting Cave creek area. The Spur Cross is a working cattle ranch and is increasingly popular with winter visitors anxious for a taste of genuine western ranch life, without too many trimmings. The Lorings are surveying the Cave creek area and projecting a guest ranch operation on their own in collaboration with the well known cowboy entertainer, Romaine Laudermilk.

HEYDAY FOR HIPS

"Hour-glass" figure rules fashion again

FROM liberated Paris came first word of hip-flaunting fashions—this fall, really hitting their stride!

Side draperies, minuscule bustles, panniers, gathers and pleats burgeon out from tiny waistlines to prove that the frankly feminine figure is very fetching indeed.

You don't need Paris or any proof to know that frankly feminine hands are fetching, however. One "fashion" that never changes—hands smoothly groomed, appealingly soft. Protected regularly by exquisite Yardley Hand Cream.

Heard about this wonder-cream? How quickly it absorbs, bringing fragrant relief to roughened palms? Soothes in without a whisper of sticky residue. Feminine even to color—a delightful sherbet-pink, in a generous bottle at just 65c.

If you're as wise on the subject of complexion care as you are about hands, you already know that Yardley also creates cleansing creams meant especially for your personal needs. Example:

YARDLEY LIQUEFYING CLEANSING CREAM—the once-over-nightly of women who know how to cope with an oily skin.

Dirt-burdened pores respond instantly to its businesslike action. And Yardley Liquefying Cleansing Cream tissues-off leaving no greasy film to invite later face disturbances. So do the routine right—with a second coating to double its freshening action. Pay $1 the jar, or $2 for the lasts-for-months size.

Find Yardley creams at your favorite drug or department store—for a fresh lease on smooth loveliness! (Prices quoted plus tax.)

Yardley products for America are created in England and finished in the U. S. A. from the original English formulae, combining imported and domestic ingredients. Yardley of London, Inc., 620 Fifth Avenue, Rockefeller Center, New York 20, N. Y.

Thru the Looking Glass

This is the time of the year to get down to brass tacks about using an all-over skin dressing to keep hand and body skin smooth and comfortable.

Heated rooms and cold winds are no treat even for a hardy skin in this midwestern section, and the only thing to do is to use preparations that protect and soothe the skin against the rigors of the climate.

There's a new hand and body lotion on the market which fills so many needs that you'll find yourself relying on it for all sorts of things. It's a beautiful kind of opalescent pink lotion that glows invitingly thru its gracefully shaped and solidly built glass container, and for all its fragile appearance it's as workmanlike a preparation as any one could want.

The lotion is of a smooth, runny consistency and has the great virtue of being positively nonsticky. After you use it you feel only its good effects and are not reminded of them except by the comfortable feeling of the skin. With this you won't have the sensation that the skin has a gooey kind of coating and can go right on with your dressing or about your tasks without waiting for it to dry.

The lotion makes a wonderful after-bath skin dressing and is an excellent balm for arms and legs which have become sensitive from exposure. Rub it well over elbows and backs of the heels to keep the skin smooth and soft. It won't take but a second to apply, and if used faithfully after each tubbing it will help avoid the chapping, itching, and other distressing winter skin symptoms.

The lotion is the kind of hand care preparation every member of the family will want to use. It's quick as lightining, and just a little dab after each hand washing is all that's necessary to keep skin soft and free of redness. Because it's so fast drying and disappears so readily, you won't have to spend any time at all with it but can dash off about your chores in a second.

You'll find all sorts of uses for the lotion, and the only caution we'd make is that you apply it sparingly. A little goes a long, long way, and even tho it is reasonably priced you can add to the economy by using it wisely.

Many Smart Fur Trimmed Coats Shown

By Rea Seeger

November always has been the month for fur coat and fur trimmed coat buying. In pre-war years the November sales were of paramount importance to all well informed shoppers, but this year, even without exciting sales or special attractions, the fur trimmed coat collections are well worth careful checking and appraisal. A fur trimmed coat is, after all, the backbone of any winter wardrobe, on it depends the success of not only dresses and suits, but the countless costume accessories enjoyed by all American women.

While a dull black foundation winter coat, a black coat trimmed with black fur, still is a classic choice for a superlatively well costumed woman, the black coat trimmed with brown fur, is a close second. It's a particularly smart combination, easy to wear with black or brown dresses and with black or brown hats, gloves, bags, and footwear. Other colors, like red, green, gold, or varying tones of beige, can be worn with agreeable results. With dresses and suits of mixtures of these same colors, a black and brown coat fulfills the same foundation purpose of an all-black model.

This year color is emphasized; not the too theatrical colors, such as hard biting blue, difficult greens, or problem reds, but colors that will blend harmoniously not only with fur, but with dresses and costumes worn under the coat. This means flattering hues, soft and almost universally becoming to every woman, no matter what the color of her complexion and hair. They all are colors that dramatize beautiful furs, both flat and fluffy, and appear as well with dark as with light toned furs. Red coats are of the particular color that complements beige, gray, and black furs.

By far the most dramatic are the tangerine and gold colored fabrics with contrasts of Persian lamb of the unusual markings of civet cat. Deep round cuffs, long tuxedo collars, part of the deep shoulder cape, and unusual band trim of fur, make these coats sensationally successful.

Knee length short coats are high fashion. Considerably shorter coats that swing around the hips are the selections of the young and petite shoppers. Of course the length of any coat depends upon the height of the wearer. However, full length coats are plentiful; they're warmly furred and come in just as many unusual colors and contrasts as any of the shorter coats. The tall woman, the mature woman, or the sophisticated woman, invariably select the full length coat.

Persian lamb makes the most popular and most wearable furs. Persian lamb in ink black deep steel gray, silver gray, cocoa, and dark brown, provide a good choice of shades. Caracul, a more modestly priced fur but similar to Persian lamb, is a second choice. Costly mink and beaver; more reasonably priced nutria; fluffy furs like fox, expensive sables, and the marked furs of leopard, ocelot, and civet cat complete the fur contrasts.

All are to be found in the current showings of lavishly fur trimmed winter coats. Noticeable again are the deliberately collarless winter coats, with the fabric suavely cut and fashioned up around the throat in a snug, warm line.

Sketched are three high fashion coats and one stunning fur trimmed suit costume. They are from one of the smart fur coat collections on display. They will be found in a Chicago shop. For further information call Superior 0200.

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We'll be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Mrs. Ed T., Detroit, Mich.—In the fall when I want to give a deep brown finish to light tan leather articles such as shoes, belts, straps, etc., I rub them with a cloth which I have dipped in ammonia. I am careful to apply ammonia evenly. The result is a nice, dark finish.

Mrs. G. W., Chicago—To keep curtain material from being soiled when hemming it on the machine I attach a pillow case to the outer edge of the machine. As curtains are hemmed they fall into the pillow case, and not on the floor.

A most pleasant surprise awaits the Christmas shoppers who are out early for lounging slippers as gifts. We have uncovered the most delightful array of old fashioned slippers, scuffs, warm fleece lined models reminiscent of "Puss-in-Boots," and a dozen or more styles to suit every type and taste. All are in lovely color ranges and of exceptionally moderate price.

A white satin platform type of boudoir slipper, at top, is edged with soft white bunny fur and lined in red. It has an elastic band at the back and an open toe.

Pale blue gabardine cross banded scuffs, with a platform type of leather sole, are delicately embroidered in gay floral and scroll motifs.

Those warm, cozy bedroom slippers with closed heel and toe are with us again after months of fruitless searching. The soft blue Canadian capeskin slipper, third from top, has a soft padded sole and white piping.

Those marvelously comfortable old fashioned slippers with the high back and cut-out toe are again appearing on the shelves. They are in that favorite black bengaline with contrasting lining. A delicate tracery of colored floss is reminiscent of old Chinese motifs. The soles are the favorite platform type.

Try Making Cough Syrup at Home. Quick Relief

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking.

No matter what you usually use for coughs due to colds, you'll be more than surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and give it a trial. You'll wonder why you never used it before. It certainly does the work in a hurry.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed—it's no trouble at all. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired.

Get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint—a family supply—and gives you about four times as much for your money. It tastes fine, and never spoils. Children love it.

And for quick action, you've never seen its superior. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, eases the soreness, makes breathing easier, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a famous reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Parent's Work for Child Is Act of Faith

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

There are many things which we can almost experience thru imagination even if the actual events or circumstances have not happened to us. But in the fullest sense of the word imagination cannot really work this way in regard to the bearing of a child or children, and the packed years of rearing them.

After you have had some experience in rearing a family you realize that much of your work, your thought, your training, is an act of faith.

It doesn't materialize how and when you expect it to. You put yourself into it so wholeheartedly and yet so often you grow discouraged, so often it seems as tho your efforts aren't bearing any fruit at all. Or it may seem to you as tho other mothers, who don't care as much as you do, get along as well.

An example of this frequently is found in your feeding of the children and your concern about their sleep and other habits. Other children apparently eat any old thing, have irregular hours, and seem to get along very well. But the chances are that this is only seeming, and that the fatness and rosy cheeks that look so fine to you don't mean a thing, or, at least, don't mean that that child will have in the future what your child will have.

Neither you nor any one else can see with the naked eye what is happening in the body—the bones, the teeth, the vital organs. But you know you are feeding your child so that he gets all the elements needed, not only for the present, but for the future growth and developments.

The persistent, careful feeding of children is largely an act of faith. But what I am thinking about applies more to matters less tangible than food, to their training for character, habits, attitudes.

We are apt to be impatient for results in the training of our children. Many of us want almost perfection all along the line.

We may not realize it, but we do. We cannot wait for our own efforts to materialize. You would realize that if you could see some of my mail.

Innumerable letters describe the effort parents have put into rearing their children, the high ideals of character that they have aimed at for them, and then they close by describing their discouragement over the result, sometimes when a little boy may be only 2 or 3 years old or young daughter entering her teens. They simply expect certain finished results when their children are only partially developed.

What is the cause of this disappointment and actual apprehension? It is partly because some of these mothers plant too many bulbs in their garden. They put them in far too early or all at once; bulbs for unselfishness, responsibility, regard for personal appearance, perfection of manners, we'll say, and expect them all to grow, thrive, and blossom.

They expect them to do that all at the same time, too. And if this doesn't happen they think the bulb is dead and their work gone for naught.

But in this they are mistaken. And the reason for the mistake is that a great many parents don't know when nature intends certain qualities of mind, character, disposition, to come to full flower.

It is right, of course, to want your little girl to become a lovely woman and to be nice along the way, just as it is right to want your little boy to grow into a fine man. Thru the years you work toward this end; but it all takes time, and all the qualities you desire will not spring into full flower simultaneously and early, despite your efforts.

You build little by little thru the daily play life of your child, thru the formation of certain physical habits, thru your relationship with him, toward your ideal for him, and if you can only have faith you will see develop in him gradually the qualities you desire.

For instance, you set a good example and subtly guide your child for considerateness, but the 15 month-old baby is just beginning to learn about life, so how can you expect him to be unselfish?

The daughter who, at 8, was your constant companion is not growing away from you and your ideal for her because at 16 she is absorbed in other interests.

The boy of 10 is doing what nature meant for him when he wants to play with other boys, be outdoors all the time, and loses interest in helping you as he did at 4.

Lady of the House

Women must have handed down, cut down, made over, and made do since families began. Cave men may have been ignorant of metals, pottery, and agriculture, but I'll venture cave women somehow recut the pelts the men had worn and with crude bone needles made them into garments for their offspring.

Recently we have gone back to it all on a larger scale than for a considerable time, only we call it "remodeling," or "restyling" the garment.

Perhaps no single item in the family wardrobe has been subject to more diverse useful transformations than men's shirts. With sleeves lopped off and minus collar, the old shirt becomes a "sport" shirt for papa or big brother. French cuffs make excellent, washable hot dish holders that can be stitched up on the machine, complete with rings to hang by, in two minutes or less.

Shirts can be cut down into blouses for mama's and sister's suit; shorts, blouses, dresses, pajamas for the small fry; quilt patches and carpet rags, of course, and so on ad infinitum.

I recall reading in one of my mother's magazines about several things that could be made of an old umbrella. That was really something, since the umbrellas of that day were invariably black—rusty or greenish black when old. But the possibilities in a man's shirt beat the old umbrella by a long way, especially since shirt tails are promising to get back to normal length.

What do you do with old shirts?

November is the brown month of the year, but I like the blustery old fellow. And now before the theme song slows to grave and then adagio, Helen Virden gives us—

Largo

Thru all the woods a feel of death abounds,
I know it from the silence of the birds;
For not a single silver note resounds
Against the awful still; for now their words
Of cheer are gracing warmer woods than these.
The sky is heavy with its unshed tears,
While all around me are the half dead trees
Bent like old men, their branches making biers
For dead and shriveled leaves. The very earth
Is cold as death itself. The winds that sigh
And mourn have lost their sunny, summer mirth;
They seem to know that death is passing by.

I raise a prayer to God who makes it plain
That life and spring will surely come again.

And Molly Johnson calls the dour old fellow a—

Mourner

September smiles while blossoms fade,
Brown October merely sighs,
But from every cave, and hill, and glade
November moans and cries.

But as the winter of the year—and perhaps the winter of life—approaches, Harriet Chandler urges us to keep—

Youth in the Heart

Hold youth within your heart,
Its outward signs will stray;
Love, work, achieve, and dream,
Even tho your hair be gray.
Keep faith within your eyes,
And sweetness in your smiles;
Time has no power to age
The heart which youth beguiles.

Hold youth within your heart,
There it will bless and grace;
Its outer signs are frail,
Time will their charm efface.
Within, like rare old wine,
'Twill stand the test of time.

Gertrude Robb, doing a fascinating children's book on giraffes, with clever sketches, tells us small daughter's description of Pit-Pat's—

Jimmy Giraffe

Jimmy Giraffe came at Christmas time,
To live with this little brother of mine,
And Jimmy Giraffe is the finest toy
That ever was made for a little boy.

Jimmy's mud spattered with many a spot,
His neck is long; his tail is not.
His bony legs move with vigor and vim,
His head sits 'way on the top of him.

Jimmy has ears on his high-up head,
But where they should be he has horns instead.
They're funny and little, and nothing but humps,
And he wrestles so much, he's mostly lumps.

Jimmy's a rascal! He bites my nose,
Jumps into my bed and tickles my toes;
And from back of the chair where grandma sits
Makes noises that frighten her out of her wits.

Goes bumpedy-bump-bump down the stairs,
Plays leap frog over the dining room chairs;
And he lets me help make all the fun,
But he sleeps in Pat's arms when the day is done.

Let us watch the northern skies, and see how much blue and gold is added to the black and white of November nights. M. M.

As our houses grow more fire resistant, so do the accessories inside them. . . . A burnproof cover for an ironing board now comes made of asbestos fabric. . . . This fabric, not so long ago used for military fire-fighting suits, will not burn—tho it may show signs of discoloration if you leave a hot iron on it for a few minutes! . . . Both cover and heavy pad are washable, and made for long life and real service.
